MEANING OF TERMS

USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases, except such as are classified as "Mentioned," are grouped according to the points in the case which they annotate: within these groups they are listed chronologically, except such as are classified as "Referred to," which come at the end of the group and are arranged inter se in chronological order. Cases which annotate the annotated case generally are grouped together after cases which annotate specific points, similarly arranged, and are followed by cases classified as "Mentioned" arranged chronologically inter se. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows:—

- "APPLIED" (Apld.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case.
- "APPROVED" (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.
- "CONSIDERED" (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.
- "DISTINGUISHED" (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.
- "DOUBTED" (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.
- "EXPLAINED" (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.
- "EXTENDED" (Extd.).—Compare "APPLIED," supra.
- "FOLLOWED" (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.
- "NOT FOLLOWED" (N.F.).—Compare "FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.
- "OVERRULED" (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.
- "REFERRED" (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated, and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.
- "MENTIONED" (Mentd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

Part I.—Characteristics of Guarantee.

1. How constituted — General rule.] — (1) A contract of guarantee may under special circumstances be one of those contracts in which uberrima fides is required on the part of the person with whom the contract is made though ordinarily a guarantee is not one of such contracts.

Ordinary contracts of guarantee are not amongst those requiring uberrima fides on the part of the creditor towards the surety, & mere non-communication to the surety by the creditor of facts known to him affecting the risk to be undertaken by the surety will not vitiate the contract, unless there be fraud or misrepresentation. But the difference between these two classes of contract [insurance & guarantee] does not depend upon any essential difference between the word “insurance” & the word “guarantee.” There is no magic in the use of those words. The words, to a great extent, have the same meaning & effect; & many contracts may with equal propriety be called contracts of insurance or contracts of guarantee. Whether the contract be one requiring uberrima fides or not must depend upon its substantial character & how it came to be effected (ROMER, L.J.).

(2) In general, contracts of guarantee are between persons who occupy, or ultimately assume the positions of creditor, debtor, & surety, & thereby the surety becomes bound to pay the debt or make good the default of the debtor. In general the creditor does not himself go to the surety, or represent, or explain to the surety, the risk to be run. The surety often takes the position from motives of friendship to the debtor, & generally not as the result of any direct bargaining between him & the creditor, or in consideration of any remuneration passing to him from the creditor (ROMER, L.J.).—SEATON v. 2. — Promise to pay by surety — Original distinguished from collateral contract.] — Where debt comes only in aid of another, so that there is a remedy against both, it is a collateral promise, & void by Stat. Frauds: otherwise where the whole credit is given to debt.

If two come to a shop, & one buys, & the other, to gain him credit, promises the seller, “If he does not pay you, I will,” this is a collateral undertaking, & void without writing, by Stat. Frauds; but if he says, “Let him have the goods, I will be your paymaster,” or “I will see you paid,” this is an undertaking as for himself, & he shall be intended to be the very buyer, & the other to act but as his servant (per Cur.).

If A. is about to hire a horse from B., & C. (in order to encourage B. to lend the horse) say to him, “Let A. have the horse & I undertake that he shall re-deliver it to you safely,” this is a collateral promise within Stat. Frauds, & void, it not being in writing. — BIRKMYR v. DARNELL (1704), 1 Salk. 27; 91 E. R. 27; sub nom. BIRKMYRE v. DARNELL, Holt, K. B. 606; 6 Mod. Rep. 248; sub nom. BOURKMYRE v. 3. — — — — —.] — Promise that S. will pay such a sum for work to be done. When the work is performed, an indebitatus assumpsit lies against the party promising, for the sum.

There is a difference between a conditional & an absolute undertaking; as if A. promise to pay B. such a sum if C. does not, there A. is but a security for C. But if A. promise that C. will pay such a sum, A. is the principal debtor, for the act done was on his credit & no way upon C. (LEE, J.). — GORDON v. MARTIN (1731), Fitz-G. 302; 2 Barn. K. 5. Nature of transaction—Word “guarantee” not conclusive.—S., who employed E. & Co. as his brokers, & L. & Co. as his general agents, gave E. & Co. the following undertaking: “In consideration of your allowing L. & Co. to draw upon you to the extent of £12,000, & your accepting three drafts accordingly, I hereby guarantee to you that amount; it being distinctly understood, that payment of these drafts is to be provided either by myself, or L. & Co., in direct discountable bills.” E. & Co. accordingly accepted & paid these drafts, in consideration of which they received from S. & L. & Co. various substituted bills. S. & L. & Co. respectively became bkpt., when the substituted bills were still running, & which were not paid when they fell due:—Held: L. & Co. were entitled to prove the commission against S., the balance that was due to them in respect of their advances on the faith of this undertaking, which was not so much a guarantee, as an original undertaking of S. as a principal. Semble: it would have been provable, even though the instrument was considered as a guarantee.

The meaning of the word “guarantee” is to be ascertained from the nature of the instrument in which it is used, as well as from the nature of the transaction between the parties; & the conclusion does not necessarily follow, that the party using the term is merely a surety (SIR G. ROSE).—Re SUDELL, Ex p. SIMPSON (1834), 3 Deac. & Ch. 792; 1 Mont. & A. 511; 3 L. J. Bey. 113, Ct. of R. Annotations.—Mentd. Re Rostron, Ex p. Raleigh (1838), 3 Mont. & A. 670, Abbott v. 6. ————.]—The holder of a policy in A. Co. received a circular stating that it was “dissolved,” & its business & assets had been transferred to B. Co., & that he was entitled to have his policy exchanged for a new one in B. Co., or to have an indorsement by B. Co. on the old policy, “guaranteeing the fulfillment” of the old policy. He accepted the latter alternative, & obtained an indorsement, charging the assets of B. Co. with the payment of the old policy:—Held: he had accepted the liability of B. Co. in lieu of, & not as surety for, that of A. Co.

It is pressed upon me that according to the circular he is entitled to treat that indorsement as a guarantee & not as a novation, an alternative being offered & the word “guarantee” used. I must consider the whole of that letter & I think that the indorsement on the old policy meant the same thing as the taking a new policy. So too, he [the holder] seems at first to have considered & the idea of its being a guarantee is a mere after-thought (MALINS, V.-C.).—*Re INTERNATIONAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY & HERCULES INSURANCE CO., Ex p. 8. ————.]—(1) An arrangement whereby the guarantors of an issue of debentures are released from their guarantee, the interest on the debenture debt is increased, new trustees of the trust deed securing the debentures are appointed, & the sinking fund discontinued, in an “arrangement or compromise” which the ct. has jurisdiction to sanction under Joint-Stock Cos. Arrangement Act, 1870 (c. 104).

(2) A resolution making such an arrangement & carried by the requisite majority at a meeting of the debenture-holders of a co. is binding upon the minority.

(3) Some considerable discussion has taken place as to the nature of this so-called guarantee; is it, or is it not an ordinary contract of suretyship, or is it not rather, although called a guarantee, a policy of insurance against the happening of certain events? If it is necessary to decide the question, in my opinion this document does not embody a mere contract of suretyship. The mere disappearance of the debenture debt would not necessarily destroy the efficiency of the guarantee; but if the resolutions are binding, as defts. say they are, the guarantee would necessarily be gone, because the guarantee is to be of the payment of the money due under these debentures, & the terms of the agreement by which pltf. on this assumption is bound require that he shall accept a debenture without the guarantee. It could not, then, be taken to be an insurance against loss under the fresh debentures, for the debenture-holder is bound to accept them as debentures without guarantees. It was the insurance of the original, & could not be taken to be the insurance of the new debentures (WARRINGTON, J.).—SHAW v. ROYCE, LTD., [1911] 1 Ch. 138; 80 L. J. Ch. 163; 103 L. 9. ———— Form of contract—Insurance policy.—A bank advanced £4,000 upon a mtge. of a public-house. The mtge. deed contained a joint & several covenant by the mtgor. & D. (who, it was recited, “had agreed to join as surety for the mtgor.”) to pay to the bank, on demand by them left at the public-house, the principal & interest, subject to a proviso that D.’s liability should be limited to £1,000; & the deed provided that the power of sale conferred on mtgees. by Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), should be exercisable at any time after such demand without any further notice; & it was also provided & agreed that although, as between the mtgor. & D., D. was only surety for the mtgor., yet, as between D. & the bank, D. should be considered as principal debtor for the whole mtge. debt. The mtge. deed also contained a covenant by the mtgor. to insure the mtge. debt & interest with pltf. co. in the name of the bank. Accordingly a mtge. insurance policy was effected with pltf. co., whereby the co. agreed that, if the bank should become entitled under their power of sale to sell the mtge. premises & should give notice in writing thereof to the co., the co. would after the expiration of six months from the receipt of the notice pay the principal & interest; & it was agreed that thereupon the bank should assign to the co. the mtge. debt & all securities therefor at the time of granting this policy. The co. claimed to recover the £1,000 balance against D.'s estate under the covenant in the mtge. deed:—Held: (1) the policy was not a contract of indemnity, but was a contract of suretyship; (2) upon the true construction of the contract the co. were not co-sureties with D. so as to entitle him to contribution, but were guarantors to the bank against the default of both the mtgor. & D.

(3) The contention is that the very form of the obligation which they had undertaken towards the bank was sufficient to show that the corpn. had entered, not into a contract of suretyship but into a contract of insurance. No doubt the form is that of a policy of insurance but I think there is nothing in the form of the contract being that of a policy of insurance to prevent the contract being one of guarantee (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).—*Re DENTON'S ESTATE, LICENSES INSURANCE CORPN. & GUARANTEE FUND, LTD. v. Deft. orally promised pltf. that, if he, pltf., would accept certain bills for a firm in which deft.'s son was a partner, he, deft., would provide pltf. with funds to meet the bills:—Held: this was a promise of indemnity & not of guarantee, & not required by above sect. to be in writing.

A promise to be liable for a debt conditionally on the principal debtor making default is a guarantee, & is a promise to make good the default of another within the statute. On the other hand, a promise to become liable for a debt whenever the person to whom the promise is made should become liable, is not a promise within Stat. Frauds & need not be in writing (LOPES, L.J.).

There is a plain distinction between a promise to pay the creditor if the principal debtor makes default in payment, & a promise to keep a person who has entered, or is about to enter, into a contract of liability, indemnified against that liability independently of the question whether a third person makes default or not (DAVEY, L.J.).—*GUILD & Co. v. A. co. issued debentures in each of which it promised to pay £100 on Aug. 30, 1910, or upon such earlier day as the principal sum should become payable in accordance with the conditions indorsed thereon, & to pay interest in the meantime. Under the conditions the principal sum became payable on the happening of any one of certain events, as, for instance, default in payment of interest or the winding up of the co. A guarantee society by a policy printed at the foot of each debenture guaranteed to the registered holder thereof payment of the principal sum to become due under the debenture in manner following, namely, if the co. made default in payment of the principal sum or any part thereof the society would pay the amount thereof upon whichever of the days following should first happen, namely, on Aug. 30, 1910, or on the day after the securities for the debenture-holders should have been enforced & completely realised & disturbed. Subsequently the guarantee society entered into a contract with a mtge. insurance co. whereby the latter in consideration of a yearly premium guaranteed the society to the extent of two-elevenths of the risk insured by the society under their policy, & the like proportion of all costs & expenses incurred by the society with the consent of the mtge. insurance co. in respect of any claim arising under the policy. Default was made in payment of the debentures, & in 1909 the society entered into possession of the debenture-holders' securities. Shortly afterwards the society went into liquidation, & after the debenture-holders' securities had been realised & the proceeds distributed there remained a deficiency due to them of £4,988:—Held: (1) the contract between the society & the mtge. insurance co. was a contract of insurance, & the co. was liable to pay to the liquidator of the society two-elevenths of the deficiency of £4,988, & not merely two-elevenths of the dividend payable by the society to the debenture-holders upon that deficiency; (2) even if the contract was a contract of indemnity the mtge. insurance co. would still be liable to the liquidator for two-elevenths of the deficiency.—RE LAW GUARANTEE TRUST & ACCIDENT SOCIETY, LTD., LIVERPOOL MORTGAGE INSURANCE CO.'S CASE, [1914] 2 Ch. 617; 84 L. Co. agreeing, in consideration thereof, to pay & satisfy all claims & demands upon W. Society, when & as the same should successively arise, & to take upon itself all other liabilities of every description of the said society. A. Co. became insolvent in 1869, & therefore unable to fulfil its engagements with W. Society; & W. Society claimed a lien upon the funds & property transferred, for the purpose of satisfying the liabilities of W. Society, which had been thrown back upon it by the failure of A. Co. The particulars of the funds & property transferred, which were vested in trustees, consisted of a lease of a house, of several mtges., & certain re-assurance policies effected by W. Society with other assurance cos. upon lives assured in W. Society. The claim was supported (inter alia) on the ground that W. 15. —]—By an instrument purporting to be a "policy of insurance," it was witnessed that defts. guaranteed to the "assured," pltf., payment of a sum of money deposited by her in a bank in Australia, if the bank should make default in paying the same. The bank made default in payment of the sum deposited. Subsequently to such default a scheme of arrangement between the bank & its creditors was, under the provisions of a statute of the colony, sanctioned by a meeting of creditors & the colonial ct. By this scheme the bank was to be wound up & a new bank constituted, the creditors becoming entitled to certain rights against the new bank in satisfaction of their debts. Pltf. did not assent to this scheme, which, however, was binding upon her by the colonial statute:—Held: defts. remained liable to pltf. under their contract notwithstanding the scheme of arrangement.

The contract in question begins with the words "This policy of insurance." It seems to me clear that the intention was that this contract should be one of insurance & that those who entered into it with pltf. should be in the position of underwriters. An underwriter is not a surety. He is a person who undertakes to pay money in a certain event. The form of a policy is not that of a guarantee. A policy on a ship, for instance, is not an undertaking to pay the amount insured if somebody else, e.g. the owner of another ship that has caused the loss, does not, but to pay such amount on the loss of the ship (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—*DANE v. 19. —As to creditor guaranteed.]—Deft. on occasion of there being a great run upon a banking-house, went to the bank & told the holders of notes issued by the bank, who were waiting for payment, that he had come to a resolution to support the bank with £30,000 at which the holders then present were satisfied,

& said they would take no more money than was necessary, & would keep the rest of their notes till they got again into currency; & afterwards deft. signed the following written paper, "I do hereby authorise G. to assure the inhabitants of P. & its vicinity, that I do hereby undertake to be accountable for the payment of the notes issued by the M. Bank, as far as the sum of £30,000 will extend to pay":—Held: the bank having afterwards stopped payment, deft. was not liable upon this undertaking to an action by an individual holder, who had taken the notes after notice of such undertaking, but before the stoppage.

This is not a case of an individual promise, for there is not any promise to an individual, but only a promise to add £30,000 to the then failing funds

d. Necessity for uberrima fides.]—The principle of uberrima fides does not apply to a contract of guarantee, & the creditor need not inform the intended surety of matters affecting the credit of the debtor, or of any

This is not such an agreement on the part of pltf.s. as the law can enforce. It amounts only to an agreement to treat (POLOCK, C.B.).—WESTHEAD v. SPROSON (1861), 6 H. & N. 728; 30 L. J. Ex. 265; 4 L. T. 408; 7 Jur. N. S. 502; 9 W. R. 695; 158 E. R. 301.

SUB-SECT. 1.—OFFER.

See, generally, CONTRACT, Vol. XII., pp. 53 et seq.

23. What constitutes offer—Construction of document—Not intimation of readiness to treat.—A paper writing was given by deft. to A. (to whose house pltf.s. had declined to furnish goods on their credit alone) to this effect: "I understand A. & Co. have given you an order for rigging, etc., I can assure you, from what I know of A.'s honour & probity, you will be perfectly safe in crediting them to that amount; indeed, I have no objection to guarantee you against any loss from giving them this credit"; which paper was handed over by A. to pltf.s., together with a guarantee from another house, which they required in addition, & the goods were thereupon furnished:—Held: the paper did not amount to a guarantee, there being no notice given by pltf.s. to deft. that they accepted it as such, or any consent of deft. that it should be a conclusive guarantee.

The words [Indeed, I have no objection to guarantee you against any loss from giving them this credit] import that if application were made he would guarantee, but no such subsequent application was made. Considering this as a mere overture to guarantee it appears to us that there should have been a subsequent consent on his part to convert it into a conclusive guarantee (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—M'IVER v. RICHARDSON (1813), 1 M. & S. 557; 105 E. R. 208.

24. — Deft. being desirous of having goods shipped to R. & Co., his agents in India, applied by letter on July 9, 1868, to pltf.s., who were manufacturers of edge tools carrying on business at Sheffield, asking the price of certain tools to be sent out to India to the firm of Messrs. R. & Co. Pltf.s. in reply stated their lists of prices, & that their terms were cash settlement in England within a few weeks. On July 11 deft. wrote to them as follows: "I shall be very glad that you should come to an arrangement with R. & Co. that they should be your agents there; but that requires direct correspondence between you & them. I am quite willing to guarantee the first shipment." The same day pltf.s. enclosed a list of prices, & requested a confirmation of the order, which deft. accordingly sent. The goods, amounting in value to £800, were accordingly shipped to R. & Co. in India. Other shipments followed. The sum of £300 only having been paid by R. & Co. in respect of this first shipment, pltf.s. in July, 1871, wrote to deft., "We sincerely hope it may not be necessary to act upon your letter of July 11, 1868." In two letters which deft. subsequently wrote to pltf. he never disclaimed his liability, but on Sept. 26, 1871, he wrote, "As the event on which I expressed by willingness to guarantee never took place, it never became effective." Messrs. R. & Co. having stopped payment, & there being a sum of £530 still due upon the first shipment of goods, pltf.s. sued deft. upon his guarantee:—Held: there was an express offer of a guarantee & an intimation of acceptance.—SORBY v. GORDON (1874), 30 L. T. 528.

25. Revocable before acceptance.—A guarantee, for the space of twelve months, for the due payment of all such bills as pltf.s. might discount for D. to the extent of £600, may be revoked by a notice given during the twelve months, although some discount may have been made & repaid before notice.

This promise itself creates no obligation. It is, in effect, conditioned to be binding if pltf. acts upon it either to the benefit of defts. or to the detriment of himself. But until the condition has been at least in part fulfilled, defts. have the power of revoking it (ERLE, C.J.).—OFFORD v. DAVIES (1862), 12 C. B. N. S. 748; 31 L. J. C. P. 319; 6 L. T. 579; 9 Jur. 26. Must be made to creditor.—Pltf. let a house to J. on her sending him a letter addressed to her by deft. saying he would undertake to be responsible for the rent:—Held: there was no agreement between pltf. & deft.—NASH v. SPENCER (1896), 13 T. L. R. 78.

He also proved that W. rented certain premises from him:—Held: this was not sufficient, without showing that pltf. accepted deft.'s offer.—SYMMONS v. WANT (1818), 2 Stark. 37, N. P.

30. ——Guarantee in the following form: "F. informs me that you are about publishing an arithmetic for him. I have no objection to being answerable as far as £50; for my reference apply to B." Signed "G. T." B. wrote this memorandum, & added "Witness to G. T.—J. B." It was forwarded by B. to pltf., who never communicated their acceptance of it to G. T. In an action against the latter on the guarantee: Held: pltf. not proving any notice of acceptance to deft., were not entitled to recover.—MOZLEY v. TINKLER (1835), 1 Cr. M. & R. 692; 1 Gale, 11; 5 Tyr. 416; 149 E. R. 1258; sub nom. MORLEY v. TINKLER, 4 L. J. Ex. 84.

31. ——R., a nephew of deft., being indebted to pltf., deft. wrote a series of letters to pltf., on which pltf. relied to prove the guarantee on which the action was brought. In the first, on Nov. 8, 1861, he wrote, "I have no doubt I can send R. money to pay on Tuesday next, Nov. 12; just give him time, & I will see you don't lose a shilling by him." On Dec. 6 he wrote, saying: "I really don't know what to do for the best, but something shall be done so that you shall have your money; I hope I shall be able to get some in, & discharge your bill as soon as possible; you shall hear from me this day week, without fail. I have been disappointed; but you shall be paid." On Feb. 8, 1862, he wrote: "I received a letter from your solr., requesting payment of £25. You are aware that this is all loss to me. I am sorry to say I am still liable to other claims upon me; under these circumstances I hope you will be as favourable as you can. I think, if I make an effort to pay £15 to you for my release from this transaction, I will do so at once, as you will then have R. to sue for the balance":—Held: the above letters were mere unaccepted proposals, & did not constitute a sufficient promise, binding within the terms of Stat. Frauds.

When a guarantee is given for the debt of another person, it is accepted by the party to whom it is given, the consideration for it being an agreement by him to forbear payment for the required time; but there was nothing of that sort here (CHANNELL, B.).—NEWPORT v. SPIVEY (1862), 1 New Rep. 30; 7 L. T. 328.

33. ——Consistent with offer.]—Pltf. declared that, in consideration that they would lend to S. & Co. £5,000, deft. promised to be answerable for the same; that they did lend the said sum, whereby deft. became liable. The form of the guarantee was, that deft. would be answerable to the extent of £5,000 for the use of the house of S. & Co. At the time this was given, S. & Co. were indebted to pltf. in a considerable sum of money, for which pltf. held a promissory note, drawn by S. & Co., & other bills, as a security. On receiving the guarantee, pltf. cancelled the note, & delivered up the bills which they held. S. & Co. then delivered those bills back again to pltf., together with a new promissory note, but no money passed:—Held: the guarantee only contemplated future loans, & the transaction did not amount to a loan of money so as to charge deft.

The proper & obvious course would have been an advance of so much money leaving the past transactions as they were. The several transactions do not amount to a loan & advance of money so as to satisfy the words of the declaration as between the parties themselves, & still less so as against deft., applying the principles of law she is entitled to have applied in the construction of the engagement into which she has entered (DALLAS, J.).—GLYN v. HERTEL (1818), 8 Taunt. 208; 2 Moore, C. P. 134; 129 E. R. 363.

Compare No. 20, ante.

34. ——No dissent within reasonable time.]—In an action for goods sold deft. pleaded that deft. & M. had agreed with pltf. that M. should give a guarantee for payment of the debt by instalments, & that the guarantee was given & was accepted by pltf., in satisfaction. Replication, denying the agreement, & denying that pltf. had accepted the guarantee in satisfaction. It appeared that, before the bringing of the action L., who was pltf.'s attorney on the record, had written to deft. for payment of the debt, & it was proposed to give evidence of what L. had said after he has so written & before the action. Such evidence was held not receivable without further proof of the agency of L. It was afterwards proved by L. that M. had asked him to propose to pltf. to accept his guarantee, & that L. having consented to do so, M. signed a guarantee, which was on the next day sent by L. to pltf., who kept it three weeks & then returned it:—Held: if pltf. did not return the guarantee within a reasonable time they must be taken to have accepted it, & that unexplained—three weeks was an unreasonable time; & if M. was worth nothing, & was a mere man of straw, that fact would make no difference on these pleadings, as pltf. had not replied fraud, but had denied that they had accepted the guarantee.

A guarantee given by B., a tradesman to A., another tradesman, for the faithful services of C., a traveller, to be employed by A., is not an act done in the way of the ordinary business of B., within the above Act.

41. Acceptance induced by fear—Validity.]— A son carried to bankers of whom he, as well as his father, was a customer, certain promissory notes with his father's name upon them as indorser. These indorsements were forgeries. On one occasion the father's attention was called to the fact that a promissory note of his son with his (the father's) name on it, was lying at the bankers dishonoured. He seemed to have communicated the fact to the son, who immediately redeemed it; but there was no direct evidence to show whether the father did or did not really understand the nature of the transaction. The fact of the forgery was afterwards discovered; the son did not deny it; the bankers insisted (though without any direct threat of a prosecution) on a settlement, to which the father was to be a party; he consented, & executed on agreement to make an equitable mtge. of his property. The notes, with the forged indorsements, were then delivered up to him:—Held: the agreement was invalid.

A father appealed to, under such circumstances, to take upon himself a civil liability, with the knowledge that, unless he does so, his son will be exposed to a criminal prosecution, with a moral certainty of a conviction, even though that is not put forward by any party as the motive for the agreement, is not a free & voluntary agent, & the agreement he makes under such circumstances is not enforceable in equity.

A contract to give security for the debt of another, which is a contract without consideration is, above all things, a contract that should be based upon the free & voluntary agency of the individual who enters into it (LORD WESTBURY).—WILLIAMS v. The husband, who had business relations with the judgment debtor, procured his wife's signature to the promissory note, the jury finding that the transaction was sufficiently explained to her & that she knew that the document she was signing was a promissory note, & that she also knew that she was incurring a possible liability for the benefit of the judgment debtor in so signing; they also found that her signature was procured by the influence of her husband, but could not agree as to whether it was procured by his undue influence. Default having been made by the judgment debtor in payment of the instalments of the promissory note, the present action was brought against the husband & wife to recover the balance of the instalments of the promissory note. The husband allowed judgment to go by default:—Held: notwithstanding the absence of independent advice, the wife was liable upon the promissory note.

No express authority was conferred on him to sign or accept bills or promissory notes on behalf of the co. He was desirous of entering into a contract with L. for the supply of ox-tongues to the co. in South America. L. refused to enter into a contract unless a guarantee was given by some third person, &, at the request of H., S. agreed to give the required guarantee, which he did by depositing £1,000 in a bank to the order of L. As a counter-security to S., H. gave him a promissory note for £1,000, signed by him "in representation of" the co. The co. made default in carrying out the provisions of the contract with L. &, under a power contained in it, he forfeited the deposit, which was paid over to him by the bank. No goods were supplied to the co. under the contract. The co. never recognised the promissory note, & it was dishonoured at maturity. The co. being in liquidation, S. claimed to prove in the winding up upon the note:—Held: it not being shown that the giving of the note was necessary for the carrying on of the business of the co., or that it was in the ordinary course of the business of such a co., the note was not binding upon the co., & the claim in respect of it could not be admitted.—Re CUNNINGHAM & CO., LTD., SIMPSON'S CLAIM (1887), 36 Ch. At the same time three of the directors guaranteed to the wagon co. the payment of the rent. The wagon co. brought an action against the railway co. & the sureties for non-payment of rent due :—Held : the transaction was not a borrowing of money, but a bonâ fide sale & hiring of the rolling-stock, & was valid both against the railway co. & the sureties.—*YORKSHIRE RAILWAY WAGON CO. v. 69. —.]—An engagement by A. to answer the draft of B. for payment of a debt due from B. to C., no draft having been drawn by B., & no communication of the transaction between A. & B. having been made to C., raises no equity in C. to recover the amount of the debt from A.

The owner of a ship proposed to his agent, to whom he was indebted on account, to transfer the ship to him, provided the agent would answer the owner's draft for the amount of the repairs, in respect of which the owner was indebted to a third person not named. The ship was, in pursuance of this proposal, transferred to the agent, & the vendor afterwards became bkpt., without having drawn upon the purchaser & without any communication of the terms of the purchase having been made to the creditor to whom the vendor was indebted for the repairs:—Held: there was no consideration between the purchaser & the vendor's creditor to entitle the latter to recover from the purchaser the amount of the repairs.—*RATTENBURY v. 70. —.]—Part consideration.]—A declaration stated that two actions had been brought, one by pltf. against M. the other by W. against deft., in the latter of which the record was entered for trial. It then stated an agreement between pltf., deft., & W. that the record in that case should be withdrawn, W. to pay his own costs, as well as the costs out of pocket of the attorney for deft. in that action; in consideration whereof, & in consideration that pltf. would give time to M. for payment of £115, the sum agreed by the parties to be the amount of debt & costs, deft. promised to guarantee the payment of such debt & costs. Breach, that although pltf. did give time to M., etc., deft. refused to guarantee:—Held: on general demurrer, this declaration disclosed a sufficient consideration for deft.'s promise.

A promise to pay where there is no debt, & the party to whom the promise is made knows it, or where there are merely disputes respecting an alleged debt, may not be founded upon a sufficient consideration; but here is an agreed debt, payment of which deft. promises to guarantee on time being given. That is clear enough (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).

The agreement to give time is a consideration proceeding from pltf., & it is not necessary that the whole consideration should proceed from him (PATTESON, J.).—HODSON v. LEE (1847), 9 L. T. O. S. 312.

(her husband), "I do hereby guarantee to you the sum of £500. This guarantee is to continue in force for the period of six years & no longer":—Held: the guarantee was limited to goods actually supplied to the husband after it was given.

When we look at the document, we find that the expressed consideration is really no consideration at all; the agreement to supply goods at C.'s request was no consideration, for there was no obligation on pltf. to supply any goods. But when the request was complied with, & the goods actually supplied, then a consideration arose (BAGGALLAY, L.J.).

A declaration upon this guarantee stated that pltf., confiding in the promise of deft., afterwards supplied S. with goods to the amount of £85 10s. 9., & that, although the credit had expired, S. had not paid for them, of which the deft. had notice; & alleged for breach, the non-payment of the amount by deft., on request:—Held: the guarantee disclosed a sufficient consideration, & the declaration was good on general demurrer.

At the trial it occurred to me that a mere illusory dealing would not satisfy the guarantee, & I left it to the jury to say whether or not the dealings had been bond fide continued. The jury having found a verdict for pltf., the ct. held that the guarantee disclosed a sufficient consideration for the payment as well of the past as of the future debt, & that the declaration was good. So, here, I think that a sufficient consideration is disclosed on the face of the guarantee, & that it imports that the continued supply should be bond fide & to a reasonable extent (CRESSWELL, J.).—WHITE v. (2) In an action upon this guarantee, the declaration stated, that, at the time it was given, D. was indebted to pltf. in £16 for goods sold, & which sum was then payable; that pltf. had sold other goods to D., to the amount of £50, at a credit which had not yet expired; that D. had applied to pltf. for an extension of credit in respect of both debts, & also for a further supply of goods on credit, which pltf. had consented to do on receiving deft.'s guarantee; that deft., in consideration of the premises, gave pltf. the guarantee above set out; & that D. made default, etc.:—Held: on special demurrer, the declaration sufficiently showed that the consideration for the guarantee was future credit, & was therefore good.

(3) Evidence is admissible in an action on such a guarantee to show that it was intended to apply to future credit.—EDWARDS v. JEVONS (1849), 8 C. B. 436; 19 L. J. C. P. 50; 14 L. T. O. S. 178; 14 Jur. 131; 137 E. R. 579.

I am, etc." To M., etc.:—Held: the promise was prima facie a promise to pay for goods to be supplied.

There had been considerable dealings between A. & C. prior to the date of the guarantee, consisting of loans of money, payments made for, & goods supplied to C. by A., the credit upon which had not then expired, & those dealings had been to a small extent since continued:—Held: the guarantee disclosed a sufficient consideration, for the payment as well of the past as of the future debt.—*JOHNSTON v. 101. — — —.]—The declaration on a guarantee stated that R. kept an account with a banking co., & was indebted to them in £800 for money advanced by them to him, & that it was proposed that they should advance to R. more money; & thereupon an agreement was entered into between the co. & defts., & signed by defts., as follows:—"We, the undersigned, hereby indemnify (the co.) to the extent of £1,000, advanced or to be advanced to R., but the said indemnity to cease when the said R. shall have paid the sum of £1,000 to the credit of his account." The evidence was, that, at the time the guarantee was given, £1,400 was due from R. to the co. for money already advanced:—Held: the guarantee, construed with reference to the facts existing at the time it was given, did not disclose a good consideration, & if the preliminary averments in the declaration were to be taken as a statement of part of the consideration, they were put in issue by non assumpsit, & were not proved.

The words "advanced, or to be advanced" might fairly admit of the construction that future as well as past advances were meant; but the facts show that at the time this guarantee was given there was a debt of £1,400 due to the bank from R. & there is nothing upon the face of the instrument, & certainly nothing when the state of account between the bank & R. is looked at, to show that the parties contemplated a security for future advances to the extent of £1,000 (WILDE, C.J.).—(BELL v. WELCH (1850), 9 C. B. 154; 19 L. J. C. P. 184; 14 L. T. O. S. 397; 14 Jur. 432; 137 E. R. 851.

The husband being indebted to his bankers on the balance of an account current, the married woman deposited the bond with the bankers, with a letter signed by her, to the effect that, in consideration of the bankers paying, or having already paid, the cheques of the husband, or otherwise advancing him sums of money, she thereby guaranteed the repayment thereof; & that she deposited as a collateral security the bond which she undertook to assign to the bankers, on request:—Held: the consideration was sufficient, & the separate life interest of the wife was effectually charged; but the letter not having been executed & attested as required by the power, the ct. would not, under the circumstances, give effect to it as an appointment.—(*THACKWELL v. This guarantee to include all bills of exchange now running as well as the balance of account at this day." It appeared that at the time of the giving of the guarantee there were bills running & an account due from E. to B., & future dealings between the parties were contemplated:—Held: (1) the guarantee extended to future as well as to past transactions; (2) the principle of construction ut res magis valeat quam pereat applied.—(*BROOM v. in pursuance of such agreement, pltf. supplied timber to the amount of £153 10s. 1d. to F.; that afterwards, & whilst the timber was unpaid for, & before the period of six months from the date of the sale had elapsed, pltf. became dissatisfied with such guarantee so given by W. & D.; & thereupon by another agreement between pltf. & deft., after reciting the guarantee, that pltf. had delivered timber to the value of £153 10s. 1d., & that pltf. was not satisfied with such guarantee, deft., at the request of W. & D., in consideration of the premises, & of pltf. forbearing to take any proceedings against W. & D., guaranteed to pltf. payment of the sum of £153 10s. 1d. on Dec. 13, then next. Breach, that, although pltf. had done all things on his part to entitle him to be paid by deft. the said sum of £153 10s. 1d., deft. had not paid the same, or any part thereof. Fourth plea, that pltf. had done everything on his part to entitle him to be paid by deft. the sum of £153 10s. 1d., inasmuch as he, pltf., did not forbear to take the proceedings in the declaration mentioned against W. & D., but, on the contrary, took such proceedings before Dec. 13, next after the making of the alleged agreement:—Held: on motion in arrest of judgment, pltf.'s forbearance to sue W. & D. before the day named, was a condition precedent to his right of action against deft. on the guarantee.

Be good enough to arrange something by to-morrow." Deft. in reply: "I undertake to pay £500 on the account between my late brother, H., & your client on or before this day three weeks." Pltf. did not expressly agree to forbear suing, but did in fact forbear for three weeks:—Held: the correspondence together with pltf.'s actual forbearance for three weeks to sue, constituted a good & binding promise to pay on the part of deft.

It is true that pltf. did not expressly agree to forbear suing for three weeks, but he did in fact forbear, & that, to me, independently of all authority appears to be a good consideration for deft.'s promise to pay (KELLY, C.B.).—WYNNE v. HUGHES (1873), 21 W. R. 628.

119. — — — — —]—A request to the creditor of another person, express or implied, to forbear suing the debtor, followed by forbearance, is good consideration for the promise of the person making the request to pay the debt, although there is no binding agreement to forbear.

Deft., in order to induce pltf. to give time to his father for the payment of a debt due from his father to pltf., made, together with his father, a joint & several promissory note, whereby they promised to pay pltf. on demand the amount of the debt, with interest thereon half-yearly. Afterwards pltf. forbore to demand payment of the debt for several years:—Held: in an action upon the promissory note, a request by deft. to give time was implied, there was a good consideration for the note by deft., & he was liable on it.

If at the request of the guarantor the creditor does in fact forbear there is sufficient consideration to bind the guarantor. It was argued that the request to forbear must be express. But it seems to me that the question whether the request is express or is to be inferred from the circumstances is a mere question of evidence. If a request is to be implied from the circumstances, it is the same as if there were an express request (LORD ESHER, M.R.). —CREARS v. HUNTER (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 311; 57 L. T. 551; 35 W. #### (b) Sufficiency of Right of Action.

See, generally, CONTRACT, Vol. XII., p. 195.

121. How far necessary—General rule.]—Where pltf. declared that A., since deceased, was indebted to him so much, & that after his death, in consideration of the premises, & that he, at the instance of deft., would forbear & give day of payment of the debt (not stating to whom he was to forbear) deft. promised, etc.:—Held: on demurrer to be no consideration for the promise; for a promise can only be sustained on a consideration of benefit to deft. or of detriment to pltf.: & unless there were some person whom pltf. could have sued for his debt his forbearance was no detriment to him.

It is not entitled to the name of forbearance, unless you show something or somebody to be forborne. If there be a right which can be enforced against anybody, no doubt that a promise to forbear is a good consideration, but if there be no person liable, how is it entitled to the name or quality of forbearance? (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).

How does pltf. show any damage to himself by forbearing to sue, when there was no fund which could be the object of the suit; where it does not appear that any person in rerum natura was liable to be sued by him? No right can exist in this vague, abstract, & indefinite way. Right is a correlative term; there must be some object of right, some object of suit, some party who in respect of some fund, or some character known in the law, is liable. Otherwise there cannot be said to be any right. Has there been then, any suspension of pltf.'s right? Now, unless a right is capable of being exercised, unless it can be put into force, there can be no suspension of it. And that it could have been exercised or put in force, but for the promise made by deft. was not shown. Then what forbearance is shown? It must be a forbearance of a right which may be enforced with effect (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.). —JONES v. ASHBURNHAM (1804), 4 East, 455; 1 Smith, K. B. 188; 102 E. R. 905.

for this cause the declaration is void, for it is only to avoid molestation. "Give me time." etc., this is no good assumpsit, for forbearance is no ground of action where he hath no cause to have debt (DODERIDGE, J.).

Held: the declaration was good, the consideration of forbearance being sufficient whether there was any well founded claim or not, & although it was not alleged that debt. was a member of the co. or that the actions related to the affairs of the co. Plff., at the trial, proved the following agreement in writing: "Plff. having, at my request, consented to suspend proceedings against A., I do hereby, in consideration thereof, personally promise to pay £30 on account of the debt on Apr. 1."—Held: the consideration for the promise was sufficient, because it must be taken as a consent to suspend proceedings, at least, until Apr. 1.—PAYNE v. WILSON (1827), 7 B. & C. 423; 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 708; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 107; 108 E. R. 781.

We further agree to guarantee the payment to you within eighteen months from this date, by the co. or the liquidator thereof, of the principal of your debt of £722." In an action on the second branch of the guarantee:—Held: the consideration applied to both promises; the consideration was the withdrawal of the then pending petition, & not the forbearing for eighteen months to proceed with any petition to wind up the co.; & such a consideration was sufficient to support the promise.

mortgaged his shares to pltf. In 1883 the co. & shareholders threatened an action against G. in respect of alleged misrepresentations as to the value of property sold by G. to the co. G. signed a letter guaranteeing that certain dividends should be earned & paid by the co. during ninety years, or that he would pay the deficiency. The co. & shareholders thereupon abandoned their intention (if any) of suing G. Pltf. having brought an action against the co. & G., claiming a first charge on G.'s shares, the co. pleaded their articles & G.'s undertaking. The trial judge was of opinion on the evidence that, though no case of misrepresentation by G. was shown, yet the consideration for his undertaking, though not expressed, was that the threatened proceedings against him should not be taken, & that the consideration for G.'s undertaking was sufficient, whether the co. had reasonable grounds for their threatened action or not, if they were acting bonâ fide. On appeal:—Held: the compromise of the threatened claim, whether good in law or not, if made bonâ fide, would have been a sufficient consideration for the guarantee; but the evidence did not show a binding contract to compromise the threatened litigation.—*MILES v. At the date of the guarantee J & K. were indebted to O. in the sum of £513. No definite time mentioned—Whether presumption of reasonable time.]—(1) A declaration stated, that L. made his promissory note payable to pltf.: that the note being in pltf.'s hands overdue & unpaid, in consideration that pltf. would forbear & give time to L. for payment of the note, to wit, for a reasonable time, deft. promised to pay the note, in case L. should make default. It then alleged that L. made default, & that deft. did not pay the amount of the note. Plea, non assumpsit. At the trial it appeared that deft., having agreed to guarantee the payment of the note by L., indorsed on the back thereof as follows: "I guarantee the payment of the within note by L., the maker, on Nov. 2 next." On that day, the note being due & dishonoured, deft. signed the following memorandum, addressed to pltf.:—"Sir, I request you will hold over the promissory note in your favour, of L., dated July 31, 1844, for £200, at three months, & in consideration of your so doing, I undertake to continue in all respects my guarantee of the same."—Held: the guarantee was defective; & there was no evidence to support the declaration.

SUB-SECT. 4. CONSIDERATION BASED ON ILLEGAL TRANSACTIONS.

146. Fraud on bankruptcy laws—Concealment of assets.—A promise made by a friend of the bkpt. when he was on his last examination, that, in consideration that the assignees & comrs. would forbear to examine him touching certain sums which he was charged with having received & not accounted for, he would pay such sums as the bkpt. had received & not accounted for:—Held: void, as being against the policy of the bkpey. laws.

Qu: if the creditors had consented to the agreement, whether that would have varied the case.

In order to found a consideration for a promise, it is necessary that the party by whom the promise is made should have the power of carrying it into effect, and secondly that the thing to be done should in itself be legal. The consideration for this promise is void on both these grounds. The assignees have no right to control the discretion of the comrs., & it would be criminal in them to enter into such an agreement, because it is their duty to examine the bkpt. fully, & the creditors may call on them to perform it (ASHHURST, J.).—NEROT v. WALLACE (1789), 3 Term Rep. 17; 100 E. R. 432.

147. — Concealment of indebtedness.—Assumpsit on debt.'s guarantee for a debt due from S. to plff., the promise alleged being that, if plff. would give S. a written acknowledgment that plff. had no legal claim on S., debt. would be answerable for the amount, with an averment that plff. wrote & sent such acknowledgment to S. Plea, that S. was a trader within the Bkpey. Acts, & a prisoner in execution for debt, owing £300 & upwards, & was desirous of petitioning the Ct. of Bkpey. for an interim order of protection under Execution Act, 1814 (c. 90), s. 6, & in support of such petition, of falsely representing himself to the ct. as owing less than £300: & that debt., at the request of S., gave the guarantee above stated, with the intent, on the part of S. & debt., that S. should be the better able falsely to make such representation; averment, that plff. knew the corrupt purpose for which the guarantee was given, & with such knowledge, accepted it, & assented to write the acknowledgment for the purpose of aiding S. in making the false representation, etc. Replication, de injuria:—Held: debt. was entitled to a verdict on the evidence; & plff. was not entitled to judgment non obstante veredicto.—COLES v. STRICK (1850), 15 Q. B. 2; 117 E. R. 358.

148. — Where agreement to pay creditors in full—Whether fraud committed.—A covenant by a friend of a bkpt. to pay all his creditors their full debts in consideration that they will not proceed any further under the commission, is good in law.

This seems to be a fair agreement & not contrary to the policy of the bkpey. laws. The object of those laws is to have an equal distribution of the bkpt.'s effects among his creditors: that will not be defeated by a friend of the bkpt. undertaking, with the consent of all the parties concerned (not to divide among the creditors a fund which was probably insufficient for that purpose, but) to pay every creditor his full debt (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—KAYE v. BOLTON (1795), 6 Term Rep. 134; 101 E. R. 474.

149. — Fraudulent preference.—Bond to secure to one creditor the deficiency of a composition, not communicated to the other creditors, decreed to be delivered up, with costs, though to particeps criminis; in these cases, proceeding upon public policy, the relief being given on account, not of the individual, but of the public.—JACKMAN v. WALLER (1829), 3 Y. & J. 212; 148 E. R. 1156.

151. ———.]—A., being about to compound with his creditors, in order to induce B., one of them, to execute the deed, without the knowledge of the other creditors gave him two promissory notes for £25 each beyond the amount of the composition. Upon the first of these becoming due it was dishonoured, & an action was brought upon it, & judgment obtained & execution issued. C., who was a party to the notes, in consideration of A.'s forbearing to enforce the judgment, gave him a guarantee for the amount of the judgment & the outstanding note; & thereupon the two notes were given up:—Held: the guarantee was tainted with the original fraud, & could not be enforced, notwithstanding part of the consideration for it was the giving up a judgment in an action in which the illegality might have been but was not pleaded.—*CLAY v. This transaction took place after the customer had commenced proceedings for the liquidation of his affairs, & unknown to his other creditors, with a view to prevent the bank from opposing a composition. On a bill filed by the banker to enforce performance of the agreement:—Held: the arrangement, which would have the effect of giving one creditor a secret advantage over the others, could not be sustained, and the bill must be dismissed with costs.—McKewan v. SANDERSON (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 65; 41 L. J. Ch. 447; 32 L. T. 385; 23 W. R. 607.

154. Evasion of excise.—[A. B., & C. entered into an agreement by which A. contracted to let & B. to take certain rooms belonging to A. a licensed victualler, & within premises for which A. was licensed. C. guaranteed the payment of the rent, etc., by B. To an action on the agreement by A. against C. on default of payment by B., C. pleaded that the agreement was made for the express purpose, object and intent of enabling B. to use the said rooms so as to evade the law of excise:—Held: the plea was a sufficient answer to the action, the agreement being void for illegality.—RITCHIE v. SMITH (1818), 6 C. B. 462; 3 New Mag. Cas. 54; 18 L. J. C. P. 9; 12 L. T. O. S. 148; 12 J. P. 822; 13 Jur. 63; 136 E. R. 1320.

155. Stifling prosecution.—[In an action on a bond in the penal sum of £1,100, the declaration charged that the bond was given by deft. to plffs., as trustees of a friendly society, subject to a condition thereunder written, whereby, after reciting that certain moneys to the amount of £1,400 were stated to be owing from S., to plffs., as such trustees, & it had been agreed that deft. should secure to plffs. the sum of £700, part of such debt, the condition of the bond was declared to be, etc., & averred that deft. had not paid the said £700 or the said penalty. Plea 2. That S. had been treasurer of the said society & there was a deficiency in his accounts as such treasurer of a sum of £1,700, & the said trustees had caused a warrant to be issued for his apprehension, with a view to proceed criminally against him for an alleged felony in respect of the said money, & thereupon it was agreed between the said trustees & deft. that, instead of proceeding criminally against the said S., the trustees should accept payment of £1,000 in cash, in part of such deficiency, & take deft.'s bond for £1,400 as security for payment of £700, other part of such deficiency, & the bond in the declaration mentioned was delivered & accepted by the trustees, in pursuance of the said illegal agreement, & upon & for no other consideration. Plea 3. As a defence on equitable grounds, deft. repeated the allegations in plea 2, to the effect that S. had been treasurer of the said society, & that there was a deficiency of a large sum in his accounts, in respect of which the trustees alleged that he had committed a felony, & had caused a warrant to be taken out for his apprehension; & further, that the said bond was executed & delivered by deft. to plffs. as such trustees, upon & subject to certain terms & condition then agreed upon between the said trustees & deft. & other persons, on behalf of S., i.e., upon the terms & conditions that all prosecution of S. by the society or by any of its members should cease. Deft. alleged that all prosecutions of S. did not cease, but, on the contrary, he was prosecuted by two members of the said society, & tried & acquitted of the several charges preferred against him. Averment, that all things happened to entitle him in equity to an unconditional injunction to restrain plffs., as such trustees, from suing on the said bond. On demurrer:—Held: the pleas were good, in answer to the action on the bond as showing an illegal agreement to stifle a prosecution.—CANNON v. RANDS (1870), 23 L. T. 817; 11 Cox, C. C. 631.

156. —[The secretary of a building society who had made default & was threatened by the society with a prosecution for embezzlement, applied for assistance to plffs., & they gave a written undertaking to the society to make good the greater part of the debt due from the secretary, the expressed consideration being the forbearance of the society to sue the secretary for the amount for which plffs. made themselves responsible, & in pursuance of that undertaking they gave two promissory notes to the society. Plffs. in giving the undertaking were actuated by the desire to prevent the prosecution, & this was known to the directors of the society: Held: it was an implied term of the agreement that there should be no prosecution, the agreement was founded on an illegal consideration & void, & the promissory notes ought to be set aside.—JONES v. MERIONETH PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, [1892] 1 Ch. 173; 61 L. J. Ch. 138; 65 L. T. 685; 40 W. R. 273; 8 T. L. R. 133; 36 Sol. Jo. 108; 17 Cox, C. C. 389, C. A.; affy., [1891] 2 Ch. 587.

164. Verbal guarantee enforced by court—Undertaking by solicitor.]—Even supposing the undertaking to be void by Stat. Frauds this ct. may, nevertheless, exercise a summary jurisdiction over one of its own officers, an attorney of the ct. The undertaking was given by the party in his character of attorney, & in that character the ct. may compel him to perform it. An attorney is consunt of the law; & if he give an undertaking which he must know to be void, he shall not be allowed to take advantage of his own wrong, & say that the undertaking cannot be enforced (per CUR.).—Re GREAVES (1827), 1 Cr. & J. 374, n.; 1 Dowl. at p. 468; 118 E. 170. Money paid under verbal guarantee not recoverable.]—The agent for the grantee of several annuities delivered him four accounts in the course of eighteen months, & gave him credit for all the half-yearly instalments of the several annuities then due, but stated that some of them had not been received. He charged commission on all the instalments, & paid the balance of the accounts as if they had been received, & in the later accounts never brought forward those sums, nor intimated that he expected them to be repaid:—Held: upon this evidence the jury were properly told by the judge, that they might infer an agreement whereby the agent made himself personally responsible for the payment of those annuity instalments in default of payment by the grantors.—*SHAW v. ### B. "Any Special Promise."

171. Indemnity implied by law.—Pltf. repaired certain leasehold premises held by deft. under a covenant to repair, on a parol promise by deft. to assign him his lease.—Held: deft., upon refusal to assign, was liable on an implied assumpsit to pay pltf. for such repairs.

Deft. has expended this money for the benefit, & at the instance of deft.; the law will therefore imply a promise not touched by the statute [Stat. Frauds, s. 4], nor within the danger of perjury guarded against by it; the agreement is executed on the part of pltf. & deft. is legally liable to remunerate him for what he has done (BEST, C.J.).—GRAY v. HILL (1826), 1 Ky. & M. 420, N. P.

172. Promise to procure signature to guarantee.—(1) Pltfs., owners of a ship hired on charter-party by S., refused to let her sail till certain disputes about the freight between them & S. were settled, by S. giving security: whereupon deft., in consideration that pltfs. would let S. sail without giving security, undertook to get M. to sign the guarantee hereunder set forth, & deliver it to pltfs. in a week:—Held: this was not an undertaking for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another, within Stat. Frauds.

(2) The guarantee to be signed by M. was as follows:—"Whereas S. has hired your ship for six months from July 12, 1830, & such longer time as his intended voyage may require, & has paid or secured the freight for six months, from Aug. 20, 1830, & is about to leave England, I guarantee the payment of freight which shall accrue for any portion of the voyage after the six months:—"Held: an undertaking within Stat. Frauds, & insufficient for want of a consideration apparent on the face of it; & consequently that only nominal damages could be recovered against deft. for failing to procure M.'s signature, according to his promise.—BUSHELL v. BEAVAN (1834), 1 Bing. N. C. 103; 4 Moo. & S. 622; 3 L. J. C. P. 279; 131 E. R. 1056.

173. Promise to give guarantee.—Pltf. had contracted to supply goods to C. & Co. to be paid for in cash on each delivery. C. & Co. being desirous of obtaining the goods at a month's credit instead of cash, deft., who had an interest in the performance of the work upon which the goods were to be used, promised pltf. that, if he would supply the goods to C. & Co., drawing upon them at one month, & would allow him, deft., 3 per cent. upon the amount of the invoice, he would pay pltf. cash, & take C. & Co.'s bill "without recourse," in other words, buy the bill of him:—Held: this was a contract to answer for the debt or default of another, within Stat. Frauds, s. 4.—MALLET v. BATEMAN (1805), L. R. 1 C. P. 163; Har. & Ruth. 109; 35 L. J. C. P. 40; 13 L. T. 410; 12 Jur. N. S. 122; 14 W. R. 225, Ex. Ch. Annotation.—Reid. Davys v. Buswell, [1913] 2 K. B. 47.

174. Promise to allow retention of salary.—H., who was agent for pltfs., being desirous of retiring, deft. applied for the agency. H. was indebted to pltfs., & also claimed a commission for introducing customers. It was agreed that pltfs. should allow H. £52 on that account, & that deft. on taking the agency should allow pltfs. to retain six months' salary, which amounted to £52. In an action by pltfs. for money received by deft. as such agent, to which deft. pleaded a set-off for six months' salary:—Held: this was not an undertaking to answer for debt of another within Stat. Frauds, s. 4.

If a person agrees that whatever shall hereafter become due to him shall be disposed of in a particular way, such an agreement need not be in writing (POLLOCK, C.B.).—WALKER v. HILL (1860), 5 H. & N. 419; 157 E. R. 1244.

C. "Debt, Default or Miscarriage."

175. "Default"—Non-return of horse let on hire.—BIRKMYR v. DARNELL, No. 2, ante.

176. —Liability for tort.—A. had wrongfully, & without the licence of B., ridden his horse, & thereby caused its death:—Held: a promise by a third person to pay the damage thereby sustained, in consideration that B. would not bring any action against A., was a collateral promise within Stat. Frauds, & should be in writing.

Now the word "miscarriage" has not the same meaning as the word "debt" or "default"; it seems to me to comprehend that species of wrongful act, for the consequences of which the law would make the party civilly responsible. The wrongful riding the horse of another, without his leave & licence, & thereby causing its death, is clearly an act for which the party is responsible in damages; & therefore, in my judgment, falls within the meaning of the word "miscarriage" (ABBOTT, C.J.).

I think the term miscarriage is more properly applicable to a ground of action founded upon a tort than to one founded upon a contract. . . . & I think that both the words "miscarriage" & "default" apply to a promise to answer for another with respect to the non-performance of a duty though not founded upon a contract (HOLROYD, J.).—KIRKHAM v. MARTER (1819), 2 B. & Ald. 613; 106 E. R. 490.

177. —Liability for debt payable in futuro.—If there was a contract with reference to a liability not existing at the time by reason of the debt not being due at the time but being payable in futuro that would come under the word "default" (WILLES, J.).—MOUNTSTEPHEN v. LAKEMAN (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 196; 41 L. J. Q. B. 67; 25 L. T. 755; 36 J. P. 261; 20 W. R. 117, Ex. Ch.; affd. sub nom. LAKEMAN v. MOUNTSTEPHEN (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 17, H. L.

Sect. 1.—Statutory provisions: Sub-sect. 1, C., D. & E.; sub-sect. 2, A.]

178. "Debt"—Liability already incurred.]—Pltf., a broker, having a lien on certain policies of insurance effected for his principal, for whom he had given his acceptances, deft. promised that he would provide for the payment of those acceptances as they became due, upon pltf.'s giving up to him such policies, in order that he might collect for the principal the money due thereon from the underwriters; which was accordingly done & the money was afterwards received by deft.:—Held: this was not a promise for the debt or default of another within Stat. Frauds; & pltf. might recover against deft. as well for the breach of agreement in not providing for the payment of the acceptances as also upon an account for money had & received.

I am clearly of opinion that this is neither an undertaking for the debt, default or miscarriage of another within the statute. It could not be for the debt but rather for the credit of another; for when the promise was made no debt was incurred from G. to pltf. (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).

Deft. then procured from pltf. the securities upon the faith of this engagement; in entering into which he had not the discharge of G. principally in his contemplation but the discharge of himself. That was his moving consideration, though the discharge of G. would eventually follow. It is rather, therefore, a purchase of the securities which pltf. had in his hands. This is quite beside the mischief provided against by the statute (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).

This is to be considered as a purchase by deft. of pltf.'s interest in the policies. It is not a bare promise to the creditor to pay the debt of another due to him but a promise by deft. to pay what pltf. would be liable to pay if pltf. would furnish him with the means of doing so (LAWRENCE, J.).—(CASTLING v. 187. — Above sect. requiring a written engagement for the debt or another, has been considerably cut down ever since the case of Pasley v. Freeman, No. 186, ante, at law; where this was determined; that, if you throw into the declaration an allegation, that the engagement was fraudulent, & in the form of a representation, that the party is of sufficient substance to pay the debt, the recovery is not of the debt, as debt, upon the contract, as contract; but a recovery of damages to compensate what they call a fraud. It was long, before I was reconciled to that; but with those doubts I know it has been settled as law by subsequent decisions. I do not therefore mean to deny this proposition as settled law; that, if a man asks, whether he may trust A. & the answer is, that he may, the person giving that answer, knowing at the time that he cannot be trusted, must pay in damages for the consequence of that misrepresentation; but, if the answer is, that he has so good an opinion of A.'s circumstances, that he will pay the debt, if A. does not, there can be no recovery (LORD ELDON, C.).—Ex p. CARR (1814), 3 Ves. & B. 108; 35 E. R. 420, L. C.

188. Promise not amounting to representation of credit.—A promise having been made to guarantee pltf., which is within the statute, there being no note in writing, he brings an action for the misrepresentation. required a reference, & was directed to C., whose servant gave a verbal representation upon which goods were supplied. B. paid over the proceeds of those goods, which were sold under such circumstances as to raise a strong suspicion of fraud, to C. in discharge of prior liabilities:—Held: in an action by A. against C. for the value of those goods, evidence of the verbal representation was not admissible; & there not being evidence of fraud in C. independently thereof, the action was not maintainable.

Upon the faith of the certification upon the transfer from L. to plffs., they paid him the price of the shares. The co. having refused to recognise plffs.' title, they brought an action to recover the value of the shares:—Held: (1) plffs. had lost the price of the shares by reason of a merely careless misrepresentation for which no action would lie, & they had lost the shares, as distinguished from the price, because L. had no title to them: but the certification did not amount to a warranty of L.'s title, & as the loss of the shares was not due to any misrepresentation by the co., but to the invalidity of the transfer from P. to L., the co. were not estopped from denying its validity, & that the action was not maintainable; (2) the representation was not within above Act.—*BISHOP v. 201. — Incorporated company.—Pltf. sued J. & G. jointly for a false representation with respect to the solvency of R. Deft. J. was sued as the public officer of a banking co. formed under Country Bankers Act, 1826 (c. 46), & deft. G was the manager at one of their branches. Deft. was a customer of the S. bank, & requested the manager of that bank to inquire for him as to R.'s credit. The manager wrote a letter addressed to the manager of deft.'s banking co., requesting information whether R. was responsible to the extent of £50,000. Deft. G. replied in his own name, signing his letter as manager, & giving a favourable account of R.'s responsibility. Pltf., in consequence of this letter, supplied R. with goods, for which he never was paid, in consequence of R.'s insolvency. The statement made by G. was false to his knowledge. Deft.'s banking co. had no knowledge, otherwise than through G., that such letter had been written, & gave him no express authority to write the letter; but the writing of such a letter was an act done within the scope of the general authority conferred on G. as manager:—Held: (1) G. was liable personally for the false representation; (2) by Statute of Frauds Amendment Act, 1825 (c. 14), s. 6, a false representation as to the credit of another person, in order to maintain an action, must be signed by the person making it, & not by an agent; & therefore, if G. were to be considered an agent, the banking co. was not liable; (3) the signature of G. to the letter could not be considered the signature of the banking co. itself; (4) the letter was the representation of G., & not the representation of the banking co.—SWIFT v. (3) Pltf. in 1911, went to Canada on pleasure & stayed at Montreal with the general manager of deft. bank, who gave him a letter of introduction to the branch manager asking them if he applied for assistance or advice to place themselves at his disposal. In 1912, he again visited Canada, seeking investments, & presented the letter of introduction to G., defts.' branch manager at V., upon whose oral advice he invested the sum of £25,000 upon a mtge. to secure a loan to a Canadian co., who were customers & debtors of the bank. The advice, which was honestly given, involved oral representations as to the credit of the co. The co., having failed to pay either interest or principal, pltf. brought an action against the bank, claiming damages for negligence & breach of duty while acting as his bankers & advisers. It was admitted that G. had no general authority to advise as to investments. At the trial judgment was entered for pltf. on the findings of the jury for £25,000:—Held: Statute of Frauds Amendment Act (Lord Tenterden's Act), 1828 (c. 14), s. 6, did not apply to the action.

Sect. 2.—Guarantees within statutory provisions:
Sub-sect. 1, A. (a) & (b).]

205. —.—.]—GORDON v. MARTIN, No. 3, ante.

206. —.—.]—A. having commenced certain business for B. which he has undertaken, refused to proceed without a promise from C. to pay the further expenses. C. was not liable on such a promise without a note in writing. —BARBER v. FOX (1816), 1 Stark. 270, N. P.

207. —.—.]—A landlord having authorised a distress for rent, is liable for the necessary expenses, & although plff. was sent by deft. to take possession of the goods distrained, who promised to pay him, the latter will not be liable without a note in writing.

Since in this case there is a principal, namely, the landlord, who is responsible for the necessary expenses of the distress, the case is within Stat. Frauds & the debt is to be considered as the debt of another (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.). —COMMAN v. EYLES (1817), 2 Stark. 62, N. P.

208. —.—.] Declaration stated that B. had sued deft. in equity, & had retained plff. as his attorney, & that costs, viz. £30, had become due to plff. as such attorney for his costs in the suit; & that plff. & deft. had agreed, with the consent of B., that the suit should be discontinued, & deft. pay plff. the costs which were due. It then stated that, in consideration of the premises, & that B. had consented to discontinue, & plaintiff to accept his costs from deft., the latter promised plff. to pay him such costs, but did not. Plea, that the promise was an undertaking to pay the debt of another, & was not in writing. On demurrer: Held: such promise was a promise to pay the debt of another, within Stat. Frauds, s. 1. —TOMLINSON v. GELL (1837), 6 Ad. & El. 561; 1 Nev. & P. K. B. 588; Will. Woll. & Dav. 229; 6 L. J. K. B. 139; 112 E. R. 216.

209. —.—.]—R. having undertaken by a written contract, to build for the Corp. of H. a house on a farm occupied by A. engaged S. to do the carpenters' work; & the following agreement was made & signed by R. & S. & witnessed by A.: —"It having been arranged that A. shall build a new house on the farm occupied by Mr. A. it is hereby agreed & understood between R. & S., that S. shall do all the carpenters' work, etc., under the inspection & control of A. & that the amount of the work shall be paid by Mr. A. to S. only, & that this agreement shall be his guarantee for so doing." On the same day A. wrote to S. as follows: —"It having been agreed that R. shall build a new house on the farm occupied by me, & that, by an agreement this day shown, me between you & S. you are to do the carpenters' work, etc., & that the payment, when done, is to be made by me to you, & to no other person, according to plan & specification, I hereby undertake to pay the same, by having a proper discharge": —Held: S. having done the work, could not maintain an action of indebitatus assumpsit for work & labour against A. for the value of it.

If it was an undertaking by deft. to pay so much as should be due from the Corp. to S. by R.'s assignment, then it would be a collateral undertaking for the Corp.; but if it meant that, if deft. had money in his hands, he was to pay on the assignment of R. then it would not be collateral, & he would be responsible on his simple parol promise (PARKE, B.). —SWEETING v. ASPLIN (1840), 7 M. & W. 105; H. & W. 6; 10 L. J. Ex. 3; 151 E. R. 723.

210. —.—.]—A promise to guarantee certain arrears of rent in consideration of the landlord's withdrawing a distress, is a promise to answer for the debt of another within Stat. Frauds, s. 4.

This agreement is within the very words of the statute & the test is in these cases whether the original debtor remains liable (LORD DENMAN, C.J.). —ROUNCE v. WOODYARD (1846), 8 L. T. O. S. 186.

Compare No. 182, ante, Nos. 212-244, post.

211. —.—.]—A written agreement signed by defts., plff. & the charterers, after reciting that the ship had arrived in port, & a stop had been put on the freight by the owners, & that a difficulty had arisen as to the settlement of the charterer's accounts, stated that the stop was to be immediately taken off, & that the commission on the charter party, payable to plff., was to be paid off by defts., & that no person signing that agreement was to put any stop on the freight: —Held: this was an agreement to answer for the debt of another, within the Stat. Frauds.

It was not a case of transfer of liability as if A. had agreed to accept C. a debtor of B. as his debtor in lieu of him. It is plain that although deft. agreed to pay plff. yet the debt to him still remained due from the owners by whom he was retained (POLLOCK, C.B.). —GULL v. LINDSAY (1849), 4 Exch. 45; 18 L. J. upon plff. finished the work: —Held: deft.'s promise was within the statute, & being oral only, plff. could not recover. —BOND v. TREAHY (1875), 37 U. C. R. 360.—CAN.

m. —.—.]—A. contracted to build houses for deft., & sublet the plastering to plff. A. gave plff. a written order to the architects to give him certificates for the plastering as the work proceeded. After this plff. got money from time to time from the architects without reference to A. A. failed, & plff. stopped work for some weeks, when deft. told him to go on, & he completed the work: —Held: deft.'s promise being collateral, & oral, was void, under Stat. Frauds. —POUCHER v. 216. Statute not applicable—Novation of contract.]—A. sells goods to B., who being unable to pay transfers them to C., who promises A. to pay for them. This is a new sale to C. & not a mere promise by C. to pay the debt of B.—BROWNING v. STALLARD (1811), 5 Taunt. 450; 12 E. R. 764.

217. —[—]—A. being indebted to B.; & C., who was resident in the West Indies, being indebted to A., the latter proposed to assign to B., the debt due to him from C., & to this proposal B. assented. A. then, by letter directed the agents of C. in this country, "As soon as they should have funds belonging to C. in their hands, to pay to B. on his, A.'s, account, the amount of C.'s debt," & added that he would credit C. for the amount, having received his order to that effect. The agents of C. verbally promised to pay B. as soon as they should have funds in their hands belonging to C. A. afterwards gave an order to another creditor, authorising C. to pay to such creditor the amount of the debt due to him, A., & C. entered into an obligation to pay same to such creditor, but there was a clause annexed to the obligation, stating that it had been alleged that a payment had been made by some person to A. on account of C., & it was declared, that should such payment be proved to have been made, the amount should be deducted. The creditor to whom this order was given demanded payment of the debt from C. on his arrival in this country, but the latter refused to pay it, on the ground that his agents were liable to pay it to B., & same was in fact afterwards paid to B.:—Held: it was not necessary that the promise to pay B. should be in writing, inasmuch as it was a promise by C. to pay his own debt, & not that of another.—HODGSON v. ANDERSON (1825), 3 B. & C. 812; 5 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 735; 107 E. R. 945.

If A. is creditor of B., & B. & C. propose to enter, or have entered, into partnership together, & address themselves to A., the creditor of B., & say "we wish that this debt, due hitherto from B. alone, shall be a debt from B. & C. together," & A. accedes to that, although no writing passes, that agreement is valid & effectual, & is not impeached or affected by Stat. Frauds. The effect of it is for a valuable consideration to extinguish the first, & for a valuable consideration to substitute for it the second (KNIGHT-BRUCE, V. C.).—*Re LENDON & LENDON, Ex p. 219. —[—]—Where a creditor released his principal debtor & accepted a third party as full debtor in his stead, & the surety for the former agreed to give a guarantee for the latter, & to continue his former guarantee till he did so, & then died without having given it:—Held: in an action by the creditor against his exors. that the debt having been extinguished by the release, the remedy against deceased was gone. Novation of debt operates as a complete release of the original debtor, & cannot be considered as a mere covenant not to sue him.—COMMERCIAL BANK OF TASMANIA v. JONES, [1893] A. C. 313; 62 L. J. P. "In consideration of your discharging B. out of custody I undertake that he shall pay the debt due to you by four half-yearly instalments," etc.: Held: pltf. might have proved unpaid instalments under a fiat in bkpy. against deft., & that deft.'s certificate was therefore a bar to an action upon the contract for instalments becoming due since his bkpy.

B. was in custody under a ca. sa. for the debt in question: & as that was entirely discharged by the execution, & he could no longer be sued for it, or make default in respect of it, it was argued on the authority of Goodman v. Chase, No. 221, ante, that this undertaking was an original one on the part of the bkpt. to pay the amount of the sum that had been due from B. . . . On consideration we agree that this is correct (LORD DENMAN, C.J.). LANE v. BURGHART (1811), 1 Q. B. 933; 1 Gal. & Dav. 311; 10 L. J. Q. B. 343; 6 Jur. 125; 113 E. The agreement, as produced in evidence, was intitled, in an action between pltf. & S., & appeared to be, that in consideration of pltf.'s having released S. from custody, deft. engaged to pay the money in the manner specified, & that, simultaneously with the signing & receipt of the above agreement, pltf. gave an order on the sheriff for the discharge of S., who was, however, detained in custody at the suit of other parties. It also appeared that the ca. sa. was irregular on being issued into Middlesex, the venue being laid in Kent, & no previous ca. sa. had been issued into Kent:—Held: (1) the above agreement did not require to be in writing, under Stat. Frauds, s. 4; (2) the allegation that the sheriff duly arrested S., must be understood to mean that he did so under such circumstances as did not render himself a trespasser, & consequently the allegation was not disproved by the irregularity in the issuing of the writ.

If "duly" only means that the sheriff was not a trespasser & duly acted in pursuance of the writ put into his hands, the averment is proved, for the writ in his hands is sufficient authority to justify him. That is the way in which we ought to construe this declaration, & if so, there is ample evidence of the consideration alleged, to support this promise (PARKE, B.).—BUTCHER v. He was afterwards written to, to accept a bill for the amount; to which he replied, that he was not in the habit of accepting bills, but that the money would be paid when due. After this B., the seller, wrote to C. about the goods, & spoke of them in his letter as goods which C. had "guaranteed"; the attorney of B.'s assignees, when he had become bkpt., wrote to A. for the money, & threatened process; but this letter was a circular, written in pursuance of a list made out for him by B. & without any knowledge of the circumstances under which the debt was contracted:—Held: on this evidence C. was not primarily liable, but only as a guarantor of the debt of A.—*RAINS v. A. asked how long credit would be wanted. Plff. replied, "I will see it paid at the end of six months"; adding, it would be about £10 or £50. A. sent goods to debt.'s house, & no payment having been made by debt. within six months, applied to plff. for the amount, without previously requesting debt. to pay. Plff. having paid the amount: Held: a jury was well warranted in finding that the credit was given by A. not to debt., or to him & plff. jointly, but to plff., whose promise to pay was heretofore original, & not collateral only, so as to require any writing within Stat. Frauds; & heretofore plff. might recover the amount against debt. as for money paid at his request. Scumble: the circumstances of each case must be considered in deciding whether a contract be original or collateral.—*SIMPSON v. of certain streets to make these connecting drains, the effect of the notice being that if the inhabitants did not make those connecting drains the board might make them & charge the expenses on the defaulting inhabitants. The notice was disregarded. No subsequent resolution was passed by the board. M. was about to take away his carts & working materials, when L. said to him, "What objection have you to making the connections?" to which M. answered, "None, if you or the board will order the work, or become responsible for the payment"; & L. replied "M., go on & do the work, & I will see you paid." M. did the work, & the board refusing to pay, sued L. for the amount: Held: the words of L. were properly left to the jury as evidence to sustain a claim against him personally, & they did not constitute a promise to pay the debt of another, so as to come within the operation of Stat. Frauds.

The landlord had a legal pledge. He enters, to distrain: he has the pledge in his custody. Debt. agrees "that the goods shall be sold, & plff. paid in the first place." The goods are the fund: the question is not between T. & plff. Plff. had a lien upon the goods. L. was a trustee for all the creditors: & was obliged to pay the landlord, who had the prior lien. Frauds.

It is only necessary to attend to the facts in order to see that this case is not within the statute. After plff. had distrained, he held in his own hands his remedy for recovering the rent, & the tenant was at that time no longer indebted; for so long as the landlord held the goods under distress the debt due from the tenant was suspended. What, then, I would ask, is the substance of this contract? It is as if debt. had proposed to plff. in these words; you must convert the goods into money in order to satisfy yourself the arrears due, if you will allow us to do this we will pay you. What would this have been but an independent contract between these parties? I think that the present case is neither within the letter nor mischief of the Act of Parliament, which was aimed at cases where a debt being due from one person, another engaged to pay it for him. But here, for the reason above stated, at the time when the promise was made, the debt was not owing from the tenant (BAYLEY, J.).—EDWARDS v. KELLY (1817), 6 M. & S. 204; 105 E. R. 1219.

It is said, that supposing it is upon the first agreement that G. is to proceed, they ought to have gone to law & to have recovered as upon an undertaking in writing to pay the debt of another person. Now it may be a doubt whether they could have recovered at law upon this agreement for the engagement is not made directly to A.; it is made to P. only & the consideration is furnished by P. . . . I accordingly decide that where one person induces another to enter into an engagement, by a promise to indemnify him against liability, that is not an agreement within Stat. Frauds, & does not require to be in writing. This is a case in which a father induced his son to guarantee th

238. Promise to firm of which promisor partner.]

—A., being a member of a partnership firm consisting of A., B., & C., verbally agreed with B. & C. to guarantee his partners against loss in respect of an existing debt due to it from his son, or, according to another version, to guarantee to the firm the balance which should be found due. A. died having by his will given a share of his estate to his son's wife & children; &, after referring to his son's indebtedness to the firm & stating that "he had guaranteed" the firm against loss in respect of the debt, he directed that the amount of the debt should be brought into hotchpot in ascertaining the share given by his will. By a codicil he "confirmed the guarantee mentioned in his will":—Held: (1) the verbal guarantee was not a promise which fell within sect. 4 of Stat. Frauds.

(2) The note or memorandum in writing must exist at the time when the action is commenced, so that an action cannot be supported by a memorandum obtained after its commencement. As the statute [of Frauds] affects only the mode of proof, this rule must be considered anomalous; but it is founded on the wording of the statute (LINDLEY, L.J.).

(3) The question is not one of intention of the party who signs the document, but simply one of evidence against him. The ct. is not in quest of the intention of parties, but only of evidence under the hand of one of the parties to the contract that he has entered into it. Any document signed by him & containing the terms of the contract is sufficient for that purpose (BOWEN, L.J.).—Re HOYLE, HOYLE v. HOYLE, [1893] 1 Ch. 84; 62 L. J. Ch. 182; 67 L. T. 674; 41 W. ### SUB-SECT. 3.—LIABILITY MUST RESULT FROM GUARANTEE ONLY.

269. General rule.]—A. through the agency of B., a broker, sold a parcel of linseed to C., who through the same broker sold at an increased price to D. The time for D. to pay the price was to arrive before that fixed for the payment by C. D. sent a clerk to the broker for the delivery order for the seed. The broker took him to A., from whom the clerk obtained the order upon the faith of his engagement that D. would pay A. for the seed. D. on the following day sent the broker a cheque for £900 on account, the precise quantity not having then been ascertained. Upon the seed being afterwards measured, it was found that the amount payable to A. under his contract with C. was £971 15s. 6d. In an action by A. against D. to recover the difference between that sum and the £900 cheque:—Held: (1) the agreement by D.'s clerk was not a contract or promise to pay the debt of a third person within the Stat. Frauds, s. 4, the seed, the giving up the delivery order for which was the consideration for that purpose, being the property of D., subject only to A.'s lien for the contract price.

We are all agreed that the case is not within Stat. Frauds. The law upon this subject is, I think, correctly stated in the notes to Firth v. Stanton, 1 Wms. Saund. 211e, where the learned editor thus sums up the result of the authorities: "There is considerable difficulty in the subject, occasioned perhaps by unguarded expressions in the reports of the different cases; but the fair result seems to be that the question whether each particular case comes within this clause of the statute (s. 4) or not, depends, not on the considerations for the promise, but on the fact of the original party remaining liable, coupled with the absence of any liability on the part of debt. or his property, except such as arises from his express promise." I quite concur in that view of the doctrine, provided the proposition is considered as embracing the qualification at the conclusion of the passage; for though I agree that the consideration alone is not the test, but that the party taking upon himself the obligation upon which the action is brought makes himself responsible for the debt or default of another, still it must be taken with the qualification stated in the note above cited, viz. an absence of prior liability on the part of debt. or his property, it being as I think truly stated there as the result of the authorities that if there be something more than a mere undertaking to pay the debt of another, as where the property in consideration of the giving up of which the party enters into the undertaking is in point of fact his own or is property in which he has some interest, the case is not within the provision of the statute which was intended to apply to the case of an undertaking to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another, where the person making the promise has himself no interest in the property which is the subject of the undertaking (COCKBURN, C.J.).

(2) There being no evidence that D.'s clerk had communicated to him the bargain he had made with A.'s clerk when he obtained the delivery order, D. was not liable.—*FITZGERALD v. 281. — — — — — Not interest as debenture holder.]—The mere fact that a person, who guarantees payment of a debt due from a co., is induced to do so by reason of his having a floating charge on the assets & business of the co. will not take the case out of Stat. Frauds, s. 4. Debt. in an action counterclaimed upon a promise by plff. to be answerable for the price of goods supplied by debt. to a limited co. Plff. was the holder of a large number of shares in & had lent money to the co., as security for which money he held a debenture of the co., which was a "floating" security on their business & assets. Debt. had been in the habit of supplying goods to the co. for the purposes of their business. A balance being due to him in respect of goods so supplied, he was threatening, unless this was paid, not to supply any more goods to the co. Thereupon plff. made an oral agreement with debt., the effect of which the jury found to be that he agreed to be answerable for the price of goods supplied to the co. by debt., if the co. made default. The jury further found that plff. was induced to enter into the agreement by the fact (inter alia) that he had a debenture charge upon the assets of the co.: Held: upon the above facts, the agreement was a guarantee which came within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, & the agreement not being in writing, & there being no memorandum of it in writing, signed by the party to be charged, the counter-claim failed.—DAVYS v. BUSWELL, [1913] 2 K. 285. Payment of debt ulterior consequence.]—Plffs. who were stockbrokers, entered into an oral agreement with debt. that he should introduce clients to them, & that plffs. should transact business on the Stock Exchange for the clients thus introduced, upon the terms that, as between plffs. & debt., debt. should receive half the commission earned by plffs. in respect of any transactions by them for any clients introduced by debt., & that he should pay to plffs. half of any loss which might be incurred by them in respect of such transactions. Plff. claimed to recover from debt. half the loss which they had incurred in Stock Exchange transactions which they had entered into on behalf of one R., who had been introduced to them by deft. :—Held : deft. having an interest in the transactions, equally with plffs., & the main object of the contract being to regulate the terms of the deft.'s employment, the contract was not within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, & the action was maintainable, though the contract was not in writing.

Is such a contract a simple contract of guarantee, "a special promise to answer for the debt or default of another person" so as to bring it within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, or is it a contract of indemnity? Whether any contract is the one or the other is often a very nice question. . . . The test given is whether deft. is interested in the transaction either by being the person who is to negotiate it or in some other way, or whether he is totally unconnected with it. If he is totally unconnected with it except by means of his promise to pay the loss, the contract is a guarantee; if he is not totally unconnected with the transactions, but is to derive some benefit from it, the contract is one of indemnity, not a guarantee, & sect. 4 does not apply (LORD ESHER, M.R.). SUTTON & Co. v. GREY. [1891] 1 Q. B. 285; 63 L. J. Q. B. 633; 69 L. T. 673; 42 W. R. 195; 10 T. L. R. 93; 38 Sol. Jo. 77; 9 R. 106, C. A.

236. Payment of debt incident of larger contract.] Deft., who was a director of & had a large interest as a shareholder in a co., which he had also financed, orally promised plffs., who were judgment creditors of the co., & who had delivered to the sheriff a writ of fi. fa., which they had issued upon their judgment, on which the sheriff had failed to levy because he could not effect an entry, that he, deft., would indorse bills for the amount of the debt :—Held : (1) this promise was not a contract of indemnity, but was a "promise to answer for the debt of another" within Stat. Frauds, s. 4. & as it was not in writing, an action for the breach of it could not be maintained; (2) the case was not excepted from s. 4 by reason of the interest which deft. had as a shareholder & otherwise in freeing the goods of the co. from the execution, he having no legal interest in or charge upon the goods.

If I go to a banker or to another person who holds documents as security for a debt & I ask him to hand over the documents to me on payment of the debt, that is simply a purchase of the security. Although in this way I have become answerable for the debt of another, that is not the main object of the contract (COZENS HARDY, L.J.).

Whether you look at the "property cases" or at the "del credere cases," it seems to me that in each of them the conclusion arrived at really was that the contract in question did not fall within the sect. because of the object of the contract. In each of those cases there was in truth a main contract, a larger contract, & the obligation to pay the debt of another was merely an incident of the larger contract. As I understand those cases, it is not a question of motive, it is a question of object. You must find what it was that the parties were in fact dealing about. What was the subject-matter of the contract? If the subject-matter of the contract was the purchase of property, the relief of property from a liability, the getting rid of incumbrances, the securing greater diligence in the performance of the duty of a factor, or the introduction of business into a stockbroker's office, in all those cases there was a larger matter which was the object of the contract. That being the object of the contract, the mere fact that as an incident to it, not as the immediate object, but indirectly, the debt of another to a third person will be paid does not bring the case within the sect. —If a tradesman, having goods in his possession, upon which he has a lien, parts with those goods on the promise of a third person to pay the demand, such promise is not within Stat. Frauds.—HOULDITCH v. MILNE (1800), 3 Esp. 86, N. P. Annotations :—Refd. Edwards v. Kelly (1817), 6 M. & S. 100; Clancy v. Piggott (1835), 2 Ad. & El. 173; Rounce v. Woodyard (1816), 8 L. 238. —[Declaration stated, that A. undertook to pay B. a sum due to him from C., if B. would give up a lien which he had upon C.'s goods; that B. gave up the lien, but A. did not pay. Plea, that the supposed promise was a special promise to answer for the debt of another person; that no agreement relating thereto, nor any memorandum or note thereof, stating the consideration, was in writing & signed by deft. or any person authorised by him, pursuant to the statute; & that the supposed promise was contained in a memorandum in writing signed by deft., which was as follows: "I agree to see you paid within three months the amount of £50 due to you on account of C." Plff. demurred specially, on the grounds that the declaration stated a sufficient consideration for the promise, but the memorandum in the plea stated none; & that the plea, instead of denying the promise in the declaration, stated facts to raise a conclusion as to its not having been made; and that it did not confess & avoid, nor traverse; and that it was not necessary that the promise in the declaration should be written, etc.: Held : the written agreement did not satisfy Stat. Frauds; plff., by his demurrer, admitted that agreement to be the contract between him & deft.; & he having so admitted, & the case being one in which by statute, the whole contract ought to be set out in writing, plff. could not assume that there were other terms, not embodied in the memorandum, which might have been proved à Nisi Prius.—(*CLANCY v. 292. Purchase of goods from creditor with uncontrolled power of sale.]—There must be a good consideration for a promise in writing to pay the debt of another, as well as for any other promise.

A count averring that A. made a bill of sale of goods to pltf., in consideration of a debt of £122 19s., due from A. to pltf., & that pltf. being about to sell the goods in satisfaction of his debts, deft. undertook to pay him £122 19s. if he would forbear to sell, does not show with sufficient distinctness that this is a promise to pay the debt of another, so as to bring the case within Stat. Frauds.

In a subsequent action by J., the obligor, against W., on his underwriting, it was not proved that six months' notice was given to pltf. before she was sued on the bond:—Held: the action on the bond was itself a sufficient notice to satisfy the condition of the bond, & J. was bound to pay £300; & therefore deft. Pltf. had no further communication with the deft., & on the receipt of the latter was not aware that deft. was an attorney:—Held: in an action against the attorney as surety for the amount of the bill of exchange, this letter did not render deft. personally liable.—*ALLAWAY v. 306. —.]—The rule that a drawer of a bill of exchange cannot sue an indorser, only applies where circuitry of action would otherwise arise. Where the contract between a creditor, debtor, & surety is embodied in a bill of exchange, in an action by the creditor against the surety on the bill, no other evidence save the bill is required to satisfy Stat. 308. —.]—It was agreed between pltf. & A., who owed them money, that they should draw a bill on him, & that deft., who was A.'s father, should indorse it to guarantee payment. They accordingly drew a bill on A., to their own order & without indorsing it to A., who returned it to them accepted by himself, & indorsed by deft. They then indorsed it, & it was not paid at maturity. In an action against deft.:—Held: he was not liable as indorser under Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 55, nor as having incurred the liabilities of indorser under s. 56, since at the time he put his name on the bill it was not complete & regular on the face of it, as it lacked pltf.' indorsement; nor was he liable on a contract of suretyship, since the provisions of Stat. Frauds were not satisfied.—JENKINS & SONS v. COOMBER, [1898] 2 Q. B. 168; 67 L. J. Q. B. 780; 78 L. T. 752; 47 W. R. 48; 14 T. L. R. 425.

309. —.]—It had been arranged between pltf. & a co. that pltf. would supply goods to the co., to be paid for by bills of exchange accepted by the co., if defts., who were directors of the co., would indorse the bills by way of security for their payment. In a series of transactions thereafter entered into the course pursued in each case was as follows. Pltf., for the price of goods supplied, drew a bill of exchange payable to their own order on the co., & without indorsing it, sent it to the co., who returned it accepted by the co. with defts.' signatures indorsed thereon. Pltf. then placed their signature on the back thereof below the signatures of defts. These bills were duly met. In the case of a subsequent bill the same course was pursued with regard to the drawing & acceptance of & the indorsements on, the bill. This bill was not paid at maturity. In an action by pltf. against defts. on this last-mentioned bill, or, alternatively, as having guaranteed payment of it: Held: defts. were not liable as indorsers of the bill or as having incurred the liabilities of indorsers of the bill under Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 56, & they were not liable as on a contract of guarantee since the provisions of Stat. Frauds, s. 4, were not satisfied. SHAW (M. T.) & Co., LTD. v. HOLLAND, [1913] 2 K. B. 15; 18 Com. Cas. 153; 82 L. J. K. B. 592; 108 L. T. 543; 29 T. L. R. 341, C. In payment for these goods J. drew a bill of exchange to his own order at three months for £150 upon C. Ltd., who accepted it, & it was indorsed by G. before J. had indorsed it as payee, & his name appeared below that of G. The bill was indorsed by G. in order to enable J. to discount it, & for no consideration moving from J. to G., who was to be under no liability to J. The bill was discounted by J.'s bank & was not met at maturity. An arrangement was subsequently made by which C. Ltd. paid £100 in cash to the bank in part satisfaction, & the bank received two bills drawn by J. to his own order & accepted by C. Ltd., for £175 each at one month & two months respectively. These bills were indorsed by G. before they were signed by J. either as drawer or payee. They were afterwards indorsed by J.

Ltd. & G. upon the bill & recovered judgment, & afterwards presented a petition in bkpy. in the county ct. against G., founded on the judgment debt upon which a receiving order was made against him. On appeal:—Held: (1) there was sufficient consideration passing from J. to G. to entitle J. to sue G. on the bill notwithstanding the order in which the signatures appeared on the bill; (2) by reason of the agreement between J. & G., G. could not, according to the authority of *Willinson v. 312. Name indorsed on blank acceptance.—Subsequently filled in by drawer.]—Deft. entered into an agreement with plff. to guarantee the payment by T. for goods sold to him by plff., & for that purpose to indorse bills accepted by T. for the amount. In pursuance of that agreement T. wrote his acceptances across the face of two blank stamped bill forms, & deft. indorsed them. T. then handed the bill forms to the plff., who filled up the body of the bill for the agreed amount, making them payable to his order, signed them as drawer, & also indorsed them. Plff. duly delivered the goods to T., who eventually was unable to pay for them: Held: as deft. agreed to be liable for the price of the goods supplied by plff. to T., & indorsed the bills for that purpose, he was liable on those bills. *GLENIE v. B., being pressed to indorse them, refused, but wrote a letter to A., in which he inclosed the bills & added, “that should they not be honoured when due, he (B.) would see them paid”:—Held: this was a sufficient agreement within Stat. Together constituting memorandum.—Letters.]—An agent in this country for merchants, the sellers of goods in Russia, who guarantees that the shipment shall be in conformity with the revenue laws of Great Britain, so that no impediment shall arise upon the importation thereof, or that in default, the consequence, shall rest with the sellers, makes himself personally responsible to the buyer. In a declaration upon such a guarantee against the agent, it is unnecessary to allege any application for indemnity to the principals. Such a guarantee is not within Stat. Frauds, if the terms of the agreement can be collected from the written correspondence between the parties.—REDHEAD v. CATOR (1815), as reported in 1 Stark. 14, N. P.

316. — Letter proposing terms of guarantee.—Subsequent guarantee.]—Where deft. undertook to guarantee to plffs., assignees of a bkpt., the payment of £100 due to the estate of bkpt. from S., for articles delivered to the latter for the use of his trade, so that the guarantee should not be put in force against deft. for two whole years from the date thereof; & deft. previously to the guarantee, wrote a letter to plffs., proposing the terms on which it was to be given, & afterwards recognised it:—Held: the correspondence & guarantee were to be taken together, & constituted a sufficient consideration for a promise within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, although it was objected that no consideration was expressed on the face of the guarantee itself.—COE v. DUFFIELD (1822), 7 Moore, C. P. 252.

317. — Letter & envelope.]—There is such physical connection between a piece of letter paper & the envelope containing it as to constitute them one document, just as in older times when people used to address a letter written on four sheets, on the fourth sheet thereof it would be plain that such letter & the address constituted one document. The old law relating to admission of parol evidence connecting two documents has not been altered by cases. I am at liberty to infer that the superscription on the envelope in this case referred to the document itself (CHARLES, J.).—FREEMAN v. FREEMAN (1891), 7 T. L. R. 131.

318. — Letters on successive days.]—In 1879 defts. wrote to plff., by letter dated Sept. 15: “Burton, Balderson. Dear Sir,—We hereby guarantee the safety of the above investments”; & by letter dated Sept. 16: “We acknowledge to have received from you the sum of £710 as under; a mtge. on the estate at T. the property of Mr. Burton, £360; a mtge. on the estate at F. the property of Mr. Balderson, £350”; plff. A. advanced to Burton on mtge. of the estate at T. the sum of £360 through defts. In 1891 plff. A. conveyed & transferred to plff. B. in consideration not contain the name of the vendor who was to be indemnified, but it was attached by the guarantor to an invoice of the goods:—Held: the two documents were to be considered as one, & were a sufficient contract.—McEWAN v. DYNON (1877), 3 V. L. R. 271.—AUS.

of £300, the benefit of the mtge. In 1896, plffs. sued defts. to recover the sum of £360, from them as guarantors of the mtge.:—Held: the two letters could be read together & were a sufficient memorandum of the contract within Stat. Frauds, s. 4.

It cannot be doubted that although since the passing of Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (c. 97), s. 3, parol evidence may be given to supply the consideration, yet parol evidence cannot be given to explain the promise, & unless the whole promise be in writing the memorandum will not be sufficient (LOPES, L.J.).

If the whole promise does not sufficiently appear in writing parol evidence of the consideration is not admissible to supply the defect (CHITTY, L.J.).

219. — Indorsement on letter.—A., by a letter in which the consideration of the transaction sufficiently appeared, entered into an agreement with B., & B. became party to the engagement by writing a few lines at the bottom of a copy of A.'s letter. C. became guarantee for B. to A. by an indorsement on the back of this copy of A.'s letter, in which indorsement reference was made to the terms of the agreement on the other side:—Held: only one stamp was required on this paper, & the reference in the indorsement to the terms of the agreement was a sufficient memorandum of the consideration for the guarantee within Stat. Frauds.—STEAD v. LADDARD (1823), 1 Bing. 196; 8 Moore, C. P. 2; 1 L. J. O. S. C. P. 52; 130 E. R. 79.

On the back of the agreement was the following memorandum written & signed by C. after the execution of the agreement by A. & B. "I hereby undertake that my daughter B. shall perform all the covenants & conditions named in the annexed agreement & hold & consider myself responsible for her." The whole was described by the witness as having been one entire transaction, her action against C. to recover back the deposit on the purchase going off by default of the vendor:—Held: the agreement & indorsement might be looked at together for the purpose of making out a consideration for deft.'s promise.—COLDHAM v. SHOWLER (1846), 3 C. B. 312; 2 Car. & Kir. 261; 15 L. J. C. P. 261; 7 L. T. O. S. 230; 10 Jur. 552; 136 E. R. 126.

321. — Defective memorandum—Subsequent letter.—Defts., who were in partnership as railway contractors under the name of W., A. & Co., contracted with a railway co. to do certain works. U. & R. made a sub-contract with defts. to do part of the work; & for that purpose requiring coals to make bricks, A., without the knowledge or assent of his co-partners, signed in the name of the firm & delivered to plffs. a guarantee, not addressed to any person, for payment of coals to be supplied to U. & R. Plffs. having pointed out the omission, a clerk of W., A., & Co., by the direction of A., wrote to plffs., stating that the guarantee was intended for them. The clerk, also without the knowledge of the other partners, wrote to plffs. certain letters amounting to evidence of an account stated in respect of the amount due on the guarantee:—Held: (1) the guarantee & subsequent letter constituted a sufficient notice in writing within Stat. Frauds; (2) the guarantee did not bind the firm, there being no evidence that it was necessary for carrying into effect the partnership contract, or that the other partners had adopted it.—*BRETTEL v. 322. — Reference to attached document—Subsequent detachment.—Debt on an Irish judgment. Plea, that the judgment was recovered against deft. as surety for S. & Co., to secure payment of moneys advanced to them by plff.; & that S. & Co. paid all moneys due from them to plff., for which the judgment was to be such security. Replication, that, after the recovery of the judgment, an indenture was made between S. & Co. & plff., whereby, after reciting the judgment, & various unsettled accounts between S. & Co. & plaintiff, it was witnessed, that, for the sake of winding-up the transactions, S. & Co. & plff. agreed (inter alia) that plff. should advance to a certain banking co. £800 guaranteed by him on behalf of S. & Co., & should also advance to S. & Co. £200, & that £1,000 should be the debt thenceforth due from S. & Co., which should be payable with interest, & that the agreement should be without prejudice to the judgment against deft. Averment, that, after the making of the indenture, & before the execution thereof by plff., in consideration that plff. would execute it, & would advance the sums of £800 & £200, deft. promised plff. that the judgment should remain as a security for the repayment of the £1,000 & interest; that plff. executed the deed & advanced the sums of £80 & £200; but that S. & Co. had not repaid same. Rejoinder, that deft. did not promise modo et forma, & issue thereon. At the trial, plff. gave in evidence the following memorandum, which was signed by deft. & another surety before plff. executed the deed: "We hereby consent to the within deed being executed by & between the parties thereto, & that same shall be without prejudice to plff.'s rights & remedies under his judgment against us, & that the judgment shall remain in full force & effect." This memorandum had been annexed to the deed, but was detached & sent to deft., who signed it without seeing the deed: Held: assuming this was a transaction within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, which seem it was not, there was a sufficient memorandum in writing to satisfy the statute, since the document signed by deft. incorporated so much of the deed as formed the consideration & promise.

I do not think this is a case within that statute [of Frauds]. It is not directly a promise to pay the debt of another but an agreement stating that property already pledged for one debt shall remain pledged for another. Although the ultimate effect is that the debt may be paid yet the immediate object is merely to appropriate the fund in a different manner (PARKE, B.).—MACGOWRY v. SCOTT (1850), 5 Exch. 907; 20 L. J. Ex. 90; 16 L. T. O. S. 216; 155 E. R. 396.

323. — Reference to document containing terms.—If there is a signed paper, signed by an agent duly authorised thereto, which paper though agreeing to do something, leaves the subject-matter of the agreement unexplained, the two may be connected together, so as to constitute a contract valid under Stat. Frauds. The contract so constituted by the act of A.'s duly authorised agent will be binding on A. though the second paper may have been sent by the agent to A.'s solr., to put it into form, provided that the agent & the person with whom he was dealing, agreed that it should be sent for that purpose; but not otherwise. The act of sending such a paper to a solr. to have the matter reduced into form, affords generally cogent evidence that the parties do not intend to bind themselves till it is reduced into form.—*RIDGWAY v. 324. Signature by guarantor—Omission of name of person to whom guarantee given.]—Deft. wrote, signed, & handed to T. & O. the following document: "Sir, I beg to inform you that I shall see you paid to the sum of £800 for the ensuing building which you undertake to build for Messrs. T. & O. Thomas Lake." He intended it to be handed over by T. & O. as a guarantee to J., who was then negotiating with T. & O. to erect for them the building referred to. T. & O., however, having agreed with pltf., instead of J., that pltf. should erect the building, delivered the document to pltf., without deft.'s knowledge or authority. Deft. afterwards heard of & ratified this delivery. Pltf., having erected the building, sued deft. on the document, as a guarantee:—Held: the document was not a sufficient written agreement, or note or memorandum thereof, by deft. to answer for the debt or default of T. & O., within the Stat. Frauds, s. 4; inasmuch as the name of the person for whom the document was intended did not in any way appear upon the face of it, so that it did not contain the names of both the parties to the contract.—*WILLIAMS v. incorporated into Statute of Frauds Amendment Act, 1828 (c. 14), s. 7, requires, to make a contract, or bargain, effectual that "some note of memorandum of the bargain be made & signed by the parties to be charged by such contract or their agents thereunto lawfully authorised." Upon a contract of guarantee for the purchase of a steam engine not addressed to any one, & in which the name of the person by whom the steam engine was to be furnished did not appear, though he was known to the party by whom the memorandum was made, the contract being in these words: "I will furnish H. with funds for the purchase of a steam engine, & machinery for a flour mill, on his suiting himself with same, & notifying the purchase to me":—Held: in an action brought upon such contract, there being no acceptance of the contract in writing, it was not a sufficient note, or memorandum in writing, of the bargain, to satisfy Stat. Frauds.

A. In General.

See, generally, CONTRACT, Vol. XII., pp. 152 160, Nos. 1053–1143.

337. Only by party charged.]—E. & Co. being indebted to plffs. who were bankers, defts. by a writing expressed to be made between plffs. & defts., in consideration of the agreement thereafter contained on behalf of plffs., agreed that they would pay all moneys which then were or at any time should be due from E. & Co. to plffs., not exceeding £35,000, by instalments of £3,000 a year for five years, & two subsequent annual instalments of £10,000; & in consideration of the above plffs. agreed that they would not charge more than 5 per cent. interest to E. & Co.; & when all debts of E. & Co., except £15,000 should have been paid would grant them a full release. This agreement was signed by defts. & handed by them to plffs. who had pressed for it. Plffs. had acted upon, but never executed it:—Held: the agreement was binding upon defts. notwithstanding that it had not been executed by plffs.—LIVERPOOL BOROUGH BANK v. ECCLES (1859), 4 H. & N. 139; 28 L. J. Ex. 122; 32 L. T. O. S. 244; 157 E. R. 789.

It was afterwards discovered that the draft for the wine mentioned as for £146, should have been for £150; & accordingly plff. drew bills, for £200 & £150, which deft. got accepted by C., & gave to plff., & then wrote across the guarantee as follows: "I have received the two drafts (one being for £150 instead of £146, there being an error in the invoice of £1), both accepted by C." Plff. signed this receipt, but not deft. Plff. having declared on the above instrument as a contract, in consideration that plff. would, at his own expense, procure stamps for & draw two bills, one for £200, & the other for £150, at six months, & deliver them to deft., he would get them accepted & see them paid:—Held: the instrument was a valid memorandum of the contract declared on, within sect. 4 of Stat. Frauds, since the indorsement, having been made for the 342. Who may be an agent to sign—Minor.]—Evidence that the son of deft., a minor, has in three or four instances signed bills of exchange for his father, is sufficient in an action against the father on a guarantee, to warrant the reading of an instrument, purporting to be a guarantee by the father in the handwriting of the son.—WATKINS v. VINCE (1818), 2 Stark. 308, N. P.

343. — Solicitor.]—Y. & S. were attorneys in partnership. S. gave an undertaking that, in consideration of pltf. in an action giving deft. in that action his discharge from custody, “we hereby agree” to pay such pltf. the debt & costs on a day named. S. signed this, “Y. & S., deft.’s attorneys,” but afterwards struck out the words “def’t.’s attorneys.” It was not proved that deft. had employed the firm, but only that S. had been employed by him to wind up his affairs; nor was any evidence given of recognition or knowledge by Y., or of authority from him to S., by previous practice or otherwise, to give such a guarantee:—Held: Y. was not liable on the guarantee.—HASLEHAM v. YOUNG (1844), 5 Q. B. 833; 1 Dav. & Mer. 700; 13 L. J. Q. B. 205; 3 L. T. O. S. 34; 8 Jur. 338; 114 E. R. 1463.

344. — Partner on behalf of firm.]—A firm of S. & Co. consisted of three partners, F., R., & N., & carried on business in London. Another firm of N. & Co. consisted of five partners, F., R., N., H., & M., & carried on business in India. In Sept. 1872, N. & Co. applied by letter to a bank for a credit, agreeing to deliver to the bank as security “the personal obligation of this firm & individual partners, & a guarantee by S. & Co.” The bank granted the credit, & under it N. & Co. received large advances. In Feb. 1874, a letter was addressed to the bank, signed by S. & Co. & also by F., R., & N., saying, “We hereby guarantee you payment of all sums which are or may at any time become due to you by N. & Co. under the credit applied for in Sept. 1872, & granted by you.” This letter & the signature of S. & Co. to it were written by F., & he had negotiated the original transaction with the bank. S. & Co. filed a liquidation petition, & N. & Co. stopped payment, a large sum being due to the bank under the credit:—Held: the letter of Feb. 1874, pledged to the bank the joint liability of the firm of S. & Co., & also the separate liability of each of the three partners who signed it, & the bank were entitled to prove against the separate estate of F. for the amount due to them by N. & Co. under the credit.—*Re SMITH, FLEMING & Co., Ex p. 346. Separate instruments written on same material—Indorsement making payment on promissory note conditional.]—Upon an instrument in the common form of a joint & several promissory note, signed by three persons, there is an indorsement written at the time of signing it, stating that the note is taken as a security for all balances to the amount of the sum within specified which one of the three might happen to owe to the payee; that the note should be in force six months; & that no money should be liable to be called for sooner in any case. In an action against one of the sureties, the payee cannot declare upon this instrument, as a promissory note, payable either on demand, or at six months after date. Between these parties, the instrument is an agreement & must be stamped & declared upon as such.—LEEDS v. LANCASHIRE (1809), 2 Camp. 205, N. 1.

347. — Indorsement affecting use of promissory note.—A., B., & C. made a joint & several promissory note for £100, payable to pliffs., trustees of a banking co., or their order, on demand. A memorandum, indorsed on the note at the same time, signed by A., B., & C., stated that the note was given to secure floating advances made by the co. to A., from the respective times when such advances had been or might be made, together with commission, etc., not exceeding in the whole, at any one time, the sum of £100. In an action by the payees of the note against C., to which he pleaded Stat. Limitations, pliffs. proved payments by A., in reduction of the floating balance, within six years, & sought to use the memorandum indorsed on the note to show that such payments had reference to the note: Held: it could not be read in evidence without an agreement stamp.—CHOLMELEY v. DARLEY (1845), 14 M. & W. 341; 14 L. J. Ex. 328; 5 L. T. O. S. 267; 153 E. R. 507.

348. — Signature by surety of promissory note while in hands of payee—Previous agreement as to signatures.—A note beginning "I promise to pay," signed by two parties, is joint & several. A promissory note is signed by A., & subsequently by B., whilst in the hands of the payee, as surety for A.; unless such signature of B. is in virtue of a previous agreement at the time of making the note, it will be void, without an additional stamp.—*CLERK v. 352. — Guarantee by third party in lease of licensed premises.—A., by written contract, agreed to take a public-house of S. at a certain rent, & to buy of S. all the beer which should be sold & consumed on the premises, under a penalty of £30 for every barrel bought of any other person; & to quit on six months' notice, under a penalty of £30 per month for holding over. At the end of this instrument was written: " & it is further agreed by O." (who was not previously made party to the contract) " that he will hold himself responsible for any amount of money which may become due from A. to S., that is to say to the amount of £30." The names of S., O. & A. were subscribed:—Held: in an action by S. against O. on the guarantee, a lease stamp was not sufficient, but that an agreement stamp was necessary in respect of O.'s guarantee, for the payment of penalties.—WHARTON v. WALTON (1815), 7 Q. B. 171; 14 L. J. Q. B. 321; 5 L. T. O. S. 171; 9 Jur. 638; 115 E. R. 567.

353. Agreement of three persons to indemnify another.—By a written agreement, three persons bound themselves that in consideration of A.'s discharging a debt due from B. to C., amounting to £200, with the costs thereupon, each of the three would severally pay £50, & one fourth part of such costs, & give a bond, bill, or note for his own proportion:—Held: the agreement required only one stamp.—*RAMSBOTTOM v. 354. Memorandum of guarantee not stating consideration.—A document may require a stamp under Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), s. 1, to render it admissible in evidence, even though in itself it does not constitute an entire agreement or show a liability, but requires further parol evidence to show consideration:—Held: a document in the following form required a stamp: " Aug. 2. According to H.'s request, the land at B. under E. I will be bound for till next Lady day; rent £18."—GLOVER v. HALKETT (1857), 2 H. & N. 487; 26 L. J. Ex. 416; 29 L. T. O. S. 261; 3 Jur. N. The vendee having accepted a bill of exchange for the price of the goods, & becoming bkpt. before the bill became due, the guarantee who paid the vendor after the bkpy. of the vendee may recover back the money from the latter, without proving that any demand was made upon him as acceptor of the bill, before such payment by the guarantee; this not being an action upon the bill itself; & the notorious insolvency of the vendee acceptor being at least a prima facie warrant to the guarantee to dispense with the making of such demand by the vendor who held the bill; however, it might still be competent for the vendee to defend himself against this action by the guarantee, by showing that if a demand for payment had been made upon him by the holder, the bill would have been paid.—*WARRINGTON v. 392. — — — — —]—A bond made by deft.'s testator as surety for E. with a condition reciting that E. had been & still was collector of the land tax & all other taxes & duties imposed by several Acts of Parliament on the inhabitants of the parish of C., by means whereof he received from the inhabitants of the parish of C. divers sums of money & conditioned for the due payment by E. from time to time & at all times thereafter, to the receiver general of taxes, etc., all & every such sum which he, E., should from time to time collect & receive from the inhabitants of the parish for or on account of any tax or taxes then imposed, or which should or might thereafter be imposed by any Act of Parliament, was held to be confined to the current year for which E. was, at the date of the bond, collector, although it did not appear on the condition that he was only appointed for a year; it being shown by deft.'s plea that the said office of collector was an annual office & held as such by E. at the date of the bond, although it appeared by the replication that E. held the office not only for that year, but from thence to the time of exhibiting plff.'s bill.

Here is an express mention of duties thereafter to be imposed, which shows that the surety meant to continue his responsibility beyond the period of the current year; inasmuch as it could not be supposed probable that any duties would be imposed, so as to come into collection between Dec. 5 & Apr. 5 following. On the construction of this part of the condition the whole question turns. Assuming it to be improbable that taxes should be imposed between the times above stated, still it was not impossible, & the words might have been introduced ex abundanti cautela; & certainly they do not necessarily import that the duties should be collected by him after the expiration of the current year. The words of

A., the secretary of a board, & B., as his surety, gave a bond of office, reciting that it was required that security should be given for the faithful performance of & all duties pertaining to such office, & conditioned that A. should correctly keep any moneys & papers belonging to the board, & the recital which afford the best ground for gathering the meaning of the parties, do not advert to any such collection. Besides, as the consequence of giving to the condition a more enlarged construction, so as to extend the responsibility beyond the current year, would be of so grievous & burdensome a nature, we think it requires more clear & certain words than are to be found in this instrument. If the bond may continue beyond the current year, it may do so for the life of the collector during the whole period of his remaining in office; it will attach on the surety whenever the person for whom he undertakes is in default; & we know of no means subsisting at common law by which the surety can redeem himself from this interminable risk. All the cases from Arlington v. Merrick, No. 390, ante, to St. Saviour's (Southwark) v. Bostock, No. 1248, post, have narrowed the construction of conditions of this sort to the actual term of office (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—HASSELL v. LONG (1814), 2 M. & S. 363; 105 E. 393. ————]—A bond, with one surety only, taken by comrs. of taxes under 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 13, is not, therefore, void.

The office of collector under that Act is an annual office; &, therefore, where a bond, after reciting the appointment of W. to be collector under the Act, was conditioned for the due collection by W. of the rates & duties at all times thereafter:—Held: the due collection of the rates for one year was a compliance with the condition of the bond.

It is true that the words "at all times hereafter" in the condition of the bond, would, taken by themselves, extend the liability of the surety beyond that period, but these words must be construed with reference to the recital & to the nature of the appointment there mentioned, & the recital is that W. & P. had been appointed collectors under the Act. If the statute make it an annual office it is unnecessary to state that either in the bond or in pleading (ABBOT, C.J.).—PEPPIN v. COOPER (1819), 2 B. & Ald. 431; 106 E. R. 423.

On demurrer to the replication:—Held: (1) the allegation in the plea, as to the time for which J. was in fact appointed, had the same effect as if the period of the appointment were recited in the condition; (2) the plea showed a good defence, the liability of deft. on the bond not extending beyond the specified year; (3) the replication did not answer the plea, for that it did not show more than a fresh appointment by parol, which would not be comprehended in the condition of the bond.—*KITSON v. for any moneys which at any time thereafter might come into his hands as such secretary, & A. received & made default in respect of moneys improperly paid to him as received by A., which were outside the duties pertaining to his office.—KIRTH v. FENELON FALLS, UNION SCHOOL SECTION (1882), 3 O. R. 194.—CAN.

397. Appointment “during pleasure”—Condition for performance while holding office—Rate collector.]—A person appointed to act as overseer for collecting borough rate in a portion of a parish, under 7 Will. 4, & 1 Vict. c. 81, s. 3, is not one of the borough officers who are to be appointed “in every year” under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 58. Qu.: whether such an officer can legally be appointed for an indefinite time, during the pleasure of the council.

Where parties had become sureties in a bond reciting that B. had been appointed to act as overseer for making & levying borough rates in that part of parish A. which lay within the borough of B., during the pleasure of the council, & the bond was conditioned for performance of the duties during such time as A. should act as such overseer:—Held: the sureties were liable beyond the expiration of the year, A. continuing in office; for there was no law limiting the duration of the office to a year, so as to control the express stipulations of the bond.—BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. WRIGHT (1851), 16 Q. B. 623; 20 L. J. Q. B. 211; 16 L. T. O. S. 459; 15 J. P. 510; 15 Jur. 749; 117 E. R. 1019.

398. Retrospective liability—Condition following words of statute.]—Debt on bond made by C. & his sureties, with a condition reciting 27 Geo. 2, c. 35, & that C., four years before the date of bond, was appointed . . . collector of the poor rates to be levied & raised in the parish, & conditioned that C. should account as often as required, for all moneys so collected & received by him, by virtue of the Act, etc. Breach, for not accounting for moneys collected & received since the making of the bond, etc. Plea, that C. accounted for all the moneys collected & received by him before the making of the bond; that the office of collecting is an annual office; that C. accounted for all the moneys collected & received by him within the current year of office in which the bond was made: Held: both pleas were ill, for by the words of the statute the appointment was prospective, to collect future rates, & not retrospective only, & the condition was in the words of the statute without any restraining words.

Upon the question whether the obligation is prospective or retrospective only, there is nothing in the recital to show it retrospective only; & if it had not been intended to go along with the office one would have expected words in the condition to restrain its effect. But the words in the condition are the very words of the Act. Therefore it must be intended that they were meant to be prospective the same as the Act (BAXLEY, J.).—*CURLING v. 399. Liability during appointment at fixed salary—Change in method of remuneration.]—In Jan. 1851, deft. as surety, executed a bond to a railway co., which, after reciting that the co. had agreed to appoint L. as their clerk or agent, for the purpose of selling coal, at a yearly salary of £100, was conditioned for the due accounting by L. of all moneys received by him for the use of the co. L. performed the duties of such clerk or agent at the above salary until May, 1851, when it was agreed between L. & the co. to substitute for such salary a commission of 6d. per ton on all coal for which he should obtain orders. From that time L. was paid for his services by such commission, which amounted to a larger sum than the fixed salary. In 1852, L. was indebted to the company for sums which he did not pay over; & the co. having sued deft. on the bond:—Held: the condition of the bond was restrained by the recital, so that deft. as surety, only undertook to be responsible for the faithful conduct of L. whilst he continued clerk at such fixed salary & consequently deft. was not liable after the change in the mode of remuneration.—*NORTH WESTERN RY. —Deft. as surety, executed a bond, the condition of which recited an agreement between the directors of an East Indian Ry. Co. & P., whereby it was agreed that P. should forthwith proceed to such place in the East Indies at such time, & by such conveyance as the co. should direct & should there serve the co. as engineer at a certain salary per month, to commence from the day of his embarkation at Southampton. The condition was in the terms of the recited agreement, but mentioned no place of embarkation. The co. paid for the passage of P. to India, on board a vessel about to leave Southampton; but the bond not having been executed in sufficient time to enable him to go by that vessel, he was directed by the co. to go by way of Marseilles, & so meet the vessel. He embarked at Dover but never reached Marseilles & in a short time returned to this country:—Held: the condition of the bond was not restrained by the recital, & consequently the surety was liable, notwithstanding the principal did not embark at Southampton.—*EVANS v. Appointment as treasurer for year—Condition as to future elections—Change in law—Office made tenable during pleasure.]—5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 58, required that the council of a borough should annually elect the treasurer of the borough. While that Act was in force, M. was elected treasurer of the borough of B. for “the year ending Nov. 9, 1812, if it should so long please the said council, but not otherwise.” He gave bond with sureties for the due discharge of the duties of his office. The bond recited the election, & was conditioned for the due accounting by M. for all such moneys, etc. “as I, the said M., shall or may recover, or receive, in virtue of my said appointment as treasurer as aforesaid, during the whole time of my continuing in the said office in consequence of the said election, or under any annual or other future election of the said council, to the said office.” After the bond had been given, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, was passed. Sect. 6 of that Act repealed sect. 58 of the previous statute, & directed that, instead of the treasurer being annually elected, he should “hold his office during the pleasure of the council for the time being.” M. was re-elected in Nov. 1843, after the passing of this latter statute; no fresh bond was taken:—Held: under the original bond, the sureties continued liable; the election in Nov. 1843, was “a future election" within the true intent & meaning of the bond; that M. did continue in the office of treasurer within the true intent & meaning of the said bond.—*OSWALD v. To prove consideration.—See, note, Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (c. 97), s. 3; & see Part III., Sect. 3, sub-sect. 4, B. (b), ante.

402. General rule—Where ambiguity—Admissible.—Declaration in assumpsit, stating that deft. promised, in consideration that plffs., at his request, would give up to him a certain guarantee of £10,000 on behalf of L., then held by plffs. Averment, that plffs. gave up the guarantee, but deft. did not perform his promise. Plea, that the guarantee was a promise to answer for the debt of another, & that there was no agreement, etc., in writing, wherein any sufficient consideration was stated according to Stat. Frauds, s. 4. The supposed guarantee was contained in the following written memorandum signed by deft.:—"Messrs. H." (plffs.). "In consideration of your being in advance to L. in the sum of £10,000 for the purchase of cotton, I do hereby give you my guarantee for that amount on their behalf. J. B."—Held: (1) the guarantee did not necessarily imply a past advance; (2) plffs., on a trial, might have offered evidence to show that future advances had been contemplated; (3) the paper on which the guarantee was written appeared by the declaration & plea to have been given up by plffs. to deft. & this alone was consideration for a promise; & on the trial of an issue of fact raising the question whether or not the above guarantee had been delivered up the guarantee might be given in evidence though unstamped.—*BROOKS v. —Parol evidence may be given to show, as between the two co-obligors in a bond, that one of them was only a surety for the other. A. & B. join in a bond to secure money, borrowed by B. for the use of a third person; as between A. & B. A. is only a surety.—BOLTON v. COOKE (1825), 3 L. J. O. S. Ch. 87.

406. — Capacity in which money received —

Joint receipt by surety & partner.—The condition of a bond given by deft. to plff., after reciting that A. had been appointed agent for plff., which employment he had accepted, & undertaken to perform the trusts thereof, was declared to be that, if A. should, during his continuance in such employment, faithfully demean & conduct himself, & when required, account for & pay to plff. all moneys which he had received or should thereafter receive for plff.'s use, the bond should be void. Declaration on the bond set out the condition, & averred that, while A. remained in the employment of plff., as agent aforesaid, A. received for the use of plff. moneys, amounting, etc., but did not, when required, account, etc. Plea; that A. did not, while he remained in the service of plff. as such agent as in the declaration mentioned, receive for the use of plff. the sums mentioned.—Held: plff. did not support the issue by proof that A. & B., as partners, were employed by plff. as agents, & in that character had jointly received money for plff.'s use, it appearing that A. had never been employed by plff., or received money for him solely; & no difference would be made by proof that deft. knew that A. was to be employed only as partner with B.

security on other real property for the payment of moneys, to which plff. agreed; & plff. averred that, in consideration that he would allow the assignment to be put on record, deft. promised that the arrangement made with N. for the payment of the balance should be duly carried out, otherwise defts. would pay plff. £135, that being the sum to be secured. The guarantee, when produced, showed that defts. had not agreed absolutely to secure plff., as alleged, but to pay the £135 if N. did not do so.—Held: oral evidence of an agreement to the effect declared upon was inadmissible.—*IRVINE v. ascertained from the words of the instrument. We may indeed look at the circumstances which occurred at the time, in order to understand what the parties were about, but when, as here, a bond has an express meaning in the words which it contains, we are not to admit any evidence to diminish or enlarge its meaning (COLERIDGE, J.).—LONDON ASSURANCE CO. v. BOLD (1844), 6 Q. B. 514; 14 L. J. Q. B. 50; 4 L. T. O. S. 112; 8 Jur. 1118; 115 E. R. 192.

407. — Capacity in which guarantee signed—Principal or agent.]—By arts. of agreement under seal between A. & co., & Y. & co., Y. & co. agreed to do certain work for which A. & co. were to make certain payments, & the agreement contained this clause, "It is further understood between the parties to this contract that S. guarantees payment to Y. & co., of all moneys due to them under this contract." The attestation clause was "signed & delivered by Y. & co. in the presence of 'C. T.' & S., acting under a power of attorney, signed as follows:—"P.P.A. A. & co., J.S." Y. & co., sued S. as guarantor, & evidence was given at the trial of statements by S. at the time of execution, that he intended to sign on his own behalf as well as on that of A. & co. A verdict was found for plffs. S. moved for a new trial on the ground that he had not signed the guarantee: Held: evidence that S. intended to sign in his own right as well as on behalf of A. & co., did not contradict the document, & was admissible, & that S. must be taken to have signed as a contracting party.—YOUNG v. SCHULER (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 651; 49 L. T. 546, C. A.

408. To identify debt guaranteed—More than one debt in existence.]—A promise in writing to pay a debt, to be transferred from promisor's account to that of a third party, his agent:—Held: valid, as a guarantee, & parol evidence admitted to identify the debt.

There appear to have been two debts, & the dispute is as to which of them the promise applies. That can be proved by parol, for though by Stat. Frauds, the contract must be in writing, the ambiguity is latent & raised by parol evidence, & therefore may be removed by parol evidence (BRAMWELL, B.). BRUNTON v. DULLENS (1859), 1 F. & F. 450.

409. To supply consideration.]—SHORTREDE v. CHEEK, No. 712, post.

410. — Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (c. 97), s. 3.]—(1) Since above sect. though parol evidence may supply the consideration for a guarantee, it cannot be admitted to explain the promise.

Above sect. does not make a promise good which was not good before (BYLES, J.).

Above sect. intended to exclude parol testimony as to the terms of the promise itself (COCKBURN, C.J.).

(2) In a letter written by deft. to plff., relating to a proposed mtge., the following words are not a sufficient guarantee within Stat. Frauds, s. 4—"I will take any responsibility myself respecting it, should there be any."

The letter, if read by itself, without reference to any previous conversations, would be a promise to be responsible for any sum of money, however large, at any rate of interest secured by any kind of mtge. on any land, with any title. That would be an unreasonable construction & is not its true meaning. It evidently refers to previous conversations in which these particulars were supplied. The whole promise, therefore, is not in writing, as the statute [of Frauds] requires that it should be. [The contract] cannot be made out without reference to previous conversations. A consideration expressed in writing formerly discharged two offices, it sustained the promise & might also explain it. Now, however, parol evidence, though it may supply the consideration, cannot go further & explain the promise (WILLIAMS, J.).—HOLMES v. MITCHELL (1859), 7 C. B. N. S. 361; 28 L. J. C. P. 301; 6 Jur. D. who was president of deft. co. The note was given in part payment of goods supplied by plffs. to deft. co. Deft. co. did not appear at the trial, but deft. D. appeared & set up an oral agreement made by him with plffs., contemporaneous with the promissory note, that he was not to be called upon to pay if the goods supplied to deft. co. should be unequal to sample. The goods were retained by deft. co., but D. proved that they were unequal to sample:—Held: the oral agreement relied upon by D. not being an agreement suspending the coming into force of the contract contained in the promissory note, but being an agreement in defeasance of that contract, evidence in support of it was inadmissible, & D. was liable on the promissory note.—HITCHINGS & COULT-HURST CO. v. ## SECT. 3.—WHETHER CONSIDERATION PAST OR FUTURE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

413. Future consideration presumed—Ut res magis valeat quam pereat.—S. & another, the deacons of a Baptist Congregation, being receivers of its general funds, & managers of its finances, bound themselves, by writing, to E., then resigning the office of minister of the church, to repay him, with half-yearly interest, £700, which he had advanced for the building of a chapel. Besides the general revenue above-mentioned, there were funds vested in trustees, which were usually applied to the maintenance of the minister for the time being, & were likewise applicable to the relief of the poor. After the undertaking to E., a new minister was appointed; & he agreed with the congregation that he would be responsible to S., who was still deacon, & to any future deacon or deacons, for the continued repayment of E.'s debt; & he also consented that periodical payments of it should be made out of the trust funds. S. afterwards resigned; & the new minister gave him a written undertaking as follows: "In consideration of your having resigned the office of deacon & your connection with the Baptist church" at, etc., "I hereby agree to hold myself responsible to you for the payment of the sum of £150, due to the Rev. E. by the Baptist church," etc., " & also the interest for the same, at the rate " etc., " being the residue of the sum of £700, principal & interest, remaining unpaid, for which you became responsible," etc. "By an instrument," etc.:—Held: the written instrument given by the minister showed a valid contract; for that the words might import either a past or a concurrent consideration on S.'s part, & that construction was to be preferred which made the instrument good.—STEELE v. HOE (1849), 14 Q. B. 431; 19 L. J. Q. B. 89; 14 L. T. O. S. 327; 14 Jur. 147; 117 E. R. 168.

415. "Having agreed" to stay action.]—Declaration, in assumpsit, stated that T. had commenced an action against M. for £165; & that, in consideration of T.'s "agreeing to stay the said action," debt. promised to pay T. the £165 within six months next after the decease of A. The promise, as proved, was, to pay, as above, in consideration of T.'s "having agreed" to stay the action:—Held: no variance; & a valid consideration was proved.—TANNER v. MOORE (1846), 9 Q. B. 1; 15 L. J. Q. B. 391; 7 L. T. O. S. 202; 11 Jur. 11; 115 E. R. 1176.

Annotation:—Reid. Goldshede v. Swan (1847), 1 Exch. 154.

416. "Having released" debt.]—In an action of assumpsit on a guarantee, plff., in support of an averment in the declaration, that he had executed a certain indenture, gave in evidence the following document, signed by debt.: "In consideration of your having by indenture agreed to accept payment of the debt owing to you by W., by the following instalments; that is to say, 10s. in the pound, on Aug. 18, next, etc., I promise to guarantee the payment of the instalments." There was evidence that, when W.'s creditors received the guarantee, they signed the deed at the same time:—Held: the true construction of the guarantee was, "that, if at some future time plff. shall have released the debt, debt. will guarantee the same to him": & therefore, that it did not prove the averment in the declaration.

The guarantee was as follows:—"In consideration of your having, by indenture bearing date Feb. 18, 1847, agreed to accept payment of the debt owing to you by W., amounting to the sum of £650 by the following instalments: that is to say £325, part thereof, being at the rate of 10s. in the pound on Aug. 18, 1847, & £325, the residue of the said debt, on Feb. 18, 1848, & of your having, by the same indenture, released the said W. from such debt, I do hereby guarantee to you the payment of such debt or sum of £650 at the times & in manner aforesaid. Dated Feb. 18, 1847." This guarantee was signed by debt. at an antecedent period but being delivered to his attorney to be handed over to plff. we think that it must be considered as an admission made by debt. on the day on which it was so handed over & is the same as if it had been written & spoken by debt. at that time. What then is the true construction of the guarantee? The ct. may treat those words ["having released"] as meaning that if at some future time plff. shall have released the debt, debt. will guarantee the same to him. If this be so, the declaration will be supported, but the admission will not prove the averment that, in fact, such a release was executed. We think this is the true construction of this guarantee (ALDERSON, B.).—KING v. COLE (1818), 2 Exch. 628; 17 L. J. Ex. 283; 154 E. R. 642.

On demurrer to the declaration:—Held: (1) the circumstances stated in the declaration might be looked at to explain the meaning of the writing. (2) The writing, so explained, showed a good consideration for deft.'s promise, namely, the future advances by pltf. to L., so as to satisfy sect. 4 of Stat. Frauds. (3) This consideration appeared by the writing itself, independently of the other circumstances stated.

You may explain the meaning of the words used by any legal means. Of such legal means one is, to look at the situation of the parties. Till you have done that, it is a fallacy to say that the language is ambiguous, that which ends in certainty is not ambiguous. Now one ambiguity, when the instrument alone is looked at is the time to which the writer refers. He often puts himself in such a position as to anticipate the time, & thus uses a word which ordinarily denotes present time, to denote the future. In order to know what he means, you may look at the context of the instrument, & at the surrounding circumstances (COLERIDGE, J.).—BAINBRIDGE v. WADE (1850), 16 Q. B. 89; 20 L. J. Q. B. 7; 16 L. T. O. S. 170; 15 Jur. 572; 117 E. R. 808.

DAWSON* (1851), 10 C. B. 765; 20 L. J. C. P. 154; 17 L. T. O. S. 125; 15 Jur. 680; 138 E. R. 302.

427. —“Goods supplied.”]—A guarantee in the following form, “Gentlemen,—As Mr. D. informs me you require some person as guarantee for goods supplied to him by you in his business, I have no objection to act as such for payment of your account,” is not on its face a guarantee in respect of a past supply, but is to be read as for goods to be supplied.

Semble: if it were ambiguous, or primarily imported a past consideration, parol evidence would be admissible to show that the parties intended it to refer to a future supply.

Therefore to a declaration that in consideration the pltf. would sell & deliver from time to time goods to D. on credit, deft. guaranteed & promised pltf. to be responsible for the payment of the price, & averring a delivery & non-payment by D. or deft., a plea merely setting out the guarantee in the above terms, was held bad on demurrer.

I think that in construing mercantile instruments you must look at, & are entitled to have given in evidence all the surrounding circumstances, so as to know what the parties meant (POLLOCK, C.B.).—*HOAD v. d. “Used” & “delivered.”]—I hereby guarantee the payment of three stone pitchforks “used” by M., “delivered” by us §87 10s.:—Held: the words “used” & “delivered” in the guarantee were applicable to the pitchforks to be delivered as well as those already delivered, & oral evidence was admissible to explain the surrounding circumstances, in order to arrive at the meaning in which these ambiguous expressions were used.—SMITH v. PARNMAN (1883), 4 N. S. W. L. R. 274.—AUS.

e. “Upon request to him or them made.”]—The condition was, that a treasurer, his exors. or administrators, at the expiration of his office, upon request to him or them made, should give a just account of all moneys received, & should pay & deliver over all balances due:—Held: the words “upon request to him or them made” applied both to the giving an account

& to the paying over.—BRUCE COUNTY CORPN. v. TROWAR (1863), 22 U. C. R. 321.—CAN.

1. Request to “push forward” work.]—Pltf. agreed with M. to repair a boiler in the latter's sawmill. During the progress of the work he received the following letter from the deft.: “As M.'s sawmill is about to come into my hands right away, & as I am to assume the expense of repairs to the boiler, be good enough to push forward the work to be done by you on the boiler as fast as possible; everything at present is at a standstill waiting on

They continued to supply him till Nov. 1840, & the whole transactions between the parties had been to the amount of £814, of which £611 were paid, & plffs. now sued deft. on his guarantee for £100:—Held: the guarantee applied only to an account existing at the time it was given & was not a continuing security for an account to be running on, because the plain meaning of the word "account" is an account then existing.—*ALLNUTT v. The firm, having failed, made an assignment in which S. was preferred to the amount of £3,565, represented as made up of loans & advances to the firm. The machinery was shipped to M., the last shipment being made on May 6, & M. gave his note payable in six months from that day, six months' credit being plffs.' usual course of dealing:—Held: taking the guarantee in connection with the surrounding circumstances it must be referred to the specific order which M. had given; & deft.'s liability arose immediately on M.'s default at the expiration of the six months' credit.—*BOYLE v. I doubt whether, in this case there would be any difference between law & equity. In the case of a surety the only difference between law & equity is, that an equity may arise where the position of the surety is established & that a ct. of equity will protect that equity. But I have yet to learn that there is any difference between law & equity as to the terms or effect of a written instrument (WILLIAMS, J.).—M'KEWAN v. THORNTON (1861), 2 F. & F. 591, N. P.

(2) Under a guarantee the debt is contingent only: therefore a debt accrued by default after the bkpy. of the surety, cannot be proved under the Commission.

A claim cannot be sustained for the price of goods as to which the credit had not expired, being under the word "guarantee" a contingent demand; therefore no debt arising until default

The ct. is not administering D.'s [the surety's] estate. It is not called upon to distribute the residue while it is uncertain whether a claim may not be made on the exor. in consequence of this bond. The exor. is not seeking its protection against an eventual legal liability. But a person who is as yet no creditor, & who may never become one, is claiming to force out of the hands of the exor. the utmost extent of what can ever become due. I cannot make such a decree without laying it down as a rule, that, whenever a person bound in an obligation of this sort dies, a ct. of equity will compel his exor. to bring into ct. the whole amount of the penalty of the bond. I can find no trace of the exercise of any such jurisdiction & must dismiss the bill (GRANT, M.R.).

The exors. of the father, who died in 1908, sued the bank in 1913 to recover the securities which were deposited under the agreement of 1903:—Held: the agreement in 1903 did not constitute a continuing guarantee within Indian Contract Act, s. 129, revoked under sect. 131 by the father's death.—SEN v. at an actually existing debt, & must be provided or before simple contract creditors are paid.

There seems to me no doubt whatever as to the legal effect & construction of the covenant. It is a joint & several covenant, but for the purposes of the present discussion I must treat it as the several covenant of this testator, the covenant being the creditor who claims. It appears from the instrument which contains the covenant that testator joined as a covenantor as surety on behalf of L.; that, however, appears from the language of the instrument to be immaterial. Pltff. in this case is a simple contract creditor suing on behalf of himself & all the other creditors for administration of the estate. The estate is insolvent. It has been argued that this covenant in respect of £1,000 which will be payable in 1858 is only to be construed, for the purpose of administering the assets, as creating a contingent debt. I have not been able to follow the argument that, the covenant being one in the way of suretyship, a surety is not called upon to pay at all if the principal debtor should pay, & that this makes the debt contingent. It would be a very imperfect suretyship if it did not absolutely bind the surety to pay the debt of his principal, & I have never heard that, because the principal debtor may pay, the surety is to be discharged (STUART, V.-C.).—ATKINSON v. GREY (1853), 1 Sm. & G. 577; 23 L. T. O. S. 181; 18 Jur. 282; 65 E. R. 253.

Goods were supplied to D. upon the faith of this guarantee, & a balance exceeding £200 was due in respect thereof. In June 1853, B. became bkpt. & duly obtained his certificate:—Held: B's liability upon this guarantee was not a "contingent liability" within 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178, & his certificate was no bar to a claim in respect of goods supplied to D. after the bkpcy. of B.—BOYD v. ROBINS & LANGLANDS (1859), 5 C. B. N. S. 597; 28 L. J. C. P. 73; 5 Jur. N. S. 915; 7 W. R. 78; 111 E. R. 240, Ex. Ch.

449. Disposition by surety of property.—To evade liability.—Void.]—A tradesman mortgaged the freehold house in which he carried on his trade, being his only real estate, to secure an existing debt of £1,100 for which he was liable as surety, which exceeded the value of the mtged. property. His other property was of very trifling amount. He was at the time liable as surety on a promissory note for £2,000, & afterwards the other makers having become insolvent, he was called upon for payment, & became bkpt.:

—Held: the mtge. was void as against the assignees of the bkpcy., as being an assignment made to defeat or delay creditors.

A surety is no more justified in placing the whole of his property out of the reach of liability to pay the debt, than if he were the principal debtor (TURNER, L.J.).—GOODRICK v. TAYLOR (1864), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 135; 3 New Rep. 678; 10 L. T. 113; 10 Jur. N. S. 414; 12 W. R. 632; 3 E. R. 326, L.J.J.

The son having made a composition with his creditors, the bank claimed to be paid the amount of the guarantee:—Held: the liability under the guarantee must be regarded as a substantial one; an intention to hinder or delay creditors must be inferred; & the settlement was invalid.—Re RIDLER, RIDLER v. RIDLER (1882), 22 Ch. D. 71; 52 L. J. Ch. 313; 48 L. T. 96; 47 J. P. 279; 31 W. R. 93, C. A.

SECT. 2.—WHEN LIABILITY ARISES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—DEFAULT OF PRINCIPAL DEBTOR.

A. In General.

451. General rule—Liability arises on default.]

The claim made against the estate of P. [deft.], is in respect of his being one of the makers of a promissory note; & his estate can be liable only on the assumption that there was a mistake in the form of the note, & that, in signing as surety, he meant to be severally liable, if the E.'s [principal debtors] did not pay. Now there is nothing to satisfy me, that, if the intention of the parties had been drawn to the circumstance, the creditor would not have been satisfied with the security derived from P.'s becoming jointly liable with the E.'s. But if any argument in favour of presuming a mistake were to arise out of the circumstance that P. is joined as surety, how is the supposed mistake to be rectified? It is said, it may be rectified by making the note joint & several. The effect of making it joint & several would be, that it would not have been necessary for the creditor to sue the E.'s in the first instance, & that he might have proceeded against P. alone, without even joining the E.'s in the action. If P. signed merely as surety, & if effect is to be given to the contract of suretyship, he would not be liable except on the default of the principal debtors. If, therefore, the instrument is to be altered on the ground of its not having carried the intention of the parties into effect, I cannot satisfy myself that their intention would be carried into effect by making

No question in this case can arise on the construction of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 54, that sect. in no way applying. Here the bkpt. is not an annuity debtor, but a party merely undertaking that in certain events he will be liable. It is contended that it comes within sect. 56. I am of a contrary opinion. The words of that sect. are: "if any bkpt. shall before the issuing of any commission have contracted any debt payable upon a contingency," etc. The first step therefore is to ascertain whether any debt is actually contracted at the time of the bkpy. In order to make out that the bkpt. had contracted any debt, you must show that something was owing, that there was a debitum in presenti though solvendum in futuro. The present is said to be such a debt payable on default of B. This is not a joint & separate engagement of both to pay the annuity, but only an additional contract to indemnify in case of the grantor's default; & the grantee had no power whatever to come against the surety till after his principal had made default. This, then, is a mere engagement to become liable in the event of default, till which no liability exists (ERSKINE, C.J.).—*Re WYATT & THOMPSON, Ex p. then accrued, & Stat. Limitations then began to run.

(2) A. guarantees to B. the debt of C. upon condition that no application shall be made to A. on B.'s part, for the amount guaranteed, or any portion thereof, but on the failure of B.'s utmost efforts & legal proceedings to obtain the same from C. C. remains in England two years, then goes abroad insolvent, not having paid the debt to B. No proceedings are taken against him until four years after the guarantee given, when process is issued, & continued on the roll, C. remaining abroad until more than six years after the guarantee given. B. becomes bkpt., before any default is made by A. in the payment of the annuity:—Held: C. could not prove for the value of the annuity, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 54.

The bond was a joint & several bond of deft. & M. & was conditioned after reciting that M. had agreed with pltf. for the sale of an annuity of £20 to be paid to pltf., his exors., etc., during the joint & several lives of pltf. & his wife, for the sum of £150, & that deft. at the request of M. had assented to join in & execute the bond for securing the due & regular payment of the annuity & the receipt by M. of the sum of £150 for the due payment by M. or deft., their or either of their heirs, etc., of the annuity, by two equal half-yearly payments on Dec. 9 & June 9 in every year, during the joint & several lives of pltf. & his wife, & a proportionate part of the half-yearly payment of such annuity in the event of the death of the survivor between the half-yearly days of payment. On the trial, it was proved that deft. had become bkpt. in 1830, that deft. had, down to 1818, paid the half-yearly instalments of the annuity, but on no occasion, until after the days of payment stated in the condition; so that there had been breaches

g. Doubt as to principal debtor's obligation.]—Observed that decree ought not to pass against a cautioner of the bond before deft.'s bkpcy., & it appeared also, more than twenty years before the commencement of the action; & that arrears were then due in respect of breaches committed since 1848:—Held: (1) a new cause of action arose with each successive breach of the condition, & by proof at the trial of breaches committed within twenty years, pltf. was entitled to the verdict upon the issue raised by the plea of Stat. Limitations; (2) deft.'s liability under the above form of bond & condition was that of a surety for M., the grantor of the annuity, & who was alone to be considered as the principal debtor; pltf., therefore, could not have proved under the bkpcy. of deft. in respect of previous breaches & a forfeiture of the bond; & the bkpcy. & certificate of deft. were no defence to the action.

(3) Certain debts payable upon a contingency are specifically provided for in the sections preceding the general enactment in Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act (c. 106), s. 177, & among those are annuities, in respect of which, upon the bkpcy. of the grantor, proof must be made in the required form before resort can be had to the surety whose liability is deferred; & as no provision is made for proof on the bkpcy. of the surety, the grantor being solvent it may be presumed, both from the silence of the legislature & the nature of the liability, that no power for such proof was intended to be given. Although this might be true where the surety contracted expressly to pay on default of the grantor, deft. contended that the form of the present bond created a simultaneous instead of a successive liability. This ground cannot be maintained. The bond shows that the annuity had been already granted. The bond is an instrument beyond the grant. The two are jointly bound, but the one is described as grantor, the other as surety. If the grantor pays, the surety is free; if he makes default, the surety is liable (ERLE, J.). —*AMOTT v. B. & Co. guaranteed the performance by the co. of these terms, holding themselves responsible for the same. The co. drew on the bank, & the bank accepted the bills, but owing to the failure of the bank after the dates when the bills were drawn & before they became due, the co. shipped no tea, & did not perform any of the terms agreed on. All the bills were eventually paid:—Held: the failure of the bank was no reason why the co. should not have performed its part of the contract, & B. & Co. were not relieved from their guarantee.—Re BARBER & Co., Ex p. AGRA BANK (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 725; 39 L. J. Bcy. 39.

An arbitrator to whom the cause was referred found specially that, on a certain day, the clerk made an erroneous balance-sheet, failing to exhibit, as it should have done, a surplus of £100, but that there was no proof that such sum came to the hands of the clerk; & also that, on another occasion, the clerk having received from a customer £213, entered it in the books of the bank as £113, exhibiting on that day's balance sheet a false & unaccounted for surplus of £100: Held: these facts did not show conclusively that the condition of the bond had been broken, so as to call upon the court to interfere with the inference drawn by the arbitrator.—*JERISON v. C. being sent by the manager of the bank, at the request of a customer, to his residence, about eleven miles distant from the bank, for the purpose of receiving a large sum of money to be placed to his account, on his way back lost it: Held: (1) the money was received by C. in the course of his employment, as clerk to the bank; (2) deft. was liable as surety, notwithstanding the finding of the jury, that it was not the custom for bankers in that part of the country to send for their customers' money in the manner adopted.—*MILVILLE v. So held in an action by trustees of such society against sureties of a treasurer, complaining that he had not paid the moneys, to which the sureties pleaded such robbery, committed upon their principal, in

The premises having been put up to auction under the power of sale, were knocked down to W. for £650, & W. paid a deposit of £100 & signed the usual contract. He afterwards declined to complete the purchase, on the ground of the vendor's inability to produce certain receipts for ground rent, & pltf. brought an action against him to recover damages for his alleged breach of contract, which action was still pending: Held: a concurrent action against defts. upon their guarantee was premature, the word "sale" in that instrument meaning a sale completed, so that the deficiency which was to be made good by defts. could be ascertained.—*MOOR v. 474. —.]—It is not necessary, in a declaration against a person on his undertaking to be answerable for or to pay the debt of another, to state an agreement, note, or memorandum, or the terms of any such, or the parties thereto, or that it was in writing or signed by deft.: nor is it necessary to do so in the replication to a plea, averring that no agreement or note or memorandum stating the consideration in writing, signed by deft., was stated or shown. Such a plea held bad on special demurrer. It is not matter of objection to such a declaration, that the consideration for such collateral undertaking as set out is inadequate; for it is not necessary to state a full & adequate consideration to maintain assumpsit on the promise & undertaking. A good & valuable consideration in law is all that is necessary to state for that purpose. Therefore, if the undertaking were to be answerable for & to repay money advanced & to be advanced, to a limited amount to the third person, it cannot be objected that the money already advanced was an insufficient consideration to ground the undertaking. It is not necessary in such a declaration to aver a request made to the party himself, in the first instance, to pay the debt before the guarantee is resorted to: at least an averment, that he had neglected & refused to repay the money, is sufficient for the purpose of maintaining the action against the guarantee.—LILLEY v. HEWITT (1822), 11 Price, 494; 147 E. R. 513.

476. — Stipulated for by contract—Death of principal before demand made—Effect on surety's liability.—A debtor promised to repay to pltf. an advance within three months of the receipt by him of a written notice requiring payment, & deft. agreed to guarantee the repayment of the advance as per the above agreement. The principal debtor died leaving no estate, & neither probate nor letters of administration were taken out. No written notice requiring payment was ever given. In an action against deft. to recover the amount of the advance:—Held: as no notice had been given requiring payment, the condition upon which the money became payable was not fulfilled, & deft. as surety was not liable.—RICKABY v. LEWIS (1905), 22 T. L. R. 130; 50 Sol. Jo. 113.

477. — On bills or promissory notes.—Where a party guarantees the payment of a promissory note, if it be not duly honoured & paid by the maker according to its tenor & effect, he is liable on his guarantee, if the note be not paid by the maker when due, without any presentment to him for that purpose. An action on such guarantee need not aver a presentment of the note by the maker when due, or a request to him to pay it; & if such request be averred, a plea which traverses the request is bad in substance.—*WALTON v. Plff. at the same time, as a surety deposited with the creditor certificates of stock in a joint stock co. as collateral security for the debt. The bill was never presented for payment, nor was notice given to plff. of its non-payment: —Held: the creditor had not discharged plff. from his suretyship by his omission to fill up the drawer's name & to give notice of the non-payment of the bill to plff.

It is said that it was his [the creditor's] duty to present the bills for payment & to give notice to the surety of their non-payment. That depends on the custom of merchants. It was decided years ago that there is a difference in this respect between those who are sureties for the payment of a bill & those who are parties to the bill (LINDLEY, L.J.).—*CARTER v. In Dec. 1866, F. applied for a renewal by means of bills to be accepted by himself alone, & stated M. would guarantee payment. The holder of the bills wrote to M. on Dec. 22, 1866: "We have received a request from F. to renew the bills for £1,048 10s. 5d. & £162 6s. 6d., due respectively on the 28th inst. & the 4th prox. He tells us that you are quite willing to guarantee their payment, & as it is proposed that we draw on him solely in exchange for the above, we must ask your confirmation of the assurance before we can consistently meet his wishes." In reply M. wrote: "I hereby guarantee the payment by F. of two bills you intend to renew for him, one for £1,018 10s. 5d., & the other for £162 6s. 6d., due respectively on the 28th inst. & the 4th prox." The holders, by way of renewal, drew on F. two bills, one for £1,025 6s. 11d., the other for £485 10s., dated Dec. 22, 1866, & payable three months after date, & mentioned this in a letter sent to M.:—Held: on the true construction of the letters, the bills were not to be renewed in the strict sense of the word, but M. guaranteed the payment of the aggregate amount of the old bills.

Bills were to be accepted by F., & M. is asked to guarantee their payment. He guaranteed the aggregate amount of the two bills. It does not appear that any demand was made on F., when the bills became due, but it was decided long ago, in

The debentures were deposited, & the directors gave a guarantee which was expressed as being given to protect plffs. from loss on the realisation of the debentures, agreeing to pay to plffs. on demand all sums owing by the co., the amount ultimately recoverable under the guarantee not to exceed £6,100 with interest "from the time of default of payment by the co. or from the time of your demanding payment thereof from us." to the effect, "United Counties Bank, Ltd., as from Feb. 13, 1907." The co.'s accounts were transferred in those books to the name of the new bank, & the co. paid interest on the loan account by cheques drawn on the current account in favour of the new bank. In 1912 plffs. demanded payment from the co. of the amounts owing & commenced an action to enforce the debentures, in which they realised a certain sum; & in 1915 they commenced an action on the guarantee against deft. as the committee of S. for the amounts accrued due on the loan account & current account less the amount realised on the debentures. On appeal by deft.: Held: (1) the loan account & the current account could not be treated as one, & subsequent payments into the current account could not be taken as satisfying the loan account; (2) plffs.' claim was not barred by Stat. Limitations, as no cause of action arose against the surety until demand had been made by plffs., & no demand was made till 1912; (3) the transactions arising out of the amalgamation of plffs. with the new bank & the dealings with the accounts, even if these could be said to amount to a novation, did not discharge the surety; (4) deft. was liable for the amount accrued due on the loan account.

(5) Deft. also contended that the claim was barred by Stat. Limitations. The judge held that this defence failed because the claim had been kept alive by the payment of interest by the principal debtor, the co. I cannot agree with this reason, which is contrary to Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (c. 97) (PICKFORD, L.J.).

at all. It is evidently a mere agreement between the principal debtor & the surety that the former will pay off the advance within three years (BYLES, J.).

It is impossible to imagine any state of circumstance which could make this amount to a good plea. It could only be so if it could be read as disclosing an agreement on the part of pltf. that he would sue the principal debtor in the event of the note remaining unpaid at the expiration of the three years. In order to take advantage of the proviso in 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 13, that no bond shall be put in a suit against a surety for a collector for any deficiency "other than shall remain unsatisfied after sale of lands, etc., of such collector," the plea must aver that there were lands, etc., of the collector which might have been seized & sold to supply the deficiency.—*WILKS v. H.'s effects were seized & sold under a commission of bkpcy., the trustee to whom they had been conveyed by the deed in question having, with the knowledge & assent of deft., omitted to take possession of them in time:—Held: pltf. was not barred from suing deft. on the bills. *LANCASTER v. 507. ——— Omission to prosecute for felony—Fidelity guarantee.]—F., who was about to employ M. in a situation of trust & confidence, effected a policy with a guarantee co. to secure

The policy, which was for £1,000, declared that "subject to the conditions herein contained, which shall be conditions precedent to the right on the part of the employer to recover under this policy," the co. undertook to reimburse any pecuniary loss sustained by the employer from "the fraud or dishonesty of the employed, as should amount to embezzlement of money, as should be discovered within three months of the death, dismissal, or retirement of the employed." The employer was to give notice of the claim, & proofs were to be given such as the directors for the time being might require. Then followed this proviso: "Provided that the employer shall if, & when, required by the co. but at the expense of the co., if a conviction be obtained, use all diligence in prosecuting the employed to conviction for any fraud or dishonesty in consequence of which a claim shall have been made under this policy, & shall, at the co.'s expense, give all information & assistance to enable the co. to sue for & obtain reimbursement, by the employed, or by his estate, of any moneys which the co. shall have become liable to pay." F. claimed under this policy a sum of money alleged to have been lost by M.'s embezzlement. The directors pleaded that they had required F. to prosecute M., but that F. had not done so. Demurrer, because it did not appear that there was any obligation on F. to prosecute M., or that the non-performance of any such obligation was a condition precedent to F.'s right to recover:—Held: the proviso did constitute a condition precedent, & furnished a defence to the action.—*LONDON GUARANTEE CO. v. Three out of the four signed the guarantee, but the fourth did not sign, though willing to do so, & then died:—Held: the three who signed were not liable to the bank on the guarantee.—NATIONAL PROVINCIAL BANK OF ENGLAND v. BRACKENBURY (1906), 22 T. L. R. 797.

523. Joinder not a term of contract Liability of surety.—To a declaration stating that T. was the lessee of certain tolls, & that S. & defts. agreed to join with T. in a bond conditioned for payment of the rent under the lease & alleging as a breach that deft. refused to join T. in the bond, deft. pleaded that at the time of tendering the bond to him, S. had not executed the same, nor was he present [on that occasion] ready to execute it jointly with deft. & that S. died before the commencement of the suit, & that before his death the bond was not tendered to deft. for execution, nor was he requested to execute it:—Held: the pleas were bad.

The agreement must receive the same interpretation as it would have borne at the time when it was signed. It is a contract by each of the intended sureties to join in the bond with T., the principal, i.e. to execute the bond in the character of surety. It is not a contract that they shall execute it in the presence of each other, or that if one die, the other shall be at liberty to refuse to execute it (LORD ABINGER, C.B.).

What deft. undertook was to join with T. in the bond. The only condition precedent was the execution of the bond by T. He has executed it, but deft. refuses to do so. I think he has no right so to refuse; it is no part of the agreement that he shall join with the other surety in the execution (ALDERSON, B.).—HORNE v. RAMSDALE (1842), 9 M. & W. 329; 11 L. J. Ex. 100; 152 E. R. 140.

524. — — —.]—By an indenture expressed to be made between G. of the first part, deft. & two others, as sureties of G. of the second part, & plffs. of the third part, G., deft., & the two other sureties, jointly & severally covenanted to repay plffs. moneys advanced by them to G. Deft. having been sued for a breach of his covenant, pleaded that he executed the indenture in the faith that P., one of the sureties, should join therein & execute the same; & that P. never did join therein or execute the same:—Held: a bad plea.

Deft. does not say that he never did seal or deliver, nor that he delivered the deed as an escrow on condition that P. should execute, nor that he was betrayed into sealing & delivering on the faith that he was not to be bound unless P. executed; & I can find nothing on the face of the plea to lead to the conclusion that there was any such stipulation. All deft. says is, that he executed the deed on the faith that P. should execute it. That is clearly not sufficient. If deft. delivered the deed as an escrow on condition that he was not to be bound unless P. executed, he should have so pleaded (CRESWELL, J.).—CUMBERLEGE v. LAWSON (1857), 1 C. B. N. There were covenants by the mtgor. & the two other sureties to pay the interest, etc., & to pay the premiums on the policy & any sums necessary for effecting another if it should become void. There was a power of sale by the mtgee. of the hereditaments & the policy. Deft. covenanted that if the mtgee. should be made to execute the power of sale, or if the proceeds should not be sufficient, he would pay the deficiency to the amount of £300. To an action on this covenant it was pleaded that no policy was effected & that R. one of the sureties, had not executed the deed:—Held: (1) it was a condition precedent that a policy should have been effected; (2) in the absence of express provision it was not a condition precedent that the other surety had signed. COYNE v. ELPHECK (1874), 22 W. R. 511.

527. Evidence. In an action against a surety on an equitable plea founded on the non-execution of the security by a co-surety:—Held: there must be evidence of an agreement by plff. with deft. that such co-surety should execute or that deft. executed on the faith of the other's doing so, & where the proposal of another surety came from plffs., & was not at the time made a condition by deft. the defence failed.—TRAILL v. 528. — — —.] Plffs. agreed to discount acceptances of G. provided that G. obtained the following security; first, a policy or guarantee by which the underwriters agreed that if G. failed to meet the acceptances the underwriters would pay the amount, the liability of the underwriters respectively being limited to certain specified amounts; secondly, a policy from defts. by which defts. guaranteed the solvency of the underwriters of the first policy. The first policy was obtained for a total amount of £3,750 & purported to be underwritten by five names, each for £750, but, in fact, the name of one underwriter was signed without his authority, & he, therefore, never became liable upon the policy. The second policy contained a recital that certain underwriters had signed the first policy & that their names & signatures or those of their attorneys were known to defts. G. went into liquidation & failed to meet their acceptances & the four underwriters who were liable on the first policy became insolvent. In an action against defts. on the second policy:—Held: (1) in the absence of evidence of an express agreement to that effect, the fact that one underwriter to the first policy never became liable to plffs. did not charge the remaining four from their liability upon that policy; (2) evidence was not admissible to show that it was a condition precedent to defts.' liability upon the second policy that the fifth underwriter should be liable to plffs. on the first policy inasmuch as the recital in the second policy that the underwriters had signed the first policy was inconsistent with oral evidence that defts. were not to be liable unless the fifth underwriter had subscribed the first policy.—ANGLO-CALIFORNIAN BANK v. LONDON & PROVINCIAL MARINE & GENERAL INSURANCE Co. (1904), 20 T. L. R. 665; 10 Com. Cas. 1.

529. —“Express engagement & understanding”—Sufficiency.—(1) Five directors of a co. gave their joint & several bond to a bank to secure repayment with interest of a loan made by the bank to the co. By an agreement made between five persons interested in the co. of the first part, & the five directors of the second part, after reciting the bond, it was agreed that, in pursuance of an agreement made upon the treaty for the loan by the bank, the liability of the several persons, parties thereto of the second part, under the bond, should be borne & discharged by the ten several persons parties thereto respectively in equal shares & proportions, & that each of the several persons parties thereto, would indemnify the other nine against all actions, etc., in respect of the loan by the bank or in respect of the bond. The co. was ordered to be wound up, & the bank recovered judgment against the obligees of bond for the whole amount of principal & interest due thereunder. One of the guarantors had become insolvent. On a bill by two of the guarantors, who had under the judgment paid more than their proportion of the sum secured by the bond against the other eight guarantors to enforce a ratable contribution from them in respect of the principal, interest, & costs recovered under the bond:—Held: all the solvent guarantors were liable to contribute ratably in respect of the whole amount recovered under the bond, & the extra liability arising from the insolvency of one of the guarantors was not to fall upon defts. to the action at law.

(2) The bank made a further advance to the co. upon the personal security of three of the directors. Five of the guarantors for the amount secured by the bond signed an agreement that they would join the three directors in guaranteeing repayment to the bank of the further advance in equal proportions with the three directors. One of the five who signed this agreement stated by his affidavit that his signature, if he did sign, was obtained “on the express engagement & understanding” that the agreement should be signed by all the guarantors for the sum secured by the bond:—Held: the words “express understanding” were utterly unmeaning, & the ct. would never pay any attention to a statement that something was done on an express engagement, unless the engagement was spoken to in a manner which was admissible in evidence.

If it had been intended that a certain number of individuals should concur, & that if any of them did not concur, the others were not to be bound, so were only to be bound in a special & particular manner & to a particular extent, there was nothing whatever to prevent that being expressed upon the face of the document & the document could not, to my apprehension, if that had been the real agreement, have assumed the particular form which this document has assumed, because it is headed as an act done at a certain meeting, not of all the guarantors, but of the guarantors of the £10,000. That is not the ordinary way in which you would head a document which is not intended to be the act of those who are present at the meeting. Why refer to the meeting at all, if it was meant that persons not at the meeting should be bound (LORD SELBORNE, C.). —DALLAS v. WALLS (1873), 29 L. T. 599, L. C. & J. J.

530. Right to recover from creditor.—If payment made.]—A., as surety to a firm, signed a joint & several bill of exchange, on the faith that B. would join as co-surety. B. never signed it, but A. was afterwards compelled to pay it, by proceedings at law at the suit of an indorsee. One of the firm died, & the others became bkpt.:—Held: the firm were not entitled to avail themselves of the bill, & were liable to repay the amount & the costs of the proceedings both at law & equity.—*RICE v. (b) Execution of Composition Deed by Creditors.

531. Delivery of deed as escrow—Failure of some to execute.]—Before the execution of a composition deed, it was agreed, in the presence of the surety for the payment of the composition, that it should be void unless all the creditors executed it. The surety, at the same interview, afterwards executed the deed in the ordinary way, without saying anything at the time of execution. The deed was then delivered to one of the creditors, in order that he might get it executed by the rest of the creditors:—Held: this was to be considered a delivery of the deed as an escrow, & all the creditors not having executed it, the surety was not bound.—JOHNSON v. BAKER (1821), 4 B. & Ald. 440; 106 E. R. 908.

532. Execution not in terms agreed on.]—A declaration stated, that A. being indebted to plffs. in £7,093, & being unable to pay the amount, requested plffs. to accept a composition of 10s. in the pound on their debt, & to give time for the payment thereof, to which plffs. agreed upon having the same guaranteed to them; & that thereupon deft. addressed a guarantee to plffs., to the following effect; “At the request of A. & in consideration of your agreeing to take 10s. in the pound for your claim on them, amounting to £7,093, & giving them five years to pay off £3,546, being one-half of the debt, or at the rate of 10s. in the pound for the whole, with interest on £3,546, at the rate of £5 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, £3,546 to be paid by the instalments & in the manner mentioned or to be mentioned in your agreement with A., I hereby guarantee to the extent of £500, the payment by A. of £3,546, with interest, as mentioned, in the agreement”; that plffs. & A. subsequently entered into a written agreement, by which plffs. agreed to accept of A. the composition of 10s. in the pound, to be paid by stipulated instalments, on several specified days, extending over a space of five years, in consideration of having the payment of the instalments guaranteed by the persons named in the schedule, & in which deflt.'s name appeared as guaranteeing to the extent of £500. The agreement then contained a proviso, rendering the agreement void, & enabling plffs. to recover the whole of the original debt, in case A. should make default in payment of any instalments on the stipulated days, or should commit any act of bkpcy. on which a fiat should issue. The declaration then averred, that one instalment became due, that default was made in payment thereof by A., that plffs. applied to deflt., but that he had not guaranteed the instalment, & that the same remained unpaid:—Held: bad on general demurrer, on the ground that, upon the true construction of the guarantee, the consideration of deflt.'s promise was that there should be an agreement between plffs. & A., & the agreement entered into by them did not comply with the terms of the guarantee.—CLARKE v. GREEN (1849), 3 Exch. 619; 13 L. T. O. S. 98; 151 E. R. 992.

533. Execution by plaintiff creditor—Subsequent repudiation—and bankruptcy proceedings against principal debtor.—By a composition deed entered into by W. with his creditors, it was agreed that they should accept a composition of 10s. in the pound, to be secured by the joint promissory notes of W. & deflt. his father, such promissory notes to be delivered to certain trustees for the creditors, & that a deed containing a release, & all the usual covenants, should be prepared & executed by the creditors, & that such deed should be a deed within Bkpcy. Act, 1861 (c. 131), s. 192. Deflt. was induced to become surety for the payment of the composition by an arrangement made at the meeting of creditors that the goods & effects of the debtor should be realised for the benefit of deflt. In pursuance of these resolutions a deed was executed or assented to by a majority of the debtor's creditor's, but not by plff., although he had originally promised to give his assent. Deflt., in pursuance of the arrangement, delivered the promissory notes to the trustees, & the property & effects were realised for the benefit of deflt. The trustees tendered to plff. the promissory notes for the composition of his debt. Plff. refused to receive them, & denied the validity of the deed of composition, & brought an action against his debtor for the amount of his debt, to which the debtor pleaded the deed of composition. Plff. replied, that the assent of the creditors had been obtained by fraudulent misrepresentations. That action was referred to arbn., & the debtor being unable to establish the deed, the arbitrator awarded in favour of plff. The debtor was then adjudged a bkpt. After the award, the promissory notes made in favour of plff. still remaining in the hands of the trustees, plff. demanded them, & not succeeding in obtaining them, he brought the present action, there being counts for the recovery of the amounts of the notes, & a count in detinue to recover the notes themselves:—Held: such action could not under the circumstances be maintained.—LATTER v. WHITE (1871),

534. Subsequent annulment of deed.—A debtor having filed a petition under Bkpcy. Act, 1883 (c. 52), resolutions were passed accepting a composition of 20s. in the pound extending over fifteen months, payment of which was secured by a mtge. given by plff. to deflt. as trustee. Default having been made in payment of the instalments, the debtor was adjudicated bkpt. on the application of creditors under Bkpcy. Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 18 (11), & by the same order the composition was expressly annulled:—Held: plff.'s suretyship for the composition was thereby discharged, & the mtge. deed must be set aside so far as it made plff. liable as a surety.—WALTON v. COOK (1888), 40 Ch. D. 325; 58 L. J. Ch. 180; 60 L. T. 91; 37 W. R. 189.

(a) Supply of Goods.

535. Supply to larger quantity—Than that agreed.—To an action against deflt. on his bond for £250, deft. set out on over the condition of the bond, which recited that R. had agreed to become tenant to plffs. of a public-house; that it was stipulated that he should take from them the ale, wine, etc., to be consumed there; that he should become bound with a surety to pay for the same to the amount of £50 before he should have a fresh supply, as long as he should continue tenant of plffs.; that when he should cease to be their tenant, the surety should be liable to plffs. in such sum, not exceeding £50, as R. might then owe plffs. for ale, etc. The condition then stated, that if R. should pay plffs. for all ale received from them to an amount not exceeding £50 before he should have a fresh supply, & when he should become indebted to them in that sum, & if he should pay them for all sums which he should owe them for ale, etc., not exceeding £50, when he should cease to be tenant, the obligation was to be void. Plffs. permitted R. to become indebted to them in a larger amount than £50:—Held: deft. was not discharged by reason of plffs. having supplied R. with ale to an amount exceeding £50 upon credit, but that, in any event, on default of the principal, deft. was liable to the extent of £50.—SELLER v. JONES (1846), 16 M. & W. 112; 18 L. J. Ex. 20; 8 L. T. O. S. 165; 153 E. R. 1121.

536. Cessation of supply—Before amount agreed on reached.—In an action upon a guarantee in this form: "In consideration of your supplying B. with goods as he may order them from time to time, to the extent of £300, I guarantee the payment of the same at two months from the date of the invoices":—Held: the refusal of plff. to supply B. with further goods at a time when less than £300 was due to him for goods was no answer to an action upon the guarantee for the sum due at that time.—LLOYD v. BLACKBURN (1851), 17 L. T. O. S. 105.

B. gave up the business at L. & began a similar one at F., but after a short time he failed. In an action on the guarantee in respect of goods supplied by plffs. to B. at F.:—Held: the intention of the parties was that the guarantee should only be in respect of goods supplied at L., & the action failed. *SPENCER, TURNER & BOLDERO v. At the trial, it appeared that deft. had given to plff. the guarantee stated in the declaration & that the latter was a partner with two other persons in a banking house, & that the firm had advanced the money, & charged A. in account with the same: Held: the averment in the declaration, that plff. had advanced the money, was not supported by the proof, there being no evidence to show that the money had been advanced to plff. by the firm, & by him to A. GARRETT v. POTTS (1814), 2 L. T. O. S. 309.

543. — For specified time — Permission to overdraw by cheque.]—Certain title-deeds which had been handed by plff. to his brother, B., to enable the latter to borrow £600 from H. for seven days, were deposited by B. with a bank, with a memorandum purporting to be signed by plff., & stating that the deposit was made in consideration of the bank lending B. £1,000 for seven days. The bank made him no loan for seven days, but, during the seven days next after the deposit, they allowed him to draw by cheques to an amount exceeding £900. Upon a bill filed by plff. against the bank for the delivery up of the deeds, on the grounds that the memorandum of deposit was a forgery, & that the bank had not lent B. £1,000 for seven days:—Held: the question of forgery was one for a jury only but assuming that the memorandum to be genuine, the bank had no right to retain the deeds, inasmuch as they had not fulfilled the condition on which the deposit was made. —*BURTON v. I adopt to their full extent the positions on which the counsel rests his argument in support of this plea, that a surety ought not to be bound beyond the scope of his engagement, & that this is to be sought out from the whole context taken together, & that the decisions . . . . . agree that the condition shall be taken with reference to the recital, & may be explained & restrained by it (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.). *PARKER v. It was declared that, if C. or deft., or either of them, should on demand pay to the co. all sums, not exceeding in the whole £1,000, which should from time to time be due to the co. by C., with interest, the bond should be void. The co. sued deft. on the bond, alleging, as a breach, that on June 30, 1856, there was due from C., as the balance of his account, £296 12s. 11d., which had not been paid by C. or deft., though duly demanded, & a further sum for interest. Equitable plea: That the bond was executed by deft. solely as surety for C., & so accepted by the co.: & that, by reason of various verbal & written communications between deft. & the co., before & at the time of execution, the liability of deft., & the advances to C., which were to be secured, were limited to £950; & deft. was to be informed if the account, with interest, should reach £1,000 & not be reduced within a month; & deft. became surety on such terms only: but the co., on each of several occasions, made advances beyond £950; & on each of several occasions the account against C. exceeded £1,000 & was not reduced within a month, & deft. was not informed; whereby deft. became absolutely released from liability & entitled to equitable relief. The co. took issue on the plea, & also replied over; & deft. took issue on the replication. On a special case, giving the ct. power to draw inferences of fact, it was stated that, previously to the execution of the bond, deft. objected, by letter, to becoming liable for interest upon an advance of £1,000, & requested to know whether the £1,000 was to include interest. In answer, the co. informed deft. that the bond was for £1,000 with interest, but that there was little chance of its exceeding that sum for any length of time, as the co. if it should be over the amount, including interest, at the half-yearly balance, would require it to be reduced to £1,000 or would limit the amount to £950, which would leave a margin for interest. Afterwards, the co. executed a memorandum, to the effect that C.'s advance should be limited to £950, & deft. be informed if the account, with interest, should reach £1,000, & not be reduced in a month. At this time the advance exceeded £950. Deft. then executed the bond. Afterwards, the limit of £950, was on many occasions exceeded. Also, on three occasions, the amount of £1,000 interest included, was slightly exceeded, & not reduced within a month, & deft. was not informed of it. Also, at one half-yearly balance, the amount was £1,004 10s. 1d., but was reduced by £12 in two days after:—Held: the effect of the agreement was, not that deft. should be discharged from liability upon the limit being exceeded, but that £950 should be considered as substituted for £1,000 in the condition.—*GORDON v. 548. By creditors — All creditors must forbear.] — Deft. was arrested on an affidavit, which stated that by a memorandum in writing, bearing date Aug. 11, & signed by deft., he undertook to be answerable to the creditors of certain persons using the style & firm of W. & J., for the amount of the debts of such creditors, on the creditors' undertaking not to issue a commission of bkpt., or sue out process, against W. & J., on or before Aug. 16 then next; that plffs. were creditors of W. & J.; & that the latter were indebted to the former, in the sum of £1,000; & that plffs. had not, nor, as the deponent was informed & believed, had any of the other creditors caused a commission of bkpt., or any process, to be sued out against W. & J. before Aug. 16:—Held: insufficient, on the ground that an undertaking by all the creditors not to sue out a commission or process, was a condition precedent, & ought to have been alleged in the affidavit.

An undertaking to forbear to sue out process against deft.'s sons, on or before a given day is sufficient to raise a consideration for his promise & although plffs. have stated that they forbore to issue a commission or sue out process against the sons, yet it is not alleged that all the creditors undertook not to sue out a commission or sue within the stipulated time which is a condition precedent to any liability to be incurred by deft. 549. Execution of release of debt.] — W., by indenture, agreed to guarantee a certain composition to all the creditors of J. who should, before a fixed day, execute a release of their debts. Pltf., who was a creditor of J., did not execute by the time named, but insisted that this delay had taken place in consequence of an arrangement entered into between him & the agent of W., the effect of which was to bind pltf. to accept the composition, but to allow him to postpone his execution of the release:—Held: dismissing a bill filed by pltf. against W. for specific performance of the agreement to pay the composition, there was no evidence that the agent of W. had authority to enter into any new agreement that, if such authority had been proved, the agreement being within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, any alteration in its terms must have been evidenced by writing, & the condition in the original agreement not having been performed by pltf., the agreement never took effect so far as he was concerned, & in the absence of fraud no parol agreement could be substituted. *EMMET v. Guarantee of price of goods sold to contractor — Conditional on payment to him of total contract money — Breach resulting in completion of contract by third party — To whom part contract money paid.] — A builder having contracted to perform certain works for govt., his sureties entered into a contract to guarantee to a person who supplied him with bricks, payment out of the amount of the money payable by govt. to the builder. He performed part of the work, & received some money, which the seller of the bricks allowed him to retain. He was employed to do some extra work, & ultimately broke his contract with govt. Other persons were employed to complete it; & with the consent of the sureties, the money paid to them was deducted from the amount payable under the contract, & the balance did not cover the extra work:—Held: the guarantee did not attach unless the whole amount was paid over by the govt., & the sellers of the bricks could not treat the money paid to those persons as paid to the contractor, & as payment had not been made to him, the guarantee was not broken.—*HEMMING v. In an action by the representatives of C. against B. upon this guarantee:—Held: it was a condition of B.'s liability thereon, that, at the end of the six months, work should have been done by A. for him in respect of which a debt should be due from him to them; & plffs. could not recover without producing the contract between A. & B. under which the work was done.—*HILL v. The purchase-money was to be paid, according to the Ordinance of Jan. 22, 1833, by instalments, & D. became surety, in solido, for payment of the second instalment. The deed of arrangement for the purchase, & the notarial deed was executed by one of the trustees, who was resident in the colony, & by such deed it was stipulated that the sale should be confirmed & ratified by his two trustees resident in England within six months. By a deed poll, the sale to W. & his wife was confirmed & ratified by the trustees in England. Default was made in payment of the second instalment, when the trustees brought an action against D. as surety, for the amount of the second instalment. 560. Condition in favour of creditor — Satisfaction as to references —Right to waive condition.]—By an instrument in writing, in consideration of pltf.'s execution on a judgment against a third person being stayed until a certain day, deft. undertook to pay the debt & costs if not then paid by the principal debtor, & pltf., in consideration of the undertaking, agreed to stay execution until the above-named day if deft. gave to W. satisfactory references as to his ability to pay the amount, but not otherwise, & if the references were not satisfactory, then the guarantee was to be given up within a week from that date:—Held: even if the giving of references was a condition for the benefit of pltf., which they could renounce, it lay upon them (the references being unsatisfactory) to show that they had renounced the condition, & had elected to treat the instrument as in force; therefore a plea

5581. Execution of insurance policy.]

—A. guaranteed the performance by H. of his obligation under a selling & commission agency contract with deft. co. There was a provision in the contract between H. & the co. that he should insure against loss or damage by fire, by a policy in the co.'s name, all goods in his possession. The goods were destroyed by fire:—Held: if the insurance were effected the co. ought to have seen that it received the insurance money & credited it; if it were not effected the co. was more than passively negligent & so were responsible for any loss to the surety.—*KORCZYSKI v. l. *To obtain draft from principal debtor.]—*A lumberman had a lien on lumber for freight, & C. wrote saying, "I wish you would advise your agents in Q. to deliver to O. the sawn stuff on your rafts. I am to pay the river freight, & will thank you to take O.'s draft on me for river freight, which I will pay":—Held: this letter would not render C. liable to pay the freight until the lumberman had obtained O.'s draft for the amount thereof.—RC COUMBE (1877), 24 Gr. 519.—CAN.

m. *To provide acceptable sureties—In specified time.]—*H. tendered for the construction of a line of ry. pursuant to an advertisement for tenders, & his offer was conditionally accepted. At the same time H. executed a bond reciting the fact of the tender & conditioned within four days, to provide two acceptable sureties, & also to execute all necessary agreements for the commencement & completion of the work by specified dates. These conditions were not performed & the contract was eventually given to other persons:—Held: the bond & the agreement for the construction of the work were to be contemporaneous acts, & as no such agreement was entered into H. was not liable on the bond.—*BRANTFORD, WATERLOO & LAKE ERIE RY. Pltf. did not supply a new motor & the one supplied did not do the work, so that the profits that the references were not given & were not satisfactory, & thereupon debt. requested ptfs. to give up the undertaking, which they refused, & debt. became & was discharged from performing it, was an answer to a declaration on the undertaking.—*MORTEN v. being remain owing, until the same should be fully paid. On May 9, 1882, P. executed a document in the following terms: "I, F., for the consideration therein mentioned, do hereby guarantee to the said H. repayment of the sum . . . of £2,000, & interest for the same" at 5 per cent. per annum. This guarantee was referred to in the correspondence relating to the execution thereof as "the guarantee of P.'s mtge." Interest was regularly paid by P. until July 20, 1891. P. died on Sept. 13, 1891, & the proceeds of his estate & the property comprised in the mtge. were sufficient to pay £600 only of the mtge. debt. Upon non-compliance by F. with a notice to pay the balance of £1,400 & interest, the mtgee. brought an action against F., & thereby sought to recover from him £1,400 & interest, as sums payable by him under his guarantee:—Held: (1) the liability of F. was confined to the payment of £2,000 & interest, in accordance with the terms of the mtge. deed; (2) in the absence of an agreement not to sue for a definite time, the mtgee. could at the most be presumed to have agreed not to sue for a reasonable time; such time had elapsed prior to the commencement of six years before the bringing of the action, & consequently the mtgee.'s claim against F. was barred by Stat. Limitations.—HENTON v. PADDISON (1893), 68 L. T. 405; 9 T. L. R. 333; 3 R. 450.

Ptfs. are entitled to recover to the extent of the amount of the bill & the interest upon it & no further. It has been urged in opposition to their recovering even so far that it was the duty of ptfs. to ascertain as a matter of fact that the bill was drawn in respect of cotton purchased for & on account of debt., & that the terms of the guarantee expressly impose upon them that duty. The guarantee will not admit of such a construction. The law does not require impossibilities of any man, & how was it possible for ptfs. at a distance of 1,200 miles to know what was the real nature of the transaction, or to obtain any other description of the consignments or bills than that which he [C.] thought proper to give them (ABBOT, C.J.).—*OGDEN v. & B. British subjects (plffs.) for the purchase of brandy from a house of trade in France (an enemy) to be shipped from thence in a neutral, on account of A. & B., which contract was made in contemplation of obtaining a licence for that purpose & which licence was accordingly obtained soon after the making of such contract & before it was begun to be executed, is a legal contract, & may lawfully be guaranteed in the first instance by C. & D. other British subjects (defts.). After such licence obtained the guarantors are liable in damages for the non-shipment of the goods by the house in France on board a neutral sent there for that purpose. Though it were objected to the licence legalising such trade, that it was not made out to A. & B. by name, but only to C. & D. & other British merchants; & that neither C. & D. nor even A. & B. had any property in the goods; whereas the licence required the goods to be imported to be the property of the said persons or some of them; & until shipment the property continued in the house in France. For neither the Act of Parliament nor the King's licence required the owners of the property to be individually named; & even if the licence were to be so construed, as it only required the goods imported to be the property of "the said persons or some of them, as may be specified in their bills of lading;" & as no bills of lading were made out, which might have been made in the names of C. & D., & if so, would have conveyed to them a legal or special property in the goods; defts. C. & D. were still liable to answer in damages, upon their guarantee, as for the non-performance of a legal contract.—TIMSON v. MERAC (1807), 9 East, 35; 103 E. R. 486.

There having been delay in delivery under both contracts, but the govt. not having exacted any penalties, & having paid their contractor at the full contract price:—Held: the contractor was liable to pay plffs. the full contract price, under their contract with him & deft. was liable, on his guarantee, to the same amount.—OASTLER v. POUND (1863), 1 New Rep. 393; 7 L. T. 852; 11 W. R. 518.

571. — — — — — Damage to third party.]—

In May, 1863, a father on the occasion of the admission of his son as an underwriting member of Lloyd's, addressed to the managing committee of that body a letter, by which he held himself responsible for all his son's engagements in that capacity. Lloyd's was then a voluntary assocn., governed by certain bye-laws, under which a person once admitted a member could not be excluded from membership except in the event of his bkpey. or insolvency. The assocn. consisted of underwriting members, non-underwriting members, & subscribers. The practice of the underwriting members was to underwrite policies of marine insurance for the benefit of various owners of property, both members of the assocn. & outsiders, but the policies with outsiders could only be effected through the agency of insurance brokers who were either members of or subscribers to the assocn. The assocn. as such incurred no liability on the policies underwritten by its members. In 1871 the Society was incorporated by Act of Parliament, all the rights of the committee on behalf of the members being vested by the Act in the corp'n. In 1876 the father died, & notice of his death was shortly afterwards given to Lloyd's. In 1878 the son became bkpt. & thereupon ceased to be a member of Lloyd's:—Held: (1) a guarantee the consideration for which is given once for all cannot be determined by the guarantor, & does not cease on his death, & therefore the guarantee was not determined by the death of the father or by the notice of it, but his estate was liable in respect of engagements contracted by the son after his death; (2) the guarantee extended to all engagements contracted by the son as an underwriting member of Lloyd's, whether with members or with outsiders; (3) the committee of Lloyd's & the corp'n. of Lloyds as their successors, were trustees of the benefit of the guarantee for all the persons, whether members or outsiders, with whom the son had contracted engagements as an underwriting member, & the corp'n. could maintain an action to enforce the guarantee against the father's estate for the benefit of all those persons; on the ground, as to the outsiders, that the brokers, through whom the son's engagements with them were contracted, were trustees for their principals of the right which they themselves had to call on their own agents, Lloyd's, to enforce the guarantee for their benefit.

The question, which is a very important & substantial one, is that Lloyd's, having sustained no damage themselves, could not recover for the losses sustained by third parties by reason of the default of H. [the principal debtor] as an underwriter. That is an alarming doctrine, & a novelty, because I consider it to be an established rule of law that where a contract is made with A., for the benefit of B., A. can sue on the contract for the benefit of B., & recover all that B. could have recovered, if the contract had been made with B. himself (LUSH, L.J.).

572. Default by member of Lloyd's Association.]—

S. being desirous of carrying on business as an insurance broker at Lloyd's, which by the rules of that assocn. he could only do on being admitted a subscriber & giving security to the committee of Lloyd's, deft. & another person, in Mar. 1858, addressed the following letter to the committee:—"We each of us hereby hold ourselves responsible to the extent of £750 for any debts that S. who has applied to your committee to be admitted a subscriber of your institution, to enable him to act as an insurance broker may contract, in his capacity of such broker," for two years from this date, & till notice. S. was thereupon admitted & acted as a broker on his own sole account until Jan. 1860, when he took H. into partnership, with the knowledge of his sureties. In Apr. 1860, deft. & his co-surety gave notice to the committee for the discontinuance of the guarantee; but, upon being informed that

PART V.—LIABILITY OF THE SURETY.

S. could not be allowed to remain a member of Lloyd's without security, they, on the 17th of that month, addressed the committee as follows: "The letter we addressed to you under date of the 11th inst. notifying the putting an end to our guarantee dated Mar. 24, 1858, on behalf of S., we now hereby withdraw, & declare that such guarantee shall continue in force upon the same terms & conditions as are mentioned in such guarantee." By the rules of Lloyd's one member only of a firm is allowed to act as a broker; but he may obtain a "substitute's ticket," which enables his substitute to contract for him in the house. In Jan. 1862, S. appointed H. his substitute, & H. as such substitute entered into contracts with underwriting members of Lloyd's. All the contracts made after Apr. 1860, whether by S. or his substitute, were made in the name & on account of the partnership. Many of these contracts resulted in debts due to members of Lloyd's from the partnership:—Held: the guarantee was to be construed with reference to the circumstances existing in Apr. 1860; it included all transactions by S. in his capacity of broker, after Apr. 1860, whether by himself personally or by H. as his substitute, & whether for his own sole benefit or for the benefit of the firm, & deft. was liable under the guarantee for these partnership debts.—*LEATHLEY v. 574. — Credit allowed by treasurer of poor law union.—Trading in personal capacity with overseers.]—Deft. as surety, became bound to the guardians of a poor law union, by bond conditioned that the treasurer of the union should discharge the duties of his office "by receiving all moneys tendered to be paid to the board of guardians, etc., by paying out of the moneys in his hands of the guardians all orders on him drawn on their behalf," & that he should pay over to the guardians all balances, moneys, etc., due to the union. The treasurer, who was a corn factor, had extensive dealings in corn, & open accounts in trade with the overseers of several of the townships, who were farmers. No money was received from these townships, but it was the practice of the treasurer to debit the overseers in his trade account with the amount of the poor rate ordered by the guardians to be paid, & then to debit himself with the amount as paid to him as treasurer. His accounts were audited half-yearly, & the credits in corn were allowed by the auditors as payments in money. At the last audit, the auditors found that £239 1s. 10d. was due from him to the guardians:—Held: the surety was liable, inasmuch as between the treasurer & the overseers money had in effect passed.—PATTISON v. NEEDHAM (1780), 1 Term Rep. 482; 99 E. R. 1209.

576. Money borrowed by overseer Applied to parochial purposes No authority to borrow as overseer.] An overseer has not, by virtue of his office, any authority to borrow money. In an action against a surety on a bond conditioned for the overseer's faithfully accounting for all sums received by him by virtue of his office, the surety is not liable for a sum lent to the overseer, & applied by him to parochial purposes. —*LEIGH v. to Apr. 6, 1868, when he was dismissed; & that he accounted for all moneys received before that day, but not for a large sum received since. Plea, alleging payment of all moneys since that day; & issue thereon. An arbitrator found that W. admitted $3,031 to be due by him on Jan. 1; that he had accounted for all moneys received since; & that of all moneys received up to his dismissal, including the $3,031, the balance was $1,806.—Held: as the breach was only in respect of moneys received since Jan. 1, 1866, plffs. upon this finding could recover nothing.—*ITAWDON CORPN. v. Sect. 3.—Extent of liability: Sub-sect. 2, A. & B.; sub-sects. 3 & 4, A.]

578. — Money received before guarantee given.—Collector of rates.]—The condition of a bond, given to comrs. of sewers by a collector of rates, was, that the collector should at all times render a faithful account to the comrs. for the time being of all such sums of money as had already been collected or received, or which thereafter should be collected or received by him, by virtue of any rates for & on account of such comrs., & should pay to the comrs. for the time being all moneys already received, or which should thereafter be received by him:—Held: the collector was bound to account for, & pay to the comrs. for the time being, sums of money collected & received by him, by virtue of a rate made by comrs. acting under a commission, which expired before the execution of the bond. —SAUNDERS v. TAYLOR (1829), 9 B. & C. 35; 100 E. R. 14.

579. — Default of receiver — Money received before security given.]—A receiver is liable to account as such for all moneys coming to his hands in that capacity at any time, whether before or after the date of the perfecting of his security. A surety who has undertaken to account for what the receiver "should receive & become liable to pay as such receiver" is liable to account for all such moneys as above mentioned. The principle that the appointment of a receiver is merely conditional until his security is perfected, applies only to cases where the question is as to his title as against third parties. It has no application where the question is as to his own liability, or that of his sureties, in respect of moneys received & expended by him as receiver. —SMART v. FLOOD & Co. (1883), 49 L. T. 467.

580. — To account.]—In ascertaining the liability of sureties under a receiver's recognisance, the ct. proceeds on the principle that the surety is liable, to the extent of the amount of the penalty, for all sums of money which the receiver himself was properly liable to pay into ct. or account for: consequently, where a receiver of rents " & profits" of real estate had insured some of the farm buildings in his own name, & received & misapplied the insurance money, had received, & not accounted for, dividends on Consols in ct. representing proceeds of sale of real estate, had received under an order of the ct., money representing personal estate, to be spent in repairs, which he had misappropriated:—Held: the sureties had been properly charged in respect of these three items.—*Re GRAHAM, (GRAHAM v. 581. — Committee of lunatic—Balance due on accounts & costs.]—The sureties in a committee's recognisance, the condition of which was that the committee should obey the orders of the Lord Chancellor with respect to the lunatic's estate, held liable on the default of the committee, not only for the balance reported due from him on his accounts, but also for the costs of proceedings subsequently taken against him for the purpose of enforcing payment of such balance, although the sureties had no notice of the default of their principal until after those proceedings had been taken.—Re LOCKEY (1845), 1 Ph. 509; 14 L. 582. — Receipts after death of lunatic.]—The liability of a surety for the committee of a lunatic ceases on the death of the lunatic, & the surety is responsible for the committee only to the extent of his receipts in that character, but not for any sums received by him after the death of the lunatic which it was no part of his duty to receive. B. Rates or Taxes Invalidly Imposed or Collected.

583. Effect on liability—Duties actually collected.—Unauthorised collection.]—A bond with a condition, reciting that the principal obligor, with his sureties, became bound as collector of certain duties assessed under 43 Geo. 3, c. 122, to the comrs. acting for the district under that statute, for the due collection & payment of those duties to the Receiver-General, could not, it seems, be enforced if the statute referred to did not authorise the collection of those duties, though in fact the collector had received sums from the subjects as & for such duties. Such bond may be put in force against one of the sureties, though he were not apprised of the default of the principal collector in not paying over duties collected by him, nor called upon for an indemnity by the comrs., till after the dismissal from office of such collector.

By the condition of the bond it is recited that one of the obligors applied to the comrs. to be appointed to collect the duties, under a certain Act which is described in the condition. Unless he could legally be appointed collector under such Act, & could receive duties under it, the bond cannot be enforced (LE BLANC, J.) —NARES v. ROWLES (1811), 14 East, 510; 104 E. R. 697.

He continued to hold the office until Mar. 15, 1888. Having failed to account for & pay over moneys received by him as such treasurer, after the first year for which he was appointed to the office, an action was brought on the bond:—Held: the office of treasurer, being an annual office, the bond made by J. & the other defts., as his sureties, did not extend beyond the first year he held that office, & as there was nothing to show that there was any defalcation during that year, there must be judgment for defts.—*A.-G. v. Pltfs. sued defts., as sureties, on two bonds, the first given to pltfs., as urban sanitary authority, to secure the due performance of the duties of a collector of district rates, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), & the second given to pltfs., as the corpn. of a borough, to secure the performance by the same person of his duties as collector & receiver of borough rates under Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50). The evidence showed that pltfs. had acquiesced in an irregular mode of accounting on the part of the collector, but that the collector was never suspected of dishonesty until a year after the date of the second bond, when defalcations were discovered, & he was dismissed. The jury in answer to questions put to them found that pltfs. had permitted the collector to retain moneys in his hands for a longer period than a week (which was contrary to Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 195), & to the conditions of the bonds, & to a resolution passed by pltfs. before the bonds were given; & that pltfs. had permitted him to mix the proceeds of the different rates:—Held: (1) pltfs.' acquiescence in the collector's irregular mode of accounting was not such connivance as to discharge the sureties, & pltfs. were entitled to judgment; (2) on the construction of the second bond, in which the person guaranteed was described as "collector & receiver" the sureties were liable for his breach of the condition to pay over moneys received by him, independently of the question of the validity of the rate.—DURHAM CORPN. v. 588. Rent for yearly tenancy guaranteed—Notice to quit—Waiver by acceptance of rent—Effect on liability for second year's rent.—By a notice to quit given to a tenant from year to year, his tenancy is determined on the expiration of the current year & a waiver of the notice creates a new tenancy taking effect on the expiration of the old one.

M. being yearly tenant to pltf. on the terms of a written agreement, deft. in consideration of pltf.'s continuing M. as such tenant gave to pltf. a guarantee for the rent of the L. farm in the occupation of M. Pltf. afterwards gave M. notice to quit, but on the payment of arrears of rent, withdrew it before the expiration of the current year. The next year the rent became in arrear & pltf. sued deft. on his guarantee:—Held: the old tenancy was determined by the notice to quit; the guarantee applied only to the tenancy which existed at the time when it was given, & deft. was therefore not liable.—TAYLOR v. In consideration of pltf.'s having, at the instance of deft. consented to pay to the holder the amount of a dishonoured bill of exchange, on which deft. was liable as indorser, & to bring an action on the bill in pltf.'s own name against H. the acceptor, deft. gave pltf. the following guarantee. "I hereby agree to be answerable to you for all costs, damages & expenses which you may sustain by reason of trying the action, & relating & incidental thereto." Pltf. brought the action against H., who obtained the verdict. H.'s costs of suit were taxed & paid by pltf. The bill of costs of pltf.'s own attorney, in the same suit, having been delivered to but not paid by pltf. he sued deft. on the guarantee: Held: he was entitled to recover, as damages, not only the costs which he had paid to H., but also those for which he was thus liable to his own attorney.—SPARK v. The contract did not contain any provision that, if any legal proceedings took place between the contractor & pltf's. the contractor would pay pltf's. the costs which he might be ordered to pay if unsuccessful. A dispute arose between the contracting parties which was referred to arbn. The arbitrator gave judgment for pltf's. & ordered the contractor to pay the costs. The costs & the judgment together exceeded the amount of the bond given by defts. Pltf's. sued defts. for the amount of the bond. Defts. admitted liability for the amount of the judgment, but denied that they were liable for the costs. By clause 12 of the contract it was provided that "if any dispute or difference shall arise between the contractor & the council concerning the works or any alterations, additions, or omissions thereto or therefrom, or in anywise relating to this contract, such dispute or difference shall be referred to D. who was the surveyor of the council & his decision thereon shall be final & conclusive." The dispute was not in fact referred to D. but to another arbitrator:—Held: as the council did not refer their dispute with the contractor to their surveyor in pursuance of clause 12 of the contract, but had agreed to an independent arbitrator, they would not recover from defts. the costs of the arbn.; & as the procedure adopted was an entirely different method of procedure, of which no notice was given to the guarantors, & as that procedure was not within the contemplation of the parties at the date of the contract, or accepted by the guarantors in substitution for the original procedure, the costs of the arbn. were not reasonably within the contemplation of the parties at the time of the contract, & could not be recovered from the guarantors.—HOOLE URBAN COUNCIL v. 598. — False return by bailiff—What costs included.]—If a sheriff defends an action for a false return as well as he can, he may recover his costs from the sureties of his bailiff who executed the writ; though he has a verdict against him, on the ground that evidence was not produced, which, in another & subsequent suit between other parties, involving the same question, was obtained.

Semble: if in such an action, after he has obtained a rule nisi for a new trial, he compromises the suit, with the assent of some of the sureties, by paying a less sum for damages than would be recoverable, & a less sum for costs than were incurred, he may recover his own costs against the surety who did not assent, if it appears that the compromise was, under the circumstances, reasonable.

Semble: in such a case the words “costs of any application to the ct. touching or concerning any matter, wherein the bailiff should act or assume to act as bailiff,” will comprise the costs of an application to the ct. to set aside the judgment on which the execution was founded, the return to which gave rise to the action against the sheriff.—FAREBROTHER v. Acts, 1883 & 1890,” or if he should fail therein & the surety should “make good any loss or damage occasioned by any such default to the estate of the bkpt.” The trustee improperly retained for some years a sum of money exceeding £50, & on his default being discovered, he was removed from his office, & pursuant to Bkpcy. Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 74 (6), he was surcharged with interest at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum on the sum he had improperly retained. The trustee made good the sum he had improperly retained, but did not pay the interest with which he had been surcharged:—Held: the interest surcharged was in the nature of a penalty & was not a measure of the loss or damage to the estate occasioned by the default of the trustee, & the surety was not liable under the terms of the bond to pay to the Board of Trade the penal interest or any part of it.—BOARD OF TRADE v. B. covenanted to pay the principal, & interest for the same after the rate of 5 per cent., on Feb. 13, 1835, & C. covenanted "that B. & C., or one of them, would, during the continuance of the mtge. security, pay the interest to become due in respect of the principal sum after the rate of, etc., by two even half-yearly payments, on Aug. 13, & Feb. 13." The indenture also contained a power of sale, on six months' notice, in default of payment of principal & interest, with authority to A., out of the proceeds, to pay herself the principal & interest, "or so much thereof as shall be then due":—Held: C.'s covenant was not limited to the payment of the first two half-years' interest, but was a covenant for payment of the interest so long as the principal remained unpaid. —KING v. GREENHILL, (1843), 6 Man. & G. 59; 6 Scott, N. R. 869; 12 L. J. C. P. 333; 1 L. T. O. S. 288; 7 Jur. 604; 134 E. R. 808.

606. Interest on loan—Liability limited to specific amount.]—Deft. as surety, bound himself jointly to the banking co. of which pltf. was public officer in the sum of £500, the condition of the bond being that if the obligors should from time to time pay all & every such sum or sums of money as should become due to the bank for money advanced to deft.'s co-obligor, & pay interest at 5 per cent. per annum, for such sum or sums of money as aforesaid, to be computed as is usual with the banking co. in ordinary banking accounts with them; & also the lawful commission, charges & expenses incident to or occasioned by the transactions or matters between the bank & the co-obligor; & should indemnify & save harmless the banking co. from all actions, suits, & expenses, & all liability whatsoever by reason of the transactions & matters, then the bond was to be void. Provided that the principal moneys to be ultimately recovered on the bond were thereby limited not to exceed £250, & that the obligors or any of them should not be liable to pay, by virtue thereof, any greater principal sum than £250. But that the bond should be a continuing security to that amount, for the sums from time to time owing as aforesaid, exclusive of interest to be computed as aforesaid, commission, costs, charges, & expenses:—Held: deft. was liable on this bond only for £250 principal moneys advanced, & interest accrued upon that sum; but not for interest upon any further principal sum advanced by the bank. —MEEK v. WALLIS (1872), 27 L. T. 650; sub nom. YORK CITY BANKING Co. v. WALLIS, 36 J. P. Jo. 741.

607. Judgment against debtor—Release of liability for interest—Merger.]—By a deed £1,400 was advanced to H. on the security of three life policies, whereby H. covenanted to keep up the premiums & pay interest at 3 per cent. on the loan. By a covenant in the deed, which was made between M. of the one part, G. & L., sureties of the second part, & H. of the third part, G. & L. covenanted with M. "that they or one of them will, during the continuance of the present security, in the event of the premiums on the said policies . . . & the interest in respect of the said principal sum of £1,400 not being paid, as to the premium within three days, & as to the interest within thirty days, of their falling due by H. . . . duly pay the premiums . . . & also pay the interest on the said sum of £1,400. Judgment was recovered for the £1,400 against H.:—Held: it operated as a merger with regard to the liability to pay future interest, & the surety was released. Semble: there could be no merger of interest accrued before the judgment.

The second defence, that H. [the principal debtor] had made no default in payment of the premiums on the policies & that without such default pltf. cannot recover, is based & depends upon the words of the covenant entered into by G. & deft., that they "will during the continuance of the security in the event of the premiums on the policies & the interest in respect of the principal sum of £1,400 not being paid" duly pay the premiums & the interest on such sum, & it was contended before me that the double event—viz., both the non-payment of the premiums & the interest, must exist as a condition precedent to the liability of the sureties to pay, that the word "and" could not be treated as "or". In my opinion this argument must fail; reading the whole covenant together, & having regard to the object of it, which was clearly to secure the payment of both premiums to keep up the security & interest upon the loan, it seems to me that the true way to read the covenant is this, that in the event of the non-payment of both premiums & interest, that is unless both were paid, the liability shall attach for so much as remains unpaid. This is what clearly was, as I think, the object of the parties to be collected from the language & words of the covenant, & it never could have been in the contemplation of either party that a partial performance of the obligation, viz., by paying the premiums, should exonerate the obligor from the performance of it in its integrity (HAWKINS, J.). —FABER v. LATHOM (EARL) (1897), 77 L. T. 108.

608. — Claim for principal sum barred—Interest accrued within six years before action.]—In an action on a guarantee it appeared that deft. had guaranteed to pltf., a banking co., payment of all moneys which might be owing to them in account with a customer with interest, commission, & other banking charges. It was provided that the guarantee should be a continuing guarantee, & should not be withdrawn except by six months' written notice from the guarantor. Pltf. made advances to the customer by honouring his overdrafts from time to time down to a period more than six years before the action, but made no advances subsequently to that period, & the customer paid sums in to his account with the bank against his liability from time to time down to a period within six years before the action. At the end of each half-year pltf. debited him in account with the interest for the half-year on the amount owing by him from time to time, & carried forward the balance to his debit as the amount owing at the commencement of the next half-year:—

Default was made in payment of the debenture interest, & applts. finding themselves unable to meet their liabilities, a resolution for their voluntary winding-up was passed; & a scheme of arrangement was subsequently sanctioned by the ct. under which, "in lieu of its liabilities under such policies," the rate of interest payable by applt. corp'n. was, as from the date of the winding-up resolution, reduced, & the time for payment of principal was extended. A payment of interest was made by applts. calculated at the original rate up to the resolution for winding up & at the reduced rate for the period subsequent thereto, & applts. claimed to be reimbursed by resps.:*—Held: resps. were not liable, as the payment was made wholly under the scheme, & not under the policy, & no distinction could be drawn between the amount calculated at the higher & that at the lower rate of interest.—*MORTGAGE INSURANCE CORPN., LTD. v. 619. Necessity for payment by surety—Before right to deduction.]—Where, after proof of a debt, a surety pays part of it to the creditor, but not in discharge of the whole debt, the creditor may receive dividends on the full amount of his proof.

There was no payment here of the entirety, nor any partial payment in discharge of the entirety. By the terms of the statute [6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 52] the surety is only entitled to stand in the place of the creditor, when he pays the debt, or any part thereof, in discharge of the whole debt (SIR GEORGE ROSE). Re SNELL, Ex p. COPESTONE (1839), Mont. & Ch. 262; 3 Deac. 546; 4 Deac. 54.

620. Extent of deduction—Dependent on construction Whether guarantee of whole or part of debt.] Surety by bond for advances generally, but under a limited penalty, not liable beyond that amount, & paying that sum, is entitled to a proportion of the dividends on the proof by the creditor to a greater amount under the bkpey. of the principal debtor.

The rule certainly has been that where a man, engaged for the whole of a debt, pays only a part, he has no equity to stand in the place of the person paid. That brings it to the question, what is this engagement, whether for the whole or a part? . . . The instrument upon the face of it is an agreement to advance all such sums as the two bkpts. should draw for, & the bond is for £10,000. A written notice was given by the bankers to the surety, & it appears they had swelled the debt to £20,000. The commission afterwards issued. Proof was made by the bankers to the extent of £20,000, they called upon the surety to pay £10,000. He did pay alone £4,000, & was willing to pay the residue upon having an assignment to him of the benefit of proof made by the principal creditor. It is clear that if the debt had been only £10,000 this equity would have resulted, & he could have compelled the bankers to prove for his benefit & make over their securities. But it is said, here the debt is £20,000 & they are entitled to hold the whole proof against the surety. The question comes round to this, whether according to the true nature of such an engagement it was competent to these bankers to go on without giving notice to the surety, for this is a case in which they contracted to give him notice before forfeiture of the bond; whether they were at liberty to swell the demand to his prejudice beyond £10,000. The agreement was to advance all such sums as should be required, but it is limited by an express contract for an obligation to secure all those sums; & the question is whether that limitation in the extent of the obligation is not a sufficient ground for the inference that those sums were not to be extended beyond £10,000 to the destruction of every right of the surety. Take the case of two sureties, each for the separate sum of £10,000, each paying the creditor, would be entitled to stand in his place for the sum paid. It would be very strong to hold that, as they have taken but one surety, he shall be in a worse situation. The bankers are not entitled in equity to say as against the surety that their demand to more than £10,000, the amount of the bond he has given, upon which he would be primâ facie entitled to stand in their place (LORD ELDON, C.).—*Ex p. 621. ————.]—Surety for indemnity to a limited amount, having paid to the extent of his engagement, entitled to dividends upon proof by the creditor under the bkpey. of the principal debtor, subject to a deduction of the proportion of dividend upon the residue of the debt proved, beyond that for which the surety was engaged, supposing that expunged.

This instrument marks distinctly that the sum for which the surety was to be answerable, was as against him to be considered as the whole amount of the creditor's demand . . . The proviso, which qualifies, & controls all the rest of the instrument declares expressly that the true intent & meaning is that the bankers shall not be indemnified by pltf. by virtue thereof for any loss they should sustain by giving credit to B. beyond the sum of £1,500 & interest. . . I hardly know how the parties could have more clearly provided, not merely that pltf. should not be called upon to answer more than £1,500, but that with regard to him the creditor should be considered as limited to that sum (GRANT, M.R.).—*PALFY v. M. became indebted to pltf's. to the amount of £625, upon which, by a composition with his creditors, he paid them 8s. 7d. in the pound, leaving due to pltf's. out of their whole claim £356. Defts. being sued for that sum on their guarantee: Held—: they were entitled to deduct from it £171 13s. 4d., the amount of the dividend of 8s. 7d. in the pound upon £100.

The guarantee [was] in these terms—"in consideration of your giving credit in the way of your trade to M., I guarantee to you the payment of any debt which he may contract with you from time to time as a running balance of account to any amount not exceeding £100." . . . Deft. contended that pltf. had no right to deduct the whole sum received as a dividend, from the gross amount of the debt, & to hold deft. liable on the guarantee for the residue of the demand up to the extent of the guarantee; but that the dividend received by pltf. was to be applied ratably to the whole debt, as well the part covered by the guarantee as the part which was left uncovered & consequently a ratable deduction was to be made for the sum covered by the guarantee. . . . We are of opinion that such deduction ought to be made. If the whole amount of the debt from M. had not exceeded £400, it is clear that debt. would have received the full benefit of the dividend, . . . & although the amount of the debt does exceed £400, & thereby the position of the creditor is so far altered, that one part of his debt, to the extent of £400 is guaranteed, & the remainder not, still there seems no reason why the application of a payment of so much in the pound upon the whole debt should in any way be affected by the collateral circumstances of the guarantee. . . . For, suppose the sum which exceeds £400 had been covered by the guarantee of another person, could it be contended that plffs. might have applied the whole of the dividends to either part of the demand at their own election, & thus have varied, at their own pleasure, the extent of the responsibility of the two sureties? In the case supposed, each of the sureties might have claimed a ratable deduction, out of each pound of the amount of debt, to which their respective guarantees extended (TINDAL, C.J.).—*BARDWELL v. 623. — — — —.]—Where a limited guarantee has been given, & the limit has been exceeded by the guarantee, who afterwards receives from the estate of the principal debtor a dividend, the guarantor is entitled to the benefit of a proportional part of that dividend on the amount guaranteed, notwithstanding that the unpaid debt greatly exceeds the amount of such guarantee.

Where, in such a case, the guarantee has recovered the whole sum guaranteed in an action against the guarantor, the right of the latter to file a bill for an account & payment to him of such dividends is not barred by the fact that he might have pleaded a set-off to that extent in the action, & omitted to do so.

Such a claim is not a "mere money demand" within the meaning of the principle which excludes suits for damages merely.

The construction of this guarantee is clear. . . . The question can only arise on a case of this description, where there is a large general debt, part only of which is secured & the creditor has received a sum generally in part payment of the debt, which still leaves more than the secured amount due. Then a question may arise whether the creditor is entitled to the benefit of the whole guarantee, or whether he must give credit for a proportional part of what he has received. I cannot hold that there is anything special in the form of this guarantee to take it out of the general rule (PAGE-WOOD, V.-C.).—THORNTON v. M'KEWAN (1862), 1 Hem. & M. 525; 1 New Rep. 16; 32 L. 624. — — — —.]—A., wishing to be allowed from time to time to overdraw his account with his bankers, plffs., deft. gave them the following document: "On demand I promise to pay to G. & Co., plffs., £300, with interest on same, to secure an advance now or hereafter on a banking account with A." A. became insolvent & paid by agreement with his creditors a composition of 10s. in the pound, & plffs., who had advanced much more than £300, received the dividend on their whole advance, leaving a balance on the whole of more than £300:—Held: the promise by deft. was only to repay an advance of £300 & he was therefore only liable for the balance of £300 after deducting 10s. in the pound from that amount.

The question is whether this document amounts to a promise to be liable to the extent of £300 in respect of an advance to that amount, or a general promise to pay £300 on any balance, however arrived at, that may remain due on a general advance by plffs. to the principals. The former is the true construction of the document, & the case is on all fours with Bardwell v. Lindall, No. 622, ante (COCKBURN, C.J.).—GEE v. PACK (1803), 33 L. J. Q. B. 49; 9 L. T. 200. Annotation.—Reid. Ellis v. Emmanuel (1876), 1 Ex. D. 157.

625. — — — —.]—J. gave to B. a guarantee: "I hereby guarantee to you the payment of all that you may supply to E., but so as my liability to you under this or any other guarantee shall not at any time exceed the sum of £250." J. gave a similar guarantee. B. supplied goods to E. to the amount of £657. E. then became bkpt. B. proved for the whole sum, & then called on the guarantors, who paid him £250 each. B. having afterwards received a dividend of 2s. 1d. in the pound on the £657:—Held: each of the guarantors was entitled to a part of this dividend, bearing to the whole the same proportion as £250 to £657.

If a person guarantees a limited portion of a debt, all the authorities show that if he pays that portion, he has in respect of it, all the rights of a creditor. The question is whether the guarantor means "I will be liable for £250 of the amount which B. shall owe you," or "I will be liable for the amount which B. shall owe you, subject to this limitation, that I shall not be called upon to pay more than £250." I think the meaning of the instrument is "I guarantee the payment of all goods supplied, but my liability is not to be increased by their amount exceeding £250. When it reaches that sum I am to be a surety for it with all the rights of a surety." It is not then competent for the creditor to say "I will increase the debt, I will take a dividend on the whole, & although you have paid me the £250, you shall have no rights as a surety till I am paid in full." A surety may enter into an obligation to be liable to a limited amount for the ultimate balance remaining after all money obtainable from other sources have been applied in the reduction of the debt, but a guarantee of that nature must be in a very different form from the present (LORD HATHFIELD, C.).—*HOBSON v. The co. was wound up. The bank proved in the winding-up for £3,059 as due by the co. to the bank, & was declared entitled to a dividend of £1,051 on that sum. The bank afterwards brought an action against one of the makers of the note, who paid the bank £2,007 for debt & interest due on the note:—Held: the giving the note was in pursuance of an ordinary contract of suretyship, & the surety who had paid the £2,067 was entitled to receive from the bank a share of the dividend, bearing the same proportion to the whole dividend as the sum paid by him bore to the sum proved for by the bank. The rule established that in similar cases in bkpcy. the sum paid by the surety is, in calculating the proportions of dividend, to be considered as expunged, does not apply to cases in winding-up.

When a surety is only surety for a part of the debt, & has paid that part of the debt, he is entitled to receive the dividend which the principal debtor pays in respect of that sum which the surety has discharged (MELLISH, L.J.).—GRAY v. SECKHAM (1872), 7 Ch. App. 680; 42 L. J. Ch. 127; 27 L. T. 290; sub nom. Re GIFTYNOG LLANTWIT COLLIERY CO., LTD., GRAY v. SECKHAM, 20 W. R. 920, L. J.J. Annotation:—Distd. *Ellis v. 627. — — — — —.]—Where a surety has become party to a bond conditioned for the payment of the debt & interest, with a proviso that he shall not be liable for more than a certain sum, & the creditor under a liquidation of the affairs of the debtor receives a dividend on the whole of the debt & interest then due, the right of the surety to have a proportion of those dividends applied in reduction of the claim against him depends upon whether the bond amounts to a guarantee of the whole debt with a limitation of the sum which he is to be called upon to pay, or to a guarantee of part only of the debt. In the former case he is liable for the whole unpaid balance to the extent of the sum limited in the proviso. In the latter case he is entitled to a deduction pro rata in respect of the dividends.

Prima facie, a continuing guarantee, limited in amount, to secure a floating balance, is, as between surety & creditor, a guarantee of so much only of the debt as does not exceed the sum named in the limitation, for it is to be presumed that the surety did not contemplate the creditor's allowing the debtor to become indebted to him beyond that amount. No such presumption arises where the debt, in respect of which the bond is given, is an ascertained amount exceeding the sum named in the limitation.

In every one of the cases [Ex p. Rushforth, Gray v. Seckham, Nos. 620, 626, ante] the limited suretyship was to secure a floating balance. These decisions establish that in such a case the suretyship is, prima facie at least, to be construed as a security for a part only of the debt, from which the consequence stated by MELLISH, L.J., [in Gray v. Seckham, No. 626, ante], follows; & I agree with what is intimated by LORD HATHERLEY in Hobson v. Bass, No. 625, ante, that if a creditor taking a limited security for a floating balance means it to be a security for the whole of the debt, & not merely for a part, he should take care that this is clearly expressed, for the prima facie construction is the other way (BLACKBURN, J.).—ELLIS v. EMMAUEL (1876), 1 Ex. D. 157; 46 L. J. Q. B. 25; 34 L. T. 553; 24 W. R. 832, O. A.

628. — — — — —.]—Where, under the terms of a guarantee the surety becomes a surety for the whole amount of the debt, although his liability is limited to a specified sum, & has paid that sum to the creditor, the creditor is nevertheless entitled to prove in the bkpcy. of the debtor for the full amount of his debt without deducting therefrom the amount received by him from the surety. It makes no difference whether the payment was made before or after the date of the receiving order.

Where the surety is surety for a part of the debt as between the principal creditor & the debtor, the right of the surety [to stand pro tanto in the shoes of the creditor] arises merely by payment of the part, because that part, as between him & the creditor, is the whole for the purpose of the guarantee. All that I have to do is to look at the guarantee & determine whether the surety became surety for the whole or for a part of the debt. It is true that his liability was to be limited to a certain amount, but, notwithstanding that his suretyship was in respect of the whole debt. . . . If there is any doubt about it, it seems to me that the last clause of the guarantee is sufficient to show that the bargain was that the bank should have the benefit of all sums paid by the debtor, whether by way of dividend or otherwise & of all securities held by the bank against the debtor's liability, until the whole amount of the debt was discharged (VAUGHAN-WILLIAMS, L.J.).—*Re SASS, Ex p. 630. — — — — — Future dividends.]—Bills of exchange amounting together to £523, drawn by A., & accepted for his accommodation by B., were deposited by A. with his bankers, as a security for any floating balance which might be due from him to them on his banking account. A. became bkpt. & his bankers proved a debt of £7,520 against his estate, exhibiting the bills of exchange as a security, but not proving on them specifically. The bankers afterwards received a dividend of 2s. in the pound on the whole debt. B. subsequently paid the amount of the bills:—Held: B. was entitled to have the dividend of 2s. in the pound, on the value of the bills, refunded by the bankers, as well as to receive the future dividends on the same amount.

These being mere accommodation bills, B., as between himself & the bkpt., was a mere surety for the £523. Upon what principle is the surety entitled to the future & not to the past dividends? It was contended that the security not being for any specific part of the debt, but for a floating balance, the creditor was entitled to receive all the dividends upon the whole debt, & to come upon the surety for the difference, or so much as might be necessary to pay the creditor in full, upon the principle that the creditor receiving money would be entitled to appropriate it to the part of the debt which is not secured. But the order negatives the application of any such rule, by giving to the surety all future dividends upon the £523; & that principle of appropriation can have no application to a case in which the payment is specifically on account of the debt secured. It is clear that the payment of 2s. in the pound upon the whole debt, including the £523, was a payment specifically of 2s. in every pound of the £523; & if the creditor, who has received the whole £523 from the surety, also retains the 2s. received as dividend upon that sum, he will be paid above £50 beyond the amount of the debt secured. That the dividend so received cannot be treated as a payment generally on account of the whole debt, but must be considered as a payment of part of each pound of the debt, is clear from the form in which it is made; & the law directing the payment, & several decisions, have held that such payments are to be so considered, particularly the case of Bardwell v. Lydall, No. 622, ante. The earlier cases of Paley v. Field, & Ex p. Rushworth, Nos. 620, 621, ante, proceeded upon a similar principle. If, then, the dividend received upon £523 is to be attributed to that portion of the debt which was secured by the bill of B. it is immaterial that the bankers had larger or other demands against the bkpt.; & if there had been no other debt but £523 due to the bankers, the right of B. paying the debt, to receive all the dividends upon such debt against the estate of the bkpts., would not be questioned (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—*Re GARNER, Ex p. 631. — Dividends before proof.—Where proof is made against a bkpt.'s estate on a guarantee entered into by the bkpt. on behalf of another person, if at the time of proving the creditor has received part of the debt, either by payment or as a dividend from the estate of the principal debtor, or even if such dividend has been declared though not actually paid, such creditor will be allowed to prove for the residue only after deducting the amount so paid or declared. But if after proof is made the creditor receives a dividend from the estate of the principal debtor that will not be deducted from the amount of his proof.

In Nov. 1889, the bkpt. gave to applts. who were a German banking co. a guarantee on behalf of his son to the extent of £7,500. In Jan. 1891, the son went into liquidation in Germany, & in Apr. 1891 a receiving order was made against the bkpt. in England upon which adjudication followed. The guarantee provided by its terms that the engagement of the guarantor was to be continuing & standing guarantee to the amount of £7,500 until notice in writing terminating it should be given, & until such notice it should not be considered as wholly or partially satisfied by the payment or liquidation at any time of any sum or sums of money for the time being due to the bank, but should extend to cover & be security for all future sums of money at any time due notwithstanding any such payment or liquidation; & it was further declared that all dividends, compositions & payments received from other parties should be taken & applied as payments in gross, & should not go or be taken as in discharge of any part of the guarantee, but that the guarantee should apply to & secure any ultimate balance which should remain due.—Held: on a proof made in the English bkpcy. that credit must be given by applts. for a sum of £1,593 received by them by way of dividend in the German liquidation of the son before the date of proof, but that certain further sums alleged to have been received in the German liquidation after the proof was made need not be deducted.—*Re BLAKELEY, Ex p. The broker became bkpt., & was indebted to the obligees in a considerable sum for premiums, & they received a dividend of 6s. in the pound under the commission. The premiums were due three years before the bkpcy., & the obligees did not call on the sureties until after the bankruptcy.—Held: (1) the sureties were not discharged by the laches of the obligees in suffering the credit of the broker to run on so long beyond the six months stipulated by the bond; (2) the dividend received by them under the commission, was to be deducted as against the sureties, from the penalty contained in the bond.—*LONDON ASSURANCE Co. v. 653. Liability not limited to specific amount—Indefinite supplies.—In April, 1867, in order to induce pltf. to continue his dealings with F., who was then largely indebted to him, deft. gave pltf. a guarantee as follows: "In the event of your supplying F. with coals during the next twelve months from April 1 last past, I do hereby guarantee the payment to you of the amount for the time being due from F. for coals sold by you to him." Before the expiration of the twelve months mentioned in the above guarantee, on July 23, 1867, the debt due from F. to pltf. having greatly increased, & pltf. pressing for a settlement, deft. gave him a further guarantee, as follows: "Whereas F. is & stands indebted to you in the sum of £2,205 3s. 9d. upon an account this day stated & settled between you & the said F., in addition to his liability upon two acceptances of mine to his drafts each for £750, dated July 3, 1867, & payable three & four months after date, & respectively indorsed to you by the said F.; & whereas you are pressing for the immediate payment of the said sum of £2,205 3s. 9d.; now, I do hereby, in consideration of your forbearing to take immediate steps for the recovery of the said sum, guarantee the payment of, & agree to become responsible for, any sum of money for the time being due from the said F. to you, whether in addition to the said sum of £2,205 3s. 9d. or no":—Held: this was a guarantee for future supplies of coal, unlimited both as to time & amount.

D., who had for some time bought skins at these sales, on Dec. 29, 1871, bought to the extent of £34 7s. 6d. Having heard that D. had executed a bill of sale, pltfs. declined to deliver the skins unless defts. would engage to be responsible for the price. This being communicated by D. to defts. the latter on Jan. 1, 1872, telegraphed to pltfs.: "We agree to be answerable for the skins," & on the same day sent them a covering letter, in which, after stating that they had had dealings with D. for five years, & had never known anything dishonourable or dishonest in any of his transactions, they wrote, "What you have heard was done to protect him from a dishonest tradesman, & will in no way, we hope, be to the injury of his creditors. Having every confidence in him, he has but to call upon us for a cheque & have it with pleasure for any account he may have with you; & when to the contrary we will write you." Pltfs. accordingly sent D. the goods, & continued to deal with him down to May 3, 1872, at which time he was indebted to them in £92 ls. 10d., which he was unable to pay, defts., who were the holders of the bill of sale, having seized & sold all his effects under it: Held: defts.' letter of Jan. 1 was a continuing guarantee.—*NOTTINGHAM ILDE, SKIN & FAT MARKET Co. v. Payments made generally to ptfs. on the account of A. may be applied by them in liquidation of a balance against A. before the execution of the bond, & B. cannot insist upon their being applied in exoneration of his liability on the bond although at the time of his entering into it ptfs. did not give him notice that any balance was then existing against A.—*KIRBY v. 656. — — — — —.]—A. & Co., bankers in the country, being pressed by B. & Co., bankers in town, to whom they are indebted, to send up any bills that they can procure, transmit for account an accommodation bill accepted by D.; when the bill becomes due, the balance is in favour of A. & Co., but the bills are not withdrawn, & afterwards the balance between the houses turns considerably in favour of B. & Co., & is so when A. & Co. become bkpt. B. & Co. are entitled to recover against the acceptor.

It appears from the letter in which the bills were sent to ptfs. that they were sent "on account," which means the then floating account. It is clear that there was a period when pltf.'s lien ceased to attach, when the bills might have been redeemed, but they were not reclaimed, & by allowing them to remain in the hands of ptfs., the lien revealed, when, upon fresh advances made, the balance turned in favour of ptfs. It was agreed that this bond should not affect a prior security to ptfs. by T. in 1817; but no notice was given to deft. by ptfs. that T. was indebted to them £10,000 at the time deft. executed his bond; T., however, saw the accounts every fortnight, & received the vouchers half-yearly. At the close of his account, T. was indebted to ptfs. more than £10,000, but subsequently to the executing of deft.'s bond he had paid into ptfs.' bank more than £5,000:—Held: deft. was liable to the extent of £5,000, & there being no agreement between the parties that the payments made by T. after the execution of the bond should be applied to the new account, to guarantee running accounts.—*WILLIAMS v. R. & Co. paid into L.'s bank to their account more than £1,000 during the eighteen months, but they overdraw their account several times during the same period. At the end of the time R. & Co. made default in payment of the £1,000, & had overdrawn their account £24, whereupon L. sued A. on the guarantee. L. obtained a verdict against A. for £1,000 :—Held : (1) a continuing guarantee, & in placing a construction on it the position of the parties as well as the words of the contract were to be considered so that it was not to be avoided by L. allowing B. to overdraw his account to an amount together with the sum of £1,000 exceeding £1,000.

The co. kept a current account with the bankers, & the drafts of its agent were from time to time honoured & debited to this current account. One of the guarantors died & his estate was under the administration of the ct. The co.'s current account had been constantly overdrawn; at the date of testator's death it was overdrawn to the amount of £1,605 18s. 6d.; & the co. was now in liquidation :—Held : the guarantees given were a continuing security not satisfied by the earlier credits in the current account, & therefore, the bankers were entitled to prove against testator's estate for the sum of £1,605 18s. 6d. & interest at four per cent. from the date of testator's death.

662. ————.]—Form of guarantee—Simple money bond.—Where a bond, which, on the face of it, appears to be a simple money bond, is given to secure a sum certain with interest, it must be construed, so far at least as regards the surety, as given to secure the debt then existing, & not to cover floating balances. The conduct of the principals, creditor & debtor, with respect to such a bond, will not affect the rights & liabilities of an innocent surety, who has not authorised their dealing with the bond in a particular manner. The fact that a bond is payable on demand, & that interest is payable from the date of the bond, is a circumstance to show that it is a simple money bond, & not a bond to secure floating balances.—WALKER v. HARDMAN (1837), 11 Bli. N. Further advances were made by the bank to C. & co. subsequent to this guarantee. Defts. subsequently sold the property of C. & co. under the provisions of the composition deed, & the proceeds were insufficient to pay the creditors the composition of 7s. 6d. in the pound: Held: the meaning of the guarantee was not that defts. should be liable to the bank only out of the proceeds realised from the estate of C. & co. after payment of the composition of 7s. 6d. to the creditors, but they were liable in the first instance to repay out of the proceeds the whole amount of the advances made by the bank to C. & co. as well before as after the guarantee.

(1) A father, being desirous of obtaining advances for his son from a bank, gave the son a promissory note for £2,000, & gave the bank an agreement under seal to this effect, that, in consideration of the bank discounting the note for £2,000 for his son, certain deeds & documents which the father deposited with the bank should remain with the bank as security for the payment of all money due or to become due from the son to the bank on any account whatsoever; & that he would pay the bank upon demand all such money, & he thereby charged the property comprised in such documents with the repayment thereof:—Held: this agreement was not limited to the £2,000, but was a continuing guarantee for all money already due, or which should become due from the son to the bank. Semble: a general guarantee under seal may, under certain circumstances, be withdrawn upon the terms of paying all that may be due under it at the time of giving notice of withdrawal.

(2) What I have to decide is, whether under a guarantee dated Mar. 21, 1870, signed by E. M., testator in the cause in which this summons is taken out, he became liable to pay only a particular debt of his son W. H. M., or whether he became liable to pay whatever the son owed, or should afterwards owe, to the bank, to whom the guarantee was given.

In order to determine that question, the ct., in this as in other matters, will put itself as well as it can in the position of the parties at the time of the transaction, & from the surrounding circumstances, as well as the words of the instrument, ascertain what was the real intention of the parties to it (MALINS, V.-C.).

(3) My opinion is that a person who gives a guarantee would have a right to say to the person taking it, "You will continue at your own peril to employ the person on whose behalf I gave the guarantee"; provided that the clerk or other person has been guilty of embezzlement or gross misconduct, or has turned out to be unworthy of the confidence reposed in him by the person giving the guarantee for him. If the employer under such circumstances refused to give the guarantee up, the person giving it would have a right to file a bill in this ct., & in my opinion would succeed in the contest, because the ct. would direct the bond to be delivered up to be cancelled (MALINS, V.-C.).—*BURGESS v. plea, that the son faithfully served till he came of age, & that he then avoided the indenture : Held : this was no answer to the action.

The father here binds himself that the son shall serve seven years. It is no answer for the father to say that it was in the option of the son whether he would serve or not. Non-payment of rent — Under defective lease of tolls.—By a local statute prior to Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), trustees of a turnpike road were empowered to let the tolls by writing under their hands & seals; the rent to be made payable to their treasurer, in default of which every such lease should be “null & void to all intents & purposes whatsoever.”—Held : (1) this clause was still imperative, though by Turnpike Roads Act it is enacted, that after the tolls shall have been let, as there directed, the purchaser shall “enter into a proper agreement” for the taking thereof, & paying the rent, “under such conditions & in such manner” as the trustees shall think fit. (2) A lease making the rent payable to the trustees or their treasurer, was not conformable to the local Act; (3) the words “null & void” in that Act were not to be construed as “voidable,” but the lessee or their surety might treat the lease as absolutely void; & the lessee’s surety might take advantage of the above defect, in an action brought against him by the trustees for non-payment of the rent, though the lessee had taken the tolls for several years under the lease.—*PEARSE v. 670. Illegal loan to principal.—M., with S. & others, were joint obligors in a bond conditioned to answer for any balance which might become due from M. to a bank in Scotland, with whom he had obtained a credit according to the Scottish system of banking. M., in the course of his dealings, drew upon the bank by written orders for sums made payable to bearer, & issued at a place more than ten miles distant, & also post dated; being in both respects contrary to Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), s. 13, which not only imposes a penalty upon the parties to such drafts, but makes the transaction void. The mode of drawing was known by the bankers. M. having overdrawn the bank to the amount of £4,378 : an action upon the bond was brought against S. by the bank, to recover the amount :—Held : no debt had been incurred, & therefore the parties were not liable upon the bond.—SWAN v. BANK OF SCOTLAND (1836), 10 Bl. N. S. 627 ; 1 Deac. 746 ; 2 Mont. & A. 656 ; 6 E. R. 231, H. L.

671. — Ultra vires borrowing.—By the certified rules of an unincorporated building society the directors might borrow money not exceeding a prescribed amount. Loans were made to the society through its secretary in accordance with advertisements, issued with the authority of the directors, that such loans might be so made by bringing the money to the office of the secretary. In each case a receipt was given by the secretary for the money as a loan to the society, with a written undertaking by him “to procure the promissory note of the directors for the loan,” & afterwards, in pursuance to such undertaking, the receipt was exchanged for such note, which always bore the date of the receipt. After an amount had been so borrowed exceeding the limit prescribed by the rules, plffs., who had on several previous occasions lent money to the society according to the above mode, paid a sum to the secretary as a loan to the society, & received from him the usual receipt & undertaking, but no promissory note of the directors was ever afterwards given, & the secretary absconded, appropriating that sum, with other moneys of the society to his own use. In an action against the society & directors, the jury found that the society held out the secretary to plffs. as having authority to receive the loan on their behalf on the terms on which it was received, & that the directors did the same :—Held : such finding was bad in point of law as against the society, & as the limit for borrowing prescribed by the rules had been exceeded when the loan was made by plffs., the society, which had derived no benefit, was not liable for such loan; although there was no fraud on the part of the directors they were personally liable to plffs. for the money which had been so advanced.—(*HAPLEB v. 675. Guarantee by directors—Of ultra vires covenants by company.—Pltf. being desirous of finding his son-in-law a business occupation advanced £1,500 for the purchase of 1,500 cumulative preference shares in the C. co. to enable his son-in-law to take a position in the co. for a probationary period, & an agreement dated Jan. 4, 1924, was entered into between the co., the two defts., the directors of the co., & shareholders, pltf. & his son-in-law, whereby the co. covenanted with pltf. to guarantee the punctual payment of the cumulative 8 per cent. preferential dividends in the 1,500 shares, & if the agreement was terminated as therein provided for, to procure the repurchase from pltf. at par of the 1,500 shares, & to secure such repurchase the co. further covenanted to accept bills for £1,500 to be drawn upon the co. by pltf.; defts. also by the agreement jointly & severally covenanted with pltf. to guarantee the full & proper performance by the co. of the covenants on its part therein contained, & in the event of default by the co. under its covenants to accept liability & to guarantee the payment to pltf. in such manner as if the covenants by the co. had been repeated in extenso in this guarantee by defts. The co., which carried on the business of import & export merchants, had made no profits since Dec. 31, 1919. The agreement was drawn up in good faith in the belief that it was intra vires of the co. Pltf. having terminated the agreement in Feb. 1924, sent to the co. a bill of exchange for £1,500 for their acceptance, & subsequently on the co. refusing to accept the bill sent a bill for £1,500 to defts. who also refused to accept it. The co. & defts. denied liability under the covenants & guarantee entered into by them respectively on the ground that the covenants by the co. contained in the agreement of Jan. 4, 1924, were ultra vires & illegal, since they would have necessitated the co. trafficking in or buying its own shares & paying a preferential dividend out of capital. Pltf. claimed a declaration that defts. were bound under their guarantee to pltf. contained in the agreement to accept a bill for £1,500 & specific performance, but admitted that the covenants with him by the co. were ultra vires & illegal:—Held: the guarantee by defts. to perform the covenants entered into by the co. if the co. did not perform them, was not dependent on whether the co. merely refused to perform its obligations under the covenants or were not legally liable to perform them, & there being good consideration for the guarantee in that the £1,500 was wanted by the co. for its business in which defts. were pecuniarily interested, such a bargain could be given effect to & the defts. were liable on their guarantee.—GARRARD v. JAMES, [1925] 1 Ch. 616; 94 L. J. Ch. 234; 133 L. T. 261; 69 Sol. Jo. 622.

SECT. 6.—GUARANTEE IN FRAUD OF CREDITOR

See, generally, MISREPRESENTATION & FRAUD.

676. Principal's name used as covenantor—Acts by surety in breach of covenant—Surety not bound in covenant.—A. agreed with B. for the purchase of timber; & together with C. entered into a bond that A., his exors. & administrators, should not cut down any timber under a particular size; but A.'s name was only made use of in this agreement for C. C. cuts down timber under the size stipulated; but as there could be no remedy against C. upon this bond, it was held to be a fraud on B. the seller & relievable in equity.—BUTLER v. PRENDERGAST (1720), 4 Bro. Parl. Cas. 174; 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 185; 2 E. R. 119, 11. L.

677. Misrepresentation by surety—Liability to action for fraud—Apart from promise.—If A. fraudulently represent the circumstances of B. to be good, in order to induce C. to give him credit, & add "if he does not pay for the goods, I will," an action may be maintained against A. for the misrepresentation, notwithstanding the addition of the promise.—HAMAR v. ALEXANDER (1806), 2 Bos. & P. N. R. 211; 127 E. R. 618.

678. —As to value of property—Charged by way of security—Proof in administration.—A. having accepted bills for the accommodation of B. who was unable to take them up, entered into an agreement to provide for payment of half of the amount of the outstanding bills, as they became due, a third person, party to the agreement, charging certain property to the extent of £1,500, for the benefit of A., by way of security, which property such third person alleged to be his own, & a security amply sufficient in value above incumbrances. More than half of the amount of the bills was afterwards paid by A., but the property of the third party charged as a security proved to be heavily incumbered, & insufficient:—Held: in a suit by A. against the exors. & devisees of the third party, the misrepresentation as to the surplus value proved, A. was entitled to have so much of the sum of £1,500 & interest as the specific property was insufficient to pay, raised & paid out of the general estate of testator.—INGRAM v. THORP (1848), 7 Hare, 67; 11 L. T. O. S. 171; 68 E. R. 27.

of his agent, acting in the course of his business. Pltf. having for some time on a guarantee of the debts supplied J., a customer of theirs, with oats on credit, for carrying out a govt. contract, refused to continue to do so unless he had a better guarantee. Defts.' manager thereupon gave him a written guarantee to the effect that the customer's cheque on the bank in pltf.'s favour in payment for the oats supplied, should be paid on receipt of the govt. money, priority to any other payment "except to this bank." J. was then indebted to the bank to the amount of £12,000, but this fact was not known to pltf., nor was it communicated to him by the manager. Pltf. thereupon supplied the oats to the value of £1,217: the govt. money amounting to £2,676 was received by J. & paid into the bank; but J.'s cheque for the price of oats drawn on the bank in favour of pltf. was dishonoured by defts., who claimed to retain the whole sum of £2,676 in payment of J.'s debt to them. Pltf. having brought an action for false representation, & for money had & received:—Held: there was evidence to go to the jury that the manager knew & intended that the guarantee should be unavailing & fraudulently concealed from pltf. the fact which would make it so.—BARWICK v. C. answered: "I have much pleasure in replying affirmatively." On this

B. was accepted as tenant, but afterwards deserted the premises without paying any rent. C., when he answered the reference, was well acquainted with the antecedents of B., & knew him to be a person of no substantial means, who had twice previously failed in business similar to that which he intended to carry on on the premises in question. C., however, had no positive intention to deceive:—Held: C. was answerable to A. in damages for misrepresentation.—LEDDELL v. McDUGAL (1881), 29 W. R. 403, C. A.

692. — — — What constitutes assignment.]—M. drew bills upon the B. co., & a banking co., under an agreement with M., guaranteed the acceptors, also a co., that they would supply them with funds to meet the bills. S. discounted the bills, being informed by M. of the guarantee of the banking co., but he gave no notice to the banking co. or to the acceptors. Afterwards the banking co. & the acceptors suspended payment & were wound up. M. also executed a deed of composition with his creditors:—Held: S. had no equity to rank as a creditor of the banking co. in respect of the guarantee.

It is said that the drawer who gets the bills discounted & has the advantage of this guarantee, by telling another that such a guarantee exists, & raising money on the faith of that, does the same thing as if he assigned the benefit of the guarantee. But it is not M., the drawer of the bill, that has the right against the bank, but it is the acceptors that have the right. The acceptors are not dealing with S. & trying to induce him to discount bills for their friends, but the drawer who gets the money says: "I have bills drawn on a good acceptor, & if you do not think that acceptor is good he is backed by somebody else." The question is, does that transfer the right which the acceptor has to somebody else? Does it make the discounter of the bill a creditor of the co. who has agreed to hold the acceptor harmless? It is clear that cannot be so (PAGE WOOD, L.J.).—Re BARNED'S BANKING Co., Ex p. STEPHENS (1868), 3 Ch. App. 753; 19 L. T. 198; 16 W. R. 1162, L. J.J.

The debtors indorsed the note, & handed it, together with the guarantee, to applt.s., their bankers, who thereupon placed £16,000 to their credit. The note was not paid at maturity: & H. & co., having become bkpt., applt.s. sought to prove as unsecured creditors for the full amount of the balance due to them without deducting the value of the guarantee:—Held: the transfer of the guarantee by the debtors to applt.s. did not constitute the latter "secured creditors" within Bkpcy. Act, 1883, s. 168, as being "persons holding a mtge., charge or lien on the property of debtors," & the proof ought therefore to be admitted.

It is true that the property in that contract [the guarantee] cannot pass by indorsement, but if H. & Co. handed it over, intending the benefit of the contract to be in the bankers, the property in it passed in this sense, that at common law H. & Co. would have been bound to lend their name to C. & Co. [the bankers] to enable them to sue upon it; while if H. & Co. brought an action upon it in their own name & on their own behalf, the action would have been stopped on the ground that they were bare trustees for C. & Co. Can I come to the conclusion that if an action was brought in a ct. of law against one of the three alone & a plea of abatement was put in, a ct. of law would have held such separate action maintainable? No authority is cited for this proposition. There is, it is true, the dictum which tends that way in Thorpe v. Jackson, No. 601, ante, but it is at most only a dictum & not a decision. I have no hesitation in saying I cannot take it as an authority. In the lifetime of C. then, an action must have been against the three. If he had survived the others, an action might have been sustained against him, but when he died, according to the tenor of the instrument he ceased to be liable, because the debt was joint & the obligation survived (*KINDERSELEY, V. brought an action at law against the surety, it had been held, that the surety was released. The bill prayed payment by the surety of the debt:—Held: on demurrer, the principal debtor was a necessary party to the suit.—BROOKS v. STUART (1839), 1 Beav. 512; 8 L. J. Ch. 270; 48 E. R. 1039.

705. Action on bill of exchange—Plaintiff as indorser & subsequent indorsee—Surety intermediate indorser—Circuity of actions not arising.]—The son of deft. bought goods of pltf., & required credit to enable him to pay. It was agreed that deft. should become surety for the price of the goods. Pltf. accordingly drew two bills of exchange on the son of deft., & indorsed them to deft., who reindorsed them to pltf. The bills having been dishonoured at maturity:—Held: (1) pltf. were not precluded from suing deft. on the ground of circuity of action, & they could recover the amount of the bills from deft.; (2) the agreement to become surety could be proved by parol evidence, as the action was brought not on the guarantee, but on the bill.

If the indorser of a bill of exchange subsequently becomes the indorsee, he can maintain no action against the intermediate indorsers because he would himself be liable to them by reason of his antecedent indorsement. But if the holder of the bill would not be liable to the indorser whom he is suing by reason of any previous indorsement of his own, he may enforce his claim because no circuity of action arises (BRAMWELL, L.J.).

It has been argued that the agreement relied upon by pltf. must be proved by a memorandum in writing because the contract is one of suretyship. The contract, however, is not within the words or the reason of Stat. Frauds. If the buyer of goods accepts a bill drawn upon him for the price by a surety who afterwards indorses it to the seller, the surety cannot refuse to pay the amount upon default of the principal debtor, because the agreement under which the bill was signed was not in writing (BRAMWELL, L.J.).—*WILKINSON v. 713. Evidence in mitigation of damages—No loss suffered by plaintiff.—Deft. was a surety by bond to pltf. for the due performance of a contract by S. according to a certain agreement. By that agreement S. was to complete the works for a certain sum, & payment was to be made to him by pltf. during the continuance of the work, by instalments, viz., three-fourths of the cost of the work certified to have been done every two months. & the remaining one-fourth one month after the whole was completed. S. applied for & received advances from pltf. exceeding in amount the value of the work done by him, for some of which advances he gave security. The work not being done at the specified time, pltf. called in another builder to complete the work, & the amount paid to him, added to the advances made to S., greatly exceeded the original contract price, but, added to the value of the work done by S., was something under the contract price. In an action against the surety on the bond, to which there was a plea of non est factum:—Held: deft. might show in reduction of damages, that the advances were made by pltf. not according to the contract, & as the work had been completed within the contract price, pltf. were only entitled to nominal damages; & it would have been improper to plead non damnificatus.—*WARRE v. 725. Date from which time runs—Ascertainment of all facts—On which liability depends.]—In 1816 G. shipped goods on board a vessel chartered by him for C. & B. & co. made advances to enable him to do so, under an arrangement that the goods should be transmitted to the agents at C. of B. & co., who were to dispose of the outward cargo there, & send the proceeds in goods or bills to B. & co. in L. who were to reimburse themselves their charges, & hold the balance at the disposal of G. In Nov. 1817, G. being in difficulties & indebted to debts. in £850, debts. & G. applied to B. & co. to pay off this debt by a further advance to G. on his consignment, & debts. gave B. & co. the following guarantee:—"Messrs. B. & Co.—You having expressed some doubts of the propriety of paying G.'s draft on you for £850 in our favour, we hereby engage, if you will pay us the same, that we will reimburse you the amount of demand, with interest, in the event of your finding it necessary to call upon us to do so, either from the state of G.'s pending account with you, or from any other circumstances." B. & co. thereupon accepted & paid a bill for £850, drawn by G. on them in favour of debts. The vessel returned to England with a cargo in April, 1818, when C. the owner, G. having become bkpt., gave notice to the E. I. co., in whose docks she lay, not to deliver any part of the cargo without his authority; they thereupon sold the cargo, & paid the owner's demand for freight, & in consequence of conflicting claims from G.'s assignees & from B. & co. filed an interpleader bill, & paid the balance of the proceeds into ct. Proceedings at law & equity were continued between all the above parties, under legal advice, up to the year 1837, when the result was, that B. & co. were obliged to pay C.'s costs. In 1838, B. & co. demanded of debts. the £850 due by the guarantee, with interest & their share of the expenses incurred in the law proceedings, & on their refusal to pay, brought an action against them on the guarantee:—Held: Stat. Limitations began to run against pltf., not from the termination of the legal proceedings in 1837, but from the return & sale of the cargo in 1818, when all the facts were ascertained upon which debts.' legal liability depended, & therefore it was a bar to the action; debts. could not be made liable under the guarantee, for the expenses incurred by pltf. in the law proceedings. —(COLVIN v. BUCKLE (1841), 8 M. & W. 680; 11 L. J. Ex. 33; 151 E. R. 1212.)

726. — Promissory note—Date on which given.]—C. & S. (the latter by way of guarantee) gave their joint & several promissory note for £200 to a banking co., as security for advances to be made by the bank to C. A memorandum of the same date, & signed by the same parties, accompanied the note, & purported to be a further & collateral security, for C.'s banking account:—Held: the note & memorandum must be construed together, & Stat. Limitations did not run from the time when the advances were first made by the bank to C., but from the time when the first balance was struck.

Notwithstanding that the instrument is a promissory note, payable on demand, which prima facie indicates a present existing liability, enforceable without demand, & as to which Stat. Limitations runs from the date, we think we are bound to read it & the memorandum together, in order to ascertain the true meaning & character of the transaction. It is clear that, until an advance was made by the banking co. to C., no action could have been maintained upon the note. Until then there would have been no consideration, & until there was consideration, no action would be maintainable, & Stat. Limitations only runs from the time when the cause of action accrued (POLLOCK, C.B.).—*HARTLAND v. JUKES (1863), 1 H. & C. 607; 1 New Rep. 480; 32 L. J. Ex. 162; 7 L. T. 792; 9 Jur. N. S. 180; 11 W. No demand for payment had been made upon her, but demand was made upon her exors. within six years before action.—Held: the clause as to default being inserted for the protection of the guarantor, Stat. There was a part payment of interest which satisfied the statute & kept the bond alive as against debt. ## SUB-SECT. 2.—WHERE CO-DEBTORS.

738. General rule—Knowledge of creditor.]—

(1) Where two persons give a joint promissory note for the debt of one, it is necessary, in order to give the other the rights of a surety as against the creditor, to show that he was only a surety, that the creditor knew him to be so, & that he accepted him as such.

(2) A person appearing on the face of an instrument to be a principal debtor jointly with another, cannot, at law, set up, as against third parties, that he was only a surety. Qu.: whether he can do so in equity.

(3) Mere forbearance or inactivity on the part of a creditor will not discharge a surety.

A., being a customer of a bank, got B. to join him in a promissory note to the bank, & sent the note to the bank, intimating that he had got B. to join him in it; but the note was not entered in A.'s account. After it became due, A. had a balance at the bank larger than the amount of the note. In an action on the note by the bank against B., he pleaded, by way of equitable defence, that he was only surety, & was accepted as such by the bank, that the bank gave A. time for the payment of the note, & forbore to enforce payment, & the bank might have obtained payment from A. if they had not given him time:—Held: even if B. could say in equity that he was surety, the plea was not proved; it did not appear that he was accepted as surety; there was no evidence that time had been given to A. so as to discharge B. & the bank did not, by refraining from appropriating A.'s balance to the payment of the note, discharge B. from his liability on it.—STRONG v. FOSTER (1855), 17 C. B. 201; 25 L. J. C. P. 106; 26 L. T. O. S. 62, 106; 4 W. R. 151; 139 E. R. 1047.

739. Suretyship not apparent on face of instrument—Joint bond—Release of one co-debtor.]—Where three persons entered into a joint bond, & it did not appear, either on the bond or condition, that two of them were sureties for the other:—Held: a release given by the obligee to the representative of one of the deceased obligors was no answer to an action against the surviving obligors.—*ASHBEE v. pltf. contained in the note could not be varied by parol in equity any more than at law, yet an equity arose from the relation of surety & principal between deft. & J., & the notice thereof to pltf. at the time he took the note; & therefore the plea was good.

Qu.: whether the equity would have existed if the notice had been after the taking of the notes, but before the giving of time.

742. — — — — — Acceptance by creditor unnecessary.]—(1) Notice to a creditor when his debt is contracted that the relation of principal & surety exists between his co-debtors is sufficient to affect him with the consequences of that relation without any further acceptance of it on his part.

(2) But it is not a consequence of that relation that the creditor, without any inquiry on the part of the surety, should acquaint him with every circumstance affecting the credit of the debtor, or of any matter unconnected with the transaction in which he is about to engage which may render it hazardous, the principles applicable to insurances not applying to such a case.

(3) A customer, being desirous of obtaining an advance from his bankers on the credit of a surety employs solrs. for that purpose, who are also the ordinary solrs. of the bankers, but are not employed by them in the transaction in question. The solrs., however, give information to the bankers as to the sufficiency of the surety, & debit them with the costs of preparing the instrument of suretyship:—Held: they could not be regarded as having acted for the bankers from the beginning, so as to effect the bankers with notice of any concealment or misrepresentation on the part of the customer towards the surety.

"for the flour so supplied as aforesaid." It appeared as the result of evidence that at the time when plff. executed the bond, M. & the agent of B. & C. being present, he asked the agent whether there were any trade debts owing from M. to B. & C., & the agent said "No." Upon the faith of this representation he executed the bond. At this time there was a trade debt owing from M. to B. & C., but the usual credit allowed for repayment had not expired:—Held: plff. was entitled to be relieved against the bond, on the ground of misrepresentation. B. & C. admitted that they never did, & never intended to supply M. with flour of the same quality as that specified in the conditions of the Govt. contract, of which conditions they said they were ignorant; but inasmuch as they had bound plff. to make payment to them of the price agreed upon for "such flour" as would enable M. to carry out the contract, & they admitted they did not furnish M. with such flour, plff. was entitled on this ground also to have his execution of the bond cancelled.

763. Right to raise defence on equitable grounds.]—Indorsees of bills of exchange as a security for a floating balance due on the accounts between them & the drawer had notice that the acceptor was a surety for the drawer. They afterwards entered into an agreement with the latter that the existing debt should be liquidated by the drawer building for them certain ships, & should, in the meantime, be secured by a policy of assurance:—Held: (1) time was thus given to the principal debtor, & the surety was released in equity, if not at law also; (2) a creditor who holds a floating guarantee from a surety cannot, without the surety's consent, give time to the principal debtor as to a portion of the debt, without reserving the creditor's rights against the surety, & yet hold the surety liable for that portion; (3) whether the acceptor could or could not use, by way of defence to an action by the holders of the bills, the giving of time by them to the drawer, he was not bound to do so, but might, at the risk of costs, defend the action on other grounds, & also institute a suit for equitable relief & an injunction to restrain the proceedings at law, though if the matter had been pleaded at law, & the ct. of law had adjudicated on the plea, the case might have been different.—*DAVIES v. 764. Plea of fraudulent connivance between debtor & creditor.] A plea by a surety that a judgment was obtained against his principal by fraud, viz. by plff. in that suit fraudulently procuring deft. to confess, & by deft. falsely & fraudulently confessing the action, without averring more, is bad.

The parties to a replevin suit referred to arbitr. the time of payment of the rent, with certain claims of the tenant on the landlord for damages, with liberty for the tenant to deduct them, when awarded, from the rent, & agreed to suspend proceedings in replevin pending the reference. After award made: Held: the sureties in the replevin bond were not thereby discharged.—MOORE v. BOWMAKER (1816), 7 Taunt. 97; 2 Marsh. 392; 129 E. R. 39; *subsequent proceedings, sub nom. 765. — — — — — An injunction having been obtained to restrain proceedings in an action on a bond in which plff. had joined as a surety, on the ground of misrepresentation on the part of the obligee, & a deviation by him, with the concurrence of the principal obligor, from the terms of the contract on which the bond was founded, & it appearing on the evidence that there was reason to suppose that there had been such misrepresentation & deviation, although the evidence was not conclusive on the point: the ct. refused on motion to dissolve the injunction, or to put plff. on the terms of bringing the money into ct.—ALLAN v. INMAN (1843), 7 Jur. 433; previous proceedings, 7 Jur. 28.

766. Right to re-open accounts.]—In the winding up of cos., where the surety for a defaulting liquidator becomes liable upon his bond, it is not the practice to give notice to the surety of the taking of the accounts as against the liquidator; but if the surety becomes aware of the taking of the accounts & applies for leave to attend, such leave will be granted at his own expense.

H. was appointed liquidator in a winding up. The G. Society became his sureties for £3,000, & for that purpose entered into a bond, which provided that the certificate of the chief clerk should be conclusive evidence as between all parties that the bond had been forfeited to the amount stated in the certificate. of H. a fresh liquidator was appointed in his place. The accounts of H. which were carried in & vouched without any notice having been given to the society, showed a probable deficit of £4,500. The society, on receiving notice of the date fixed for the final passing of the accounts, attended & asked to have them re-opened in their presence. The ct. allowed the society to have the accounts re-opened, on the terms that they should pay into ct. the whole of the £3,000 for which they were liable, together with £100, for the costs of such re-opening, & should undertake to pay interest on the amount to be found due from them, & pay the costs of the application.—Re BIRMINGHAM BREWING, MALTING & DISTILLING CO., LTD. (1883), 52 L. 768. — Set off available to foreign debtor by foreign law.]—If a bill of exchange is drawn in one country & payable in another, & the bill is dishonoured, the drawer is liable, according to the lex loci contractus, & not the law of the country where the bill was made payable, but where a bill is drawn generally, the liabilities of the drawer, acceptor, & indorsers, are governed by the laws of the countries in which the drawing, acceptance, & indorsement respectively take place. The principle of compensation in the civil law, adopted by the Dutch-Roman Law, applies to bills of exchange, & a debt due by a debtor to a creditor is extinguished by a liquid debt of the same amount due from the creditor to the debtor.

A., resident in Demerara, drew a bill of exchange in favour of B., also resident in Demerara, payable in London, upon C., resident in Scotland, & C. accepted the same, making it payable in London. B. indorsed the bill to D., who shortly afterwards became bkpt. When C.'s acceptance became due, he held two bills of exchange accepted by D., which were dishonoured & protested for non-payment. D.'s assignees did not proceed against C., but brought an action in Demerara against A. & B., the drawer & indorser, who pleaded a right of set-off to the extent of the two bills accepted by D., which the Supreme Ct. disallowed, & found for plffs. :—Held: (1) the bill having been drawn in Demerara, the Dutch-Roman Law, in force in that colony, must govern the case, & by that law, the bill accepted by C. was compensated or extinguished, pro tanto, by the bills accepted by D.; (2) a surety was entitled to avail himself of this rule of law, in respect of a debt due to the principal debtor; (3) the drawer & indorser were to be deemed sureties for the acceptor, & entitled to plead this right of set-off.—*ALLEN v. 769. — —.]—In an action against a surety to recover a part of a debt, by the first & second counts plffs. declared as indorsees of a bill of exchange drawn by them, & accepted by H., indorsed by plffs. to deft., & by him to plffs.; the third & fourth counts were upon another bill of exchange; & the fifth count was upon a deed whereby deft. bound himself to secure payment by H. of his two acceptances. The counts upon the two bills averred that plffs. indorsed the bills to deft. without consideration, in order that they might be indorsed by deft. to plffs. for the purpose of deft. becoming surety for the payment of the bills by the acceptor, H., to plff. As to a sum of £4,600, part of the money so alleged to have been secured by the bills & deed, deft., to the five counts, pleaded, on equitable grounds, that the two bills which were guaranteed by deft. had been given for the balance of the purchase-money for certain stations in New South Wales, previously purchased by H. from plffs., under an agreement which provided, that in case of any dispute between the vendors & the purchaser as to any matter connected with the sale, such dispute should not annul the sale, but should be referred to arbn. in the manner therein stated; & the plea further stated, that a dispute had arisen as to the extent of land comprised in the stations, that H. had appointed one S. as his arbitrator, that plffs. neglected to appoint an arbitrator, & that S. made his award concerning the dispute, & thereby awarded that plffs. should pay to H. £4,600, in satisfaction of his claim. The plea also stated, that H., before the commencement of the suit, claimed & offered to deduct & set-off the sum of £4,600 against an equal amount in price:—Held: (1) the plea constituted a good equitable defence to the action, as, from the nature & terms of the contract set forth in the plea, the compensation admitted to have been awarded was an abatement of the price of the stations, & reduced pro tanto the amount of the purchase-money then unpaid, & as in equity deft. might have claimed the benefit of the amount of compensation awarded as a deduction, he was entitled to put this forward as a defence, on equitable grounds, to so much of the cause of action as was covered by that amount; (2) in considering the validity of the equitable plea with respect to parties, it was necessary to bear in mind, that H. was not a necessary party to the action, as a ct. of equity could, without making H. a party, grant an unconditional injunction restraining plffs. from suing out execution

SUB-SECT. 1.—RECOVERY OF MONEY IMPROPERLY PAID.

781. Money paid in ignorance of facts.] Pltf. was co-surety with K. in a bond given by B. to the guardians of a union, conditioned for the due accounting to them of moneys received by him as treasurer. At the time the bond was entered into, B. was a member of a banking firm into which the moneys of the union were afterwards paid, & drawn out by the guardians by cheques in their name. The firm became bkpt., & B. having ceased to be treasurer the guardians demanded of pltf., as such surety, the balance due from B. the late treasurer. Pltf., in ignorance of the facts, paid the money:—Held: (1) the sureties were not liable on the bond, & pltf., having paid the money in ignorance of the facts, was entitled to recover it back; (2) K., the co-surety, could not be joined in the action.—MILLS v. ALDERBURY UNION (1849), 3 Exch. 590; 18 L. J. Ex. 252; 12 L. T. O. S. 454; 13 J. P. 621; 154 E. R. 980.

782. Right to stand in creditor's place—As to all rights & remedies.] STIRLING v. FORRESTER, No. 1033, post.

783. — — — —.]—It is a principle of equity, that a surety paying a debt shall be entitled to all the rights & remedies which the principal creditor had, so as to work out his indemnity by payment. He is entitled to every remedy within the reach of the creditor, & may compel the creditor to render all those rights & remedies available.

If the surety had not paid the debt even, but upon a bill filed against the principal creditor he offered to pay it, & stated the fact of the debtor having gone abroad, & that without the relief of equity he could have no other remedy for his debt, he might compel the principal creditor even to sue out a fiat so as to work out his payment & indemnity (SIR (L. ROSE).—Re ROGERS, Ex p. ROGERS (1835), 4 Deac. & Ch. 623; 2 Mont. & A. 153; 4 L. J. Bcy. 19.

784. — — — —.]—Deft. only contends that after having made these payments, or, at the time of making them, he is entitled to have the policy handed over to him, which was assigned to pltf. as a security for the debt due to them from the principal debtor, for whom he was surety, alleging that pltf. had refused to hand it over to him, although he offered, on receiving it, to pay the sums which he owed them, still offering to pay these same, & to indemnify pltf. . . . As a surety, having done all that is incumbent upon him in the fulfilment of his engagement, he would be entitled, as against the debtor for whom he was surety, to stand in the shoes of the creditor, & to have an assignment of any security which the satisfied creditor held for the debt guaranteed. But no authority was cited to show what precise relief a ct. of equity would have given to deft., if judgment had been obtained against him in this action; &, at all events, he would be entitled to no relief against the judgment, unless he filed a bill against the now pltf. & the principal debtor, & paid into ct. or undertook to pay the sums which he admits he owes to pltf. on the judgment. He could only ask for a temporary or conditional injunction against suing out execution on the judgment, not for a perpetual or absolute injunction (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—*WODEHOUSE v. The mtge. was paid off, & the policy was sold by the trustee of the creditors' deed, under a power contained therein. Subsequently, by a special resolution of the debenture holders, which was neither assented to nor dissented from by pltf., the date for payment of the debentures of the co. was postponed. Pltf.'s debenture was not paid off on Nov. 4, 1895, nor in three calendar months after that date:—Held: assuming the special resolution to be valid, the contract was nevertheless one of insurance against the default of the co. to pay the amount of the debenture on the original date; there had been a default by the co. to pay money due under the debenture within the meaning of the policy; & pltf. was therefore entitled to

& to recover from B. the money which A. should pay to D. for such reconveyance; & the bill was dismissed against C. A. afterwards procured an assignment of D.'s mtge. to a trustee, & in the name of the mtgees. brought an action against C. on his covenant & bond:—Held: if A. had redeemed D. the debt would have gone as against C.; C. as the surety of B. would, on payment of the mtge. debt, be entitled to the benefit of the security held by D., such security not having been disturbed by the decree; the charge of participation by C., in the fraud, whereby B. had been enabled to create the mtge. on the estate, was not a ground for depriving C. of such right; & C. was, therefore, in a suit for an injunction to restrain A. from suing him on the bond & covenant, entitled to such relief.

(2) The circumstance of the dismissal, as against C. of the bill brought by A. against B. & C., which prayed that the mtge. debt might be paid by B. & C., was material to the case, though it was not alone conclusive, as it might well be that there might be no equity to compel C. to pay the debt, though C. might have no equity to be relieved from his legal liability to pay it.

809. Securities acquired after guarantee given.—The contract of suretyship entitles the surety to require that his position shall not be altered by any arrangement between the creditor & the principal debtor from that in which he stood at the time of the contract; & it therefore entitles him absolutely to the benefit of all the securities for the debt which the creditor held at the time of the contract; it also entitles the surety, at any time, to require that the creditor shall enforce against the principal debtor not only all his remedies, & all the securities for the debt which he has at the time of the contract, but also any securities for the debt which the creditor may have acquired subsequently to the contract, & which he holds at the time that the surety requires him to proceed.

As a person paying off a debt for which he is liable is entitled in equity to stand in the place of the creditor, & to have the benefit of the securities held by the creditor for such debt; so the surety, on paying off the debt of the principal debtor, is entitled to require from the creditor the benefit not only of the securities for the debt which the creditor had at the time of the contract of suretyship, but also of all the securities which he holds at the time he is paid off. But there is no implied duty in the contract of suretyship which requires the creditor to retain, for the benefit of the surety, securities for the debt which he might subsequently receive from the principal debtor, & which, whilst the creditor holds them, the surety does not call upon him to enforce; & a creditor, who, after the contract of suretyship, having taken a further security from the principal debtor, subsequently parts with that security, does not thereby, either wholly or pro tanto, release the surety.—*NEWTON v. Therefore, where a creditor held a mtge. for a debt for which pltf. was surety, & after the bkpcy. of the principal debtor without notice to the surety released the assignees & the bkpt.'s estate in consideration of the conveyance to him of the equity of redemption:—Held: the surety was discharged, & it was not enough for the creditor to allow in account the dividends released, & to give a new charge on the mortgaged premises.

816. —.]—The acceptor of a bill of exchange knows that, by his acceptance he does an act which will make him liable to indemnify any indorser of it who may afterwards pay it. The indorser is a surety for the payment to the holder & having paid it, is entitled to the benefit of any securities to cover it deposited with the holder by the acceptor. He is so entitled whether at the time of his indorsement he knew or did not know of the deposit of those securities; the surety's right in this respect in no way depends on contract, but is the result of the equity of indemnification attendant on the suretyship.

S., one of the partners of R. & Sons, in Dec. 1874, deposited with the N. & S. W. Bank the title deeds of two of his own freehold properties

& signed a memorandum acknowledging them to be deposited as securities for what the N. & S. W. Bank might advance to the firm in the way of discounts. In Nov. 1875, D. & co. sold to R. & Sons a cargo of corn to be paid for in cash. Cash was paid only for part. R. & Sons offered a bill of exchange for the rest, which was declined. D. & co. were customers of the N. & S. W. Bank. R. & Sons said if D. & co. would inquire of those bankers they would find it would be all right with the R. bills. The bank manager refused to discount the bill without the indorsement of D. & co., but said that he believed D. & co. would incur no more than a nominal liability, by putting their names on the bill. D. & co. thereupon consented to take the bill, indorsed it in the ordinary way & it was discounted by the bank & carried to their credit. In Jan. 1876, R. & Sons stopped payment. The bill became due in Feb. & was dishonoured. D. & co. who then became acquainted with the fact that securities had been deposited with the bankers to cover advances on R. & Sons' bills brought an action against the N. & S. W. Bank to have the benefit so far as they would go of the securities deposited in Dec. 1874, claiming to be securities to the bankers for what was due upon the bill:—Held: D. & co. were sureties on the bill & as such they were entitled to the benefit of these securities.—*DUNCAN, FOX & Co. v. The earlier instalments were paid out of the partnership assets, & later ones by D., after judgment for them had been recovered. D. demanded from P. that, in order to enforce his right to contribution against H., the judgments should be delivered to him as provided by the above sect.; but H. informed P. that D.'s right to contribution depended on the equitable rights between D. & himself in respect of a partnership action then pending between them; upon which P. declined to hand over the judgments. D. then brought an action against P. claiming (a) delivery of the judgments; (b) damages for non-delivery; (c) a declaration that by reason of the refusal to assign the judgments D. was released from all liability in respect of any future instalments:—Held: (1) the above sect. might be subject to the equitable relationship between the parties, & although P. had committed a breach of a statutory obligation in refusing to assign the judgments, yet, as D. could not have levied execution upon them without the consent of the judge in the partnership action, & without taking into account the inter-partnership rights of himself & H., he had suffered no actual damage; (2) D. was not released from liability in respect of future instalments, inasmuch as there had been no alteration of the original conditions as to the liability of the parties; & the failure to assign the judgments would have only operated to release him if & so far as the delay in handing over might have made them less valuable.—*DALE v. 825. — Right of distress not security within the Act.]—On the dissolution of a partnership between H. & R., H. assigned to R. all his interest in two houses belonging to the partnership held under sub-leases from C. & D., & R. covenanted to pay the rents & observe the covenants & keep H. indemnified against them. R.'s exors. sold the houses to B., & B. to a co. which went into liquidation. The landlords C. & D. thereupon sued H. for the rent, & he paid it for the whole of the year 1882. D. also made a large demand against H. for breaches of covenants to repair, but H. made no payment. On Mar. 15, 1883, D. assigned his reversion to H., & in May H. acquired C.'s reversion. In June, 1883, H. bought the leasehold interest in both houses from the liquidators of the co. & covenanted thenceforth to pay the rent & observe the covenants. H. sought to prove against the estate of R. for the sums paid for rent, for the rent payable at Lady Day, 1883, on D.'s house & for the amount of the dilapidations in that house:—Held: (1) the right of H. under R.'s covenant of indemnity to prove for the rents which he had paid, was not taken away by his covenant in the assignment by the liquidators, which could not be extended to rents already due & paid; (2) this right was not defeated on the ground that the right of R.'s representatives, if they paid rent, to recover it from the owner of the lease for the time being, was interfered with by the assignment from the liquidators to H., for that this assignment could not take away any right of action which R.'s exors. might have against the persons entitled to the houses at the end of 1882, & an assignor who pays rent has no lien on the term & so cannot be prejudiced by its subsequent assignment; (3) the right was not defeated on the ground that H. on paying the rent became entitled to a right of distress from the reversioners which he had destroyed by taking an assignment of the leases & had therefore discharged the estate of R., by releasing a remedy to the benefit of which R. as a surety was entitled, for a right of distress is not a security or remedy to the benefit of which a surety paying rent is entitled under the above sect.—*Re RUSSELL, RUSSELL v. Appl. gave a guarantee to resp. bank to secure all moneys which should at any time be due to them on the general balance of a customer's account. The customer became bkpt., & a general balance of £1,000 became due to resps. In an action against applt. for the recovery of that amount, it was proved that after the guarantee was given the customer had obtained a succession of advances from resps., giving them securities against each advance & receiving them back on repaying such advance:—Held: the first & every other deposit of securities by the customer was a special & exceptional transaction, to be regarded apart from & independent of the guarantee or of the guaranteed account, & the amount of the advance against which the deposit was made being repaid, the customer was entitled to have the securities back without applt. being consulted in the matter.—*WILKINSON v. —R. was tenant for life of real estate subject to a first mtge. to S. & to a second mtge., which included additional property, to N., both created by R.'s predecessors in title. Subsequently N. paid off the first mtge. & took a transfer of it, R., the tenant for life, who had been keeping down the interest on both mtges., joining by covenanting with N. for payment of the first mtge. debt. with a proviso that, as between R., his heirs, etc., estate & effects on the one part, & the first mortgaged premises & the owner or owners for the time being thereof on the other part, the said premises should be the primary fund for payment of the first mtge. debt, & that R.'s covenant should be "only a collateral security" for such payment, but that, notwithstanding N., his exors., etc., might resort to either means for enforcing payment in preference to such other means.

R. & N. being both dead, a mtgee.'s action was brought by N.'s representatives against R.'s representatives, claiming payment of the first mtge. debt pursuant to R.'s covenant, & also the right to tack the second mtge. to the first. Defts. contended that R. had covenanted as a surety, & that, therefore, on payment by them of the first mtge. debt they would be entitled to stand in the place of plffs., the first mtgees., & to have an assignment of the securities for that debt:—Held: upon the construction of the transfer & of R.'s covenant therein R. was a principal debtor & not a surety, & consequently, upon the authority of Duncan, Fox & Co. v. North & South Wales Bank, No. 816, ante, & Newton v. Chorlton, No. 809, ante, neither he nor his representatives could claim the rights of a surety as against either N. or his representatives.—NICHOLAS v. RIDLEY, [1904] 1 Ch. 192; 73 L. J. B.'s fund having been exhausted in part payment of A.'s debt, & A.'s mtge. having been transferred to the surety on payment by him of the balance:—Held: (1) B. had a right to marshal the securities as against the surety; (2) the surety could not tack as against B. the costs of a defence to an action on his covenant from which B. derived no benefit, but he might charge as against B. all costs incurred for the common benefit of the persons interested in the estate after the first mtge. (3) Semble: as against the original mtgor. the surety might have tacked to his security all costs not improperly incurred as surety.—SOUTH v. BLOXAM (1865), 2 Hem. & M. 457; 5 New Rep. 506; 34 L. Defts. lent A. B., at the same time, two sums of £2,000 & £3,000 on distinct securities, & pltf. was surety for the first sum:—Held: pltf., on paying the £2,000, was not entitled to have a transfer of the securities held for that sum, until defts. had also been paid the £3,000.—*FAREBROTHER v. ## (e) Whether necessary Party to Foreclosure Action.

Mortgage generally, see MORTGAGE.

842. Surety giving collateral security.]—To a bill of foreclosure against the principal mtgor., the mtgor. of another estate, as a collateral security, is a necessary party.—STOKES v. CLENDON (1790), 3 Swan. 150, n.; 36 E. R. 812.

Annotation:—Fold. Gee v. Liddell, [1913] 2 Ch. 62.

843. —.]—A co-mtgor. by way of collateral security, as distinguished from a mere surety by covenant, is a necessary party to foreclosure proceedings brought against the principal mtgor. by a prior mtgee. of the principal mtgor.'s share in the mortgaged property.

A., B., & C. were entitled as tenants in common in equal shares to the residuary estate of a testator. In 1881 A. mortgaged his share to X. In 1882 A., B., & C. joined in a mtge. to Y. to secure an advance to B. B. alone covenanted to repay the money; but A., B., & C. assigned their respective shares in the estate to the mtgee., subject to a proviso for redemption by the three or any of them. The mtge. deed provided that as between A., B., & C. the respective premises mortgaged by them each should be primarily liable to the payment of a specified portion of the mtge. debt, & that each should accordingly contribute in those proportions towards the payment of the debt, & indemnify the others against payment of the portion in respect of which he was to be primarily liable. In 1884 X. obtained a foreclosure order absolute in proceedings against A. to which B.

& C. were not parties:—Held: B. & C. were necessary parties to the foreclosure proceedings & not having been made parties were not bound by them, though they were binding on A.; & the persons entitled to their share were accordingly entitled to contribution from A.'s share in respect of the mtge. of 1882.—GEE v. LIDDELL, [1913] 2 Ch. 62; 82 L. J. Ch. 370; 108 L. T. 913.

844. Surety by covenant—Where nothing paid.]—A. having a general power of appointment over an estate in the event of his surviving his father, joined with B. & C. his sureties, in a covenant to pay an annuity to pltf., & A. covenanted that if he should survive his father, he would create a term in the estate, for securing the annuity. A.'s father died; & A. granted other annuities to pltf., but did not create the term. He afterwards vested the estate in trustees for the benefit of such of his creditors as should execute the conveyance. Several of the creditors executed it, & one of them, on behalf of himself & the others, filed a bill to have the trusts of the deed carried into execution. After a decree had been made in that suit, pltf. filed his bill against A., the trustees, & pltf. in that suit, praying for an account of what was due to him in respect of his securities, that the priorities of himself & the other incumbrancers might be declared, that he might redeem the securities which should appear to be prior to his own, & might have the benefit of the decree as to that part of his demand, for which he should not be entitled to priority over the trust deed:—Held: on demurrer, the sureties were not, but all the creditors who had executed the deed, were necessary parties.—NEWTON v. EGMONT (EARL) (1831), 1 Sim. 574; 58 E. R. 215.

F. Waiver of Right of Subrogation.

846. Express waiver in guarantee.]—Merchants procured accommodation from bankers on entering with sureties into a covenant to pay the floating balance due from time to time up to a certain limited amount, subject to a proviso that in the event of the merchants' bkpcy., & in the event of the amount due exceeding at that time the fixed limit, any dividends received under the bkpcy. should be applied exclusively in payment of the excess, without the sureties being entitled to any part of the dividends until the whole of such excess was paid. Some of the sureties took from one of the principal debtors a counter security & indemnity in respect of their liability under the covenant, but without the bankers having notice of the transaction. The merchants became bkpt., being indebted to the bankers beyond the limit fixed, & the bankers received dividends on the whole debt & recovered the amount secured by the deed from the sureties, two of whom were reimbursed by means of their counter-security out of the separate estate of one of the bkpts.:—Held: the bankers were entitled to retain all the dividends received by them on account of their debt.—*Re FERNANDES, Ex p. Replication, that the liability arose from pltf.'s, before the fiat, signing a guarantee for deft. at his request, whereby, in consideration of the co. making advances to deft. on account, pltf. guaranteed the sum advanced, so that his liability did not exceed £250; & that, in the event of deft.'s bkpcy., & the debt to the banking co. exceeding £250, the co. might elect which part of the account might be secured by the guarantee, & might prove the whole of the money due on any securities against deft.'s estate, & apply all the dividends in consideration of the debt beyond the £250, & that pltf. should only be entitled to the benefit of any proof or dividend after the co. might recover the full amount guaranteed from pltf.; that large advances were made by the banking co., & that they proved the whole sums due to them, & forced pltf. to pay the £250 for which he was security to the bankers of the bkpt.:—Held: pltf.'s debt was barred by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, ss. 52, 121.

Pltf. was, at the date of the fiat, the surety, or person liable for the debt of the bkpt., & though he did not prove, he would have been barred, & the effect of that agreement, as stated in the replication, was no more than that pltf. being entitled to prove, or stand in the place of the banking co., quoad the £250 gave up that benefit to the co., & deft. was nevertheless fully entitled to be discharged from it by his certificate (PARKER, B.).—*EARLE v. The customer gave the surety a mtge. on part of his estate by way of indemnity. Afterwards the customer compounded with his creditors by a deed which provided for the administration of the assets as in bkpcy. His banking account was overdrawn £410. The mtge. was realised & the surety paid the bank the £300 secured by it:—Held: the bank was not restricted to proof for the balance of £110, but was entitled to receive dividends on the whole £410, not receiving on the whole, including the £300, more than 20s. in the pound.—*MIDLAND BANKING CO. v. The debtor having filed a petition for liquidation, B. paid £800, the amount of his guarantee, to the bank. Upon a question whether the bank or B. was entitled to prove for the £800:—Held: B. having by the guarantee contracted himself out of his original right, in favour of the bank, the latter was entitled to prove for the whole amount of their debt, including the £800 paid by B.—*Re SELLERS, Ex p. There was a proviso in the bond that any dividends received by the bankers in the bkpcy. of the customer should not, so far as concerned the surety, go in discharge of his liability; but the bankers should notwithstanding be entitled to recover on the bond against the surety to the full extent of £500, or so much thereof as should, together with the dividends, amount to 20s. in the pound on the debt due by the customer to the bankers. The customer filed a liquidation petition, & the bankers proved for the debt due to them. Afterwards the surety paid the bankers £500, & he then proved in the liquidation for £500:—Held: the bankers were entitled to retain their proof for the full amount.—*Re REES, Ex p. 852. Waiver implied from conduct From course of business.—Where two firms deal together, one making payments for & accepting bills for the accommodation of the other & receiving cash & bills from the accommodated firm by way of payment of & security for the outlay & liabilities made & incurred, the question how the proceeds of the bills so remitted are to be applied must depend on the contract of the parties express or implied. In a case where in the absence of express contract the course of dealing might have led to the presumption that the agreement between the parties was that the proceeds of each bill as it was paid should be applied as far as it would go in discharge of the cash balance, this presumption was not held to extend to the event of bkpcy., or to establish any agreement which prevented the party who was in the position of a surety from insisting against bkpt. principal on the same rights on which he might have insisted in the absence of contract.—Re BULMER, Ex p. JENKINS (1863), 32 Beav. 337; 1 New Rep. 383; 55 E. R. 132.

Part VII.—Surety's Rights against Principal Debtor.

SECT. 1.—NATURE OF RIGHTS.

854. Distinguished from rights of creditor—Surety for one partner—Right to sue other partner.]

—(1) By deed it was agreed that a lender should advance money to a railway contractor; the contractor by way of security assigned the benefit of his contract & the materials employed by him & covenanted to repay all advances within six months; & the lender was to receive interest & one-tenth of the net profits made by the contractor :—Held : on the construction of the whole deed & of the correspondence before the parties this deed was a device, & the lender was a partner with the contractor, & must indemnify a person who had a claim against the contractor arising out of a guarantee given in connection with the contract.

Sureties have a right of indemnity & if a surety could prove that by reason of the non-payment of the debt he had suffered damage beyond the principal & interest which he had been compelled to pay, he would be entitled to recover that damage from the principal debtor. Therefore more can be recovered by the surety under the contract of indemnity than could be recovered by the creditor (STIRLING, J.).

Where the original contract was a bond—a specialty debt—yet the right of the surety to an indemnity was in the nature of a simple contract debt, & consequently that the surety was barred in a shorter time than the creditor would have been. That state of the law has been put an end to by the provisions of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act (STIRLING, J.).

(2) The rights of a surety against his principal are not exactly the same as those of the creditor; & therefore although a creditor who has recovered judgment against one partner cannot sue another partner that rule does not take away the rights of a surety for one partner as against another partner.

855. Whether simple or specialty contract rights—Debt not satisfied by surety.]—A married woman, entitled to property under a settlement to her separate use, concurred with her husband in raising money upon mtge. of it, by a deed which expressed that the money was borrowed by & paid to herself & her husband, but contained a covenant by the husband for repayment :—Held : the presumption was, that the money was received by the husband, but this presumption might be rebutted by extrinsic evidence. In the absence of such evidence, the wife was only a surety for the husband, & was, after his death, entitled as against his other creditors, to all the rights incident to that relation, & therefore had a right to have the debt paid off, as a specialty debt, out of the husband's assets. If the mtge. was of the wife's freehold estate not settled to her separate use, she was still a surety, & had all the rights of a surety, except perhaps as against her husband's other creditors.

Qu. : whether, in this last case, if her estate has paid off the mtge. she had only a right to be repaid out of her husband's assets, after all his other creditors by simple contract.—*HUDSON v. 856. — Executor's right of retainer.]—Testator died leaving a deficient estate, his wife & daughter being extrices. The wife having real estate settled on her for life, with a general power of appointment had appointed it as collateral security for a mtge. debt of testator. This debt had not been paid at the date of the decree :—Held : the right of the widow as surety to be indemnified created a simple contract debt only, & did not entitle her to retain as against specialty creditors.

By force of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (c. 97), s. 5, a surety paying off a specialty debt becomes a specialty creditor of the principal debtor. This was not done . . . in the result, therefore, she is a simple contract creditor only. It follows that the widow's debt must be treated, in distributing the assets, as a simple contract debt (SIR JOHN WICKENS, V.-C.).—FERGUSON v. GIBSON (1872), L. R. 14 Eq. 379; 11 L. J. Ch. 610.

874. —[—An heir buying up incumbrances on the descended estates is entitled, as against the creditors of the estate, to no more than he actually paid.

In 1772, a husband & wife mortgaged their respective estates for securing a debt of the husband. The husband died in 1776, & in 1782 the produce of his estate was brought into ct., & accumulated. The wife died in 1805, & in 1832, the husband's mtge. creditor, neglecting to prosecute his claim against the husband's assets, obtained payment out of the produce of the wife's estate. In 1840, the heir of the husband petitioned for payment out of ct. of the accumulated fund arising from the husband's estate, & a reference was made to ascertain the incumbrances thereon. An unpaid judgment creditor of the wife carried in a claim, which having been disallowed, as founded on a mere equity, he in 1841, filed a bill against the heir of the husband & the representative of the wife, to establish his claim against the fund:—Held: (1) the husband's debt having been paid out of the wife's estate, her estate had a right to be recouped out of the estate of the husband; (2) pltf.'s claim was not barred by Stat. Interest on the deposit was from time to time paid by the bank to the father. By his will the father gave legacies & shares of residue to the two sons. At the date of his death the sons owed £8,858 to the bank, & the sons were afterwards adjudicated bankrupts. The bank proved in the bkpy. for the whole £8,858. No dividend having yet been paid in the bkpy., but it being admitted to be improbable that the estate would realise enough to pay the bank in full, & that the bank would ultimately appropriate the deposit of £2,400 towards the payment of the firm's debt:—Held: the trustees of the father's will were not entitled to retain the legacies & shares thereby bequeathed to the sons against the liability of the father's estate as surety to the bank, but that the trustee

It seems to me the exors. would have been then in a position to say to the sons that, although they were not indebted in any particular amount to their father in respect of this transaction, they were bound to indemnify his estate against all liability by reason of his having become surety for them at their request (NORTH, J.).—*Re BINNS, LEE v. The bank as principal creditors valued their security & proved for the whole balance of their overdraft, on which they received under 10s. in the pound, & had no chance of obtaining full payment. The exors. as sureties were then compelled to pay the sum of £313, the full amount for which they were liable under the guarantee. The bank, with the concurrence of the legatee's trustee in bkpcy., subsequently sold the reversionary share to an assignee. On the reversion falling in & the estate becoming divisible:—Held: the £313 must be brought into hotchpot by the assignee on the ground that it did not form part of the assignor's estate at the time of his bkpcy.

I think it is quite clear that the trustees had a right to be indemnified against any claim which they might ultimately have to satisfy as a result of the guarantee (WARRINGTON, L.J.).

SUB-SECT. 4.—ABANDONMENT OF RIGHT.

887. Contract to abandon must be proved.—A necessary consequence of a reservation in a composition deed of a creditor's remedies against a surety is the continuance of the surety's right to be indemnified by the principal debtor, & this right will not be held to be abandoned unless a contract to abandon it is proved. Therefore, where one of the creditors who acceded to a composition deed was also a residuary legatee of a surety for the compounding debtors to another creditor, & one of the compounding debtors happened to be the surety's exor.:—Held: the residuary legatee's accession must be taken to have been in respect of his direct debt only, & did not preclude him from insisting on the surety's estate being indemnified by the debtors.—(*CLOSE v. Applt., subsequently discovering the letter of indemnity, brought an action at law against resp. to enforce it. Resp. then, by a suit in equity, prayed for a declaration that the indemnity had been discharged, & for an injunction against the continuance of the action:—Held: applt. was entitled to enforce the indemnity under the doctrine laid down in *Jorden v. F. also became bkpt. & the bills of exchange drawn on him by D. & co. were obliged to be taken up & paid by themselves:—Held: F. had no right to stop the goods in transitu, being no more than a surety for the price, & not vendor or consignee.—(*STEFFKEN v. On the arrival of the oil, L. having previously become bkpt., & W. not having been paid for it, W.'s agents claimed it of the master of the ship; but the latter delivered it to H., who afterwards sold the goods of L. as well as the oil of W. The net proceeds of the goods belonging to L. were sufficient to satisfy the debt due from L. to H. H. paid himself his debt, & deposited the net proceeds of W.'s oil with a third person, to abide the event of the award of an arbitrator to whom all disputes between W. & the assignees of L. were referred. The arbitrator having stated the above facts on his award for the opinion of this ct.:—Held: (1) W. the unpaid vendor of the oil, had, at the time when his agents claimed it, no right to take possession on the insolvency of L., because the property in & the right to the possession was then vested in H., the indorsee of the

On Jan. 4, 1882, a paid-up shareholder in the co., who was under considerable liability as a surety for the co., presented a petition to wind it up, setting out a balance sheet which showed that the assets greatly exceeded the liabilities, but not alleging as a fact that they did so, stating that the co. was unable to pay its debts, & that it was just & equitable that it should be wound up. On Jan. 6 the creditor recovered final judgment without notice of the winding-up petition, & on the following day issued execution. On Jan. 14 the petition came on to be heard & was supported by creditors, & a winding-up order was made. The creditor then applied for leave to go on with the execution:—Held: the petition could not be treated as a petition collusively presented on behalf of a solvent co. for the purpose of defeating the execution, for that the balance sheet could not be treated as proving the co. to be solvent, & the petitioner, though not legally a creditor, was virtually such, & by amending the petition by joining one of the supporting creditors it might have been made a creditor's petition; & consequently leave to proceed with the execution ought not to be given.—Re VRON COLLETRY CO. (1882), 20 Ch. One of the partners died on Oct. 4, 1921, & the greater part of the freehold estate was still unsold. At the date of the partner's death the partnership account at a bank was largely overdrawn. The overdraft was secured by the guarantee of each partner. The exact amount of the overdraft was subsequently ascertained by the bank to be £17,126 16s. 2d., & the manager informed the exor. of deceased partner of this, & of the liability of the partnership syndicate & testator's estate, but no demand for payment was ever made.

In an action by pltf. as legal personal representative of deceased partner against his four co-partners as defts. claiming specific performance of the partnership agreement & requiring a proper discharge & release from all the liabilities of the partnership, particularly in respect of the overdraft at the bank:—Held: the ordinary covenant contained in the agreement to indemnify the estate of a deceased partner did not entitle pltf. to insist upon the immediate payment of debts for which no demand had been made. The obligation to make good the indemnity by payment & the right to enforce the covenant arose when the demand for payment was made & not 925. —.]—In 1855 R., & H. as his surety, gave to G. a bond for £2,000. R. gave to H. by way of indemnity a warrant of attorney. In 1858, G., without the knowledge of R., gave up the bond to H., & received in satisfaction for it the promissory note of H. for the sum remaining due. R. at same time assigned all his property to H. in satisfaction of the liabilities under which H. had come for him. In the following month R. became bkpt., & the warrant of attorney & the assignment became void as against the assignees:—Held: the dealings between H. & G. had not taken away the rights of H. against R., & H. having paid the debt was entitled to prove against R.'s estate.—Re ROBERTS, Ex p. ALLEN & CAZNOVE (1858), 3 De G. & J. 447; 44 E. R. 1341, L. JJ.

926. No monetary payment—Bond to creditor—By surety alone.]—One of the makers of a joint & several promissory note, after same had become due, gave his bond to the holder for the amount; but before the commencement of the action no money was actually paid on the bond:—Held: until he had paid money upon the bond, he could not maintain an action for money paid, in order to recover contribution against any of the other makers of the original note.—*MAXWELL v. Security has never been considered as equivalent to payment. This is clearly a release of the old debt. The surety has altered his character, & is no longer surety for the estate, but for a new obligation created subsequent to the certificate (LEACH, V.-C.).—*Re PARKINSON, Ex p. inability to meet his debts & his proposal to pay a composition of 5s. in the pound, which the said creditors had agreed to accept in full satisfaction & discharge of their said debts, & to execute the release thereafter contained: & deft. covenanted to pay the said composition in two instalments of 2s. 6d. each at three & six months from the registration of the deed, in consequence whereof the creditors thereby released him from all his debts, & it was thereby provided "that any creditor holding security for his debt, or having any claim upon or against any other person as well as deft. for such debt, might execute or assent to the said deed without prejudice to such security or claim." Averment of the executed after the accruing of the claim of a certain other person whose name was to deft. unknown, & that such claim was for money due from deft. to such other person, who was a creditor of deft. in respect of his said claim at the time of the execution of the deed, & executed & was bound by the same; & that before & at the time aforesaid pltf. was a surety for deft. to such other person in respect of such claim, & that the money in the declaration alleged to have been paid by pltf. for the use of deft., was so paid after the execution of the deed by such other person, & was & is money paid by pltf. as such surety for deft. to such other person for & on account of such claim, & not otherwise; & that at the time it was paid deft. was released from such claim of such other person by the said deed. Replication that pltf. never executed or assented to the deed, & was no party thereto; & that although the respective times for payment of the composition on the amount of pltf.'s debt to which the plea is pleaded had elapsed before commencement of this suit, yet the said composition was never paid or tendered, or offered to be paid to pltf. pursuant to the said deed, & the same is still unpaid. On demurrer to the above replication on the ground that the release being absolute, payment, tender, or offer of the composition was not necessary to make the deed a bar to pltf.'s claim:—Held: giving judgment for deft. deft.'s plea was good, & afforded a defence to pltf.'s claim which was barred by the deed, the release contained in which was absolute, & would have been an answer to an action brought by the principal creditor, in whose place the surety was, by Bkpcy. Act, 1861, (c. 131) s. 173, entitled to stand, & so was bound by the deed.

The words of the deed may be read in two senses, & may cut down the release into a covenant not to sue; so that, quoad the principal creditor, it may be not a release but a covenant not to sue, whilst, quoad pltf., who had no surety but was himself a surety, it operates as an absolute release (BRAMWELL, B.).—HATCH v. HATCH (1872), 28 L. T. 506.

P. made out invoices in his own name, & drew upon pltf. for the amount. There being a balance of £180 7s. 7d. due from pltf. for goods bought of W. & Co., pltf. accepted a bill of exchange drawn by P. for payment to his order of that amount at three months date. P. not having paid W. & Co. they claimed payment from pltf., but he denied all knowledge of them in the matter. P. became bkpt. At that time the bill of exchange was in his hands & was taken possession of by his official assignee who indorsed it & deposited it in a bank, pursuant to Bkpcy. Act, 1849 (c. 106). When the bill became due, it was presented by the bankers & paid by pltf. W. & Co. afterwards sued pltf. for the goods sold by them, & pltf. compromised the action. Pltf. then brought an action against the official assignee to recover back the amount of the bill:—Held: pltf. could not recover either for money had & received or money paid to his use.

If pltf. was in the situation of a surety for P. his right of action would be, not against deft., but against P. (MARTIN, B.).—BARBER v. PORT (1859), 4 H. & N. 759; 28 L. J. Ex. 381; 157 E. R. 1041.

The account was kept at the bank in the name of the board. The bank stopped. A. died, & shortly afterwards B. & the surviving partner in the bank were adjudicated bkpts. A.'s separate estate was insolvent, B.'s solvent. C., as surety under the bond, paid to the board the whole amount due to them from the bank on their account, & then recovered half of it as contribution from B., his co-surety. The trustee of B.'s separate estate now claimed, in the suit for administering the estate of A., the amount so recovered from B.'s estate by C.:—Held: as the claim if admitted, would increase the surplus of B.'s estate that would go to the creditors of the bank, diminishing the separate estate of A., it was, in effect, a claim by the joint creditors to the prejudice of the separate creditors, & therefore could not be allowed.—LACEY v. 961. Counter guarantee given to principal creditor.—By surety.—The bank of L. had made advances to H. upon the security of a guarantee by B. & co. The loan was from time to time renewed, but ultimately the bank expressed its desire to have the transaction closed. H. & B. & co. then induced the K. Assocn. to grant H. a credit enabling him to discharge the debt, B. & co. giving to the assocn. a similar guarantee. Subsequently the bank gave to the assocn. a counter-guarantee, by which they guaranteed to provide funds to meet the liability of the assocn. in the event of B. & co. making default; & upon this state of facts the bills given to secure the debt were renewed from time to time, & were ultimately met by the bank. All the cos. were ordered to be wound up, & upon the claim of the bank:—Held: B. & co. were liable to the bank for the amount paid, inasmuch as the guarantee given by them entitled the bank which had paid the money to stand in the place of the assocn. to whom it was given, a right which the bank had not in any way released by its counter-guarantee.

The position of the bank was not, by reason of its having been the original guarantor at all affected; but it stood exactly as any third independent co. from which the assocn. might have obtained such a guarantee would have stood on paying the amount of the advances.—*Re BARNED'S BANKING CO., LTD., Ex p. Ct. Appellant giving become insolvent, presented a petition under the Bkpcy. Act, 1869 (c. 71), for liquidation by arrangement or composition. He inserted in his statement the name & address of resp. as creditor in respect of a certain sum not connected with the bail bond, but the statement did not contain any mention of the contingent liability on the bail bond. Resp. claimed a larger sum in respect of the inserted debt, & the statement was amended accordingly. Resp. proved for & received a composition on this debt, but no composition was paid to him in respect of the liability on the bail bond. Subsequently the suit in the Admty. Before the order was given pltf. asked W. & R. for a list of prices, & having obtained it, showed it to deft., who, seeing that the price was such that the order could not possibly have been understood, asked pltf. if he thought W. & R. knew what was wanted; whereupon pltf. said, "Oh, yes. If anything is wrong, of course you will see me all right." To which deft. answered, "Yes, I will bear you harmless." In consequence of some misunderstanding, arising in part probably from a verbal inaccuracy in the letters conveying the order, the goods supplied were useless to deft., & were returned to the sellers, who (the intrinsic value of the goods being only about £3) expended in labour about £42 to make them correspond with the intention of deft., but, in so doing, reduced their substance so as to render them useless for his purpose. Deft., after considerable delay, persisting in refusal to take the goods, W. & R. sued pltf. for the value of the goods, & the jury found, with the implied authority of deft., a compromise

986. — Goods sold—Surety as unpaid vendor.]—According to the usage of the London Dry Goods Market, a broker who contracts for the sale of goods without disclosing his principals is personally liable in default of his principal. On Mar. 3 certain goods belonging to Messrs. C., lying at the St. Katharine Dock, in the custody of the Docks Co., were bought by D., as broker for buyers & sellers, for B. & Co., without disclosing the name of his principals, & D. indorsed to them the delivery order he had obtained from the sellers, on the representation of B. & Co. that the goods were wanted for immediate shipment. They, however, pledged their interest in the goods to plffs., & indorsed the order to them. On the prompt day, Mar. 18, plff.'s clerk lodged the order at the London office of the Docks Co., with this memorandum, "Hold within to our order, & have warrants made out as soon as possible." He was told that the warrants would be ready with the goods on Mar. 20. Three hours later a messenger from the office reached the warrant office at the Dock House with a notice that the order had been lodged. Meanwhile B. & Co. had stopped payment, & D. being so informed, & having no notice of plff.'s title, on the same day paid Messrs. C. for the goods, & through a clerk, who reached the Dock House before the messenger had arrived, obtained at the warrant office a warrant for the goods in the name of Messrs. C., who indorsed the same to D., & gave him a second delivery order. The first delivery order was returned to plffs. by the Docks Co., who refused to act upon it. In an action by plffs., claiming, as against the Docks Co. Messrs. C., & D., to be entitled to the goods:—Held: (1) D. was the surety & B. & Co. the principal debtors; (2) the unpaid vendors' lien had passed to D.; (3) the title to the goods was in D., & Messrs. Both estates were sold & conveyed free from the mtge., & in 1832 the debt was paid out of the produce of the wife's estate. 994. — Bill of exchange.]—F. & H. drew bills on F., W. & Co., which the latter accepted, & which the drawers indorsed, & discounted with S. & Co., bill brokers. S. & Co. rediscounted the bills with the L. Bank, with which bank they were in the habit of rediscounting. According to a general well-recognised custom S. & Co. did not on each occasion of discounting bills with the bank indorse the bills, but had given the bank a general guarantee, under which, in consideration of the bank discounting for them bills from time to time, they guaranteed due payment of the bills when they respectively became due. Before the bills became due the drawers went into liquidation, & in consequence S. & Co., the next day, suspended payment. Under a composition in the liquidation of S. & Co. the bank received dividends in respect of the bills held by them. The bank afterwards, under a deed of arrangement, received further sums towards discharge of the balance remaining unpaid on the bills from the estate of the drawers, & also from F., W. & Co., the acceptors. On F., W. & Co. going into liquidation, the trustee of S. & Co. claimed to prove in the liquidation against the estate of F., W. & Co. for the amount of the dividend paid out of S. & Co.'s estate to the bank, & for interest at 5 per cent. on that amount of dividend:—Held: the proof in respect of the amount of dividend must be admitted, & the proof must also be admitted in respect of the interest.—*Re Fox, Walker & Co., Ex p. 1016. ———— On what right rests—Exoneration by principal.]—Pltfs. claimed in this case to receive from defts., the contractors, a sum in their hands, & a further sum for non-completion of the line within the stipulated time. By counter-claim defts. sought to recover similar sums from the Trustees (Corp.) on their guarantee. By an agreement of Nov. 21, 1889, the price to be paid for the construction of the works was fixed at the whole capital of the co. The money as received was to be paid to the bankers, & made applicable for payment to the contractors. By agreements of Dec. 1889 a sale of shares & debentures was arranged, & the bankers guaranteed the interest on the debentures & preference shares up to the time fixed for completion of the works. By agreement of Dec. 31, 1889, the contractors entered into an undertaking with the co. for the payment of such interest. During the progress of the works the business of the bankers was transferred to a limited co., which eventually went into liquidation & such banking co. were allowed to continue as bankers on the guarantee of the Trustees Corp. The works were not completed for more than a year after the time fixed for completion. Interest on the debentures & preference shares in the meantime became due which was not paid by the contractors, & was paid by the co. only so far as concerned the debentures. Subsequently this action was brought, & the matters in dispute were referred to arb'n. The award was made in Nov. 1894:—Held: inasmuch as the debt of the bankers was not due at law to the contractors, this sum could in ordinary circumstances not be set off against them, yet, as the contractors were entitled to sue in their own name. set-off was available, & as the right of set-off in equity of a surety rested on exoneration by his principal, *Bechervaise v. C. became an insolvent debtor, & A. was compelled to pay the notes. C. died, & then the assignee under his insolvency took out letters of administration, de bonis non, of B. & sued A. on the bond:—Held: A. might set off the sums which he had been compelled to pay as surety for C. against the bond debt.

Replication thereto, that the said costs & expenses were not, nor was any part thereof, incurred at deft.'s request as alleged. Demurrer. Joinder in demurrer:—Held: the first plea was good, for pltf.'s claim in respect of the amount of the bill & interest was a liquidated demand, capable of being ascertained with precision at the time of pleading; & was separable from the rest of the claim, though mixed up with it in one count; the second plea was bad, being pleaded to costs & expenses incurred by pltf., but not paid, & therefore not constituting a liquidated demand to which a set-off could be pleaded.—*GRAMPTON v. This agreement having been carried into effect; when the notes were nearly due, upon the application of the original debtors for delay of payment, the Bank of Scotland gave up one of the promissory notes, & accepted a new one from the surety who had indorsed it; renewed notes were also given by two other of the sureties, & with the fourth surety, a treaty was carried on, respecting a renewal, pending which he died. The dishonoured bills had also been delivered over by the Bank to the original debtors, upon the treaty for the renewal of the notes:—Held: the fourth surety & his estate, by the legal effect of the transaction, was discharged as to three-fourths, & liable only as to one fourth, of the balance due upon the dishonoured bills, after giving credit for all moneys received or receivable from any of the parties upon the bills, or their estates; & on payment of such fourth part of such balance, the Bank were responsible to the estate of the fourth surety for all future dividends upon the dishonoured bills.

The principle established in Dering v. Winchelsea (Earl), No. 1050, post, is universal that the right of contribution is founded on doctrines of equity, it does not depend upon contract. If several persons are indebted & one makes the payment the creditor is bound in conscience, if not by contract, to give the party paying the debt all his remedies against the other debtors (LORD REEDSDALE).—*STIRLING v. 1035. —.]—(1) The directors of a co. advanced moneys of the co. upon an unauthorised security, & two sums of £600 & £400 so lent were lost. The £600 formed part of a loan of £800, & the £400 formed part of a loan of £1,000, which was granted by the board of directors & of which £100 was actually advanced & repaid, & a second £400 was advanced & not repaid. In an action by the co. against one of the directors who had taken part in granting the loans, he was held liable to pay the two sums of £600 and £100 to the co., & having paid them he sued three of his co-directors for contribution. One of debts. was not present at the meeting at which the loan of £800 was granted, & at which a cheque for the £800 was drawn, but he was present at a subsequent meeting at which the minutes of the former meeting were read & confirmed. The £800 had been already paid to the borrower:—Held: whether debt. would or would not have been liable to the co., there was no equity to compel him to contribute to pltf. in respect of the £600.

(2) The same debt. was present at the meeting at which the loan of £1,000 was granted, when he protested strongly against it. He was present at a subsequent meeting at which the minutes of the first meeting were read & confirmed, & he then signed a cheque which was drawn for the first £400:—Held: by signing the cheque he had adopted the whole loan of £1,000, & he was therefore liable to contribute in respect of the second £400 which was lost.

(3) Another debt. filed a liquidation petition under Bkpcy. Act, 1869 (c. 71), & had obtained a discharge from his creditors before the action was brought by the co. against pltf.:—Held: this debt.'s liability to contribute was a liability "incurred by means of a breach of trust" within sect. 49 of the Act, & debt. was not released from it by the discharge.

(4) The third debt. died after the commencement of the action, & his administrator was then made a debt.:—Held: the liability to contribute survived against the debt.'s estate.

(5) The principle established in the case of Dering v. Winchelsea (Earl), No. 1050, post, is universal that the right & duty of contribution is founded in doctrines of equity & it does not depend on contract. If several persons are indebted & one makes payment the creditor is bound in conscience if not by contract to give the party paying the debt all his remedies against the other debtors (PEARSON, J.).—*RAMSKILL v. B. brought an action, under Directors Liability Act, 1890 (c. 64), s. 3, against three of the directors for compensation on the ground that the prospectus contained an untrue statement. Judgment was given in his favour with costs & an inquiry as to damages directed. Defts. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal & the House of Lords, but both appeals were dismissed with costs. A compromise was arrived at under which the inquiry was dropped, & B. was paid compensation at the rate of 15s. per share, his taxed costs of the inquiry, & £700 additional costs. Many other shareholders made claims, which were also compromised, & the three debts. in B.'s action & some of the other directors paid large sums in this way. They did not take advantage of third party procedure, but brought this action against the remaining directors & the exors. of three of them, who had died since the prospectus was issued, to enforce, under Directors Liability Act, 1890 (c. 64), s. 5, contribution by them of their share of the compensation which had been paid:—Held: if B. had brought an action against all the directors, including those who were now dead, he would have succeeded; the right to contribution, inasmuch as under the statute it arose as if from contractual relations between the parties, could be enforced against the estates of the deceased directors, & debts. must pay, with interest, their share of the compensation & the costs of B. & other shareholders which had been paid; but they were not liable to contribute in respect of the costs of debts. in the first case B.'s extra costs, the costs of the appeals, & other payments which had been made otherwise than under the provisions of the Act.

In cases of contract the right to recover contribution arises (except in cases of express stipulation), not from any notion of implied contract but as an equitable right springing from the relations of the parties as persons liable for the same debt (WARRINGTON, J.).—*SHEPHEARD v. Among the employees guaranteed was K. who was guaranteed up to 2,500 dollars. The bank also took out a policy at Lloyd's for £40,000, by which the underwriters were to be liable for loss caused by the dishonesty of employees, & also for loss sustained by the loss or destruction on the owners' premises of bonds, banknotes, etc., owing to fire or burglary. K. made defalcations to the extent of 2,680 dollars, & the bank claimed from plffs. the full amount of the insurances, viz., 2,500 dollars, leaving a balance of 180 dollars. The bank claimed 180 dollars on the Lloyd's policy, which was paid.

The present action was brought by plffs. against deft., who was one of the underwriters on the Lloyd's policy, for contribution in respect of the loss:—Held: deft. was liable to pay a proportion of the whole loss of 2,680 dollars in the ratio of 2,680 & 2,500.

It is admitted that the doctrine of contribution rests upon the principle of equality. The creditor has remedies, which he ought so to use, that the burden may be equally borne by all the sureties; & if from partiality or caprice, he chooses to enforce his remedies against only one of the sureties, the others may come into a ct. of equity & have that effected there, which, in conscience at least, the creditor should have done (LORD ELDON, C.).—*COOPE v. 1056. ————]—Subsequent agreement to apportion whole debt.—Validity.]—Four persons who had become liable upon various bills & notes for the accommodation of C., there being however none of the bills or notes upon which all the four were liable, being pressed for payment entered into a written agreement, which contained a recital that they were jointly liable upon certain bills given in favour of C. & by which they appointed W. their joint solr., to act for them in all matters relating to the bills, & gave him full authority to settle the same on the best terms he could.

The agreement then provided that "upon the amount being ascertained for which the liabilities can be discharged the parties to this arrangement undertake to provide the same in the proportion of one fourth each." W. was unable to effect any settlement, the bill holders having refused to accept less than the full amount due to them. One of the four persons, who were liable for & had paid the largest amount, filed a bill against the other three to enforce contribution according to the terms of the agreement.

Semble: the agreement was void for uncertainty inasmuch as it did not specify to what bills it was intended to relate, there being, in fact, no bills upon which the four persons were jointly liable.

But at any rate it was a condition precedent of the agreement that W. should be able to effect a composition with the bill holders, & as he was unable to do this the agreement came to an end. Bill dismissed.—ARCEDECKNE v. HOWARD (LORD) (1872), 27 L. T. 194; 20 W. R. 879, L. J.J.; affd. (1875), 45 L. J. Ch. 622, H. L.

“Received of W. the sum of £280, on account of the within note, the £300 having been originally advanced to H.” In an action brought by W., who had paid the whole amount due against J., to recover contribution against him “as a co-surety”:—Held: the indorsement was admissible in evidence, to prove not only the payment of the £280, but also that the money was originally advanced, to H. as principal.

The amount of principal & interest was paid by plff. more than six years before the commencement of the suit, with the exception of £30, which was paid by him within the period. Stat. Limitations was a bar to the rest, as the right of action attached as soon as plff. had more than his proportion; (3) Stat. Four persons, as sureties for a principal, executed a joint & several bond of suretyship, by the terms of which the liability of two of them was limited to £50 each, & that of the other two to £25 each. One of those whose liability was limited to £50, after the other three had executed the bond, executed it himself, but added to his signature the words "£25 only." The obligee accepted the bond so executed without objection, & subsequently the principal became in default:—Held: the effect of the added words was to make a material alteration in the bond, so that the three first signatories were thereby discharged from their obligation; & as the last signatory only executed the bond as a joint & several bond, he was also not bound by it. —BLESMEYER BREWERY Co. v. In an action by A. against C. for the damages & costs paid & incurred by him in the first action, C. paid into ct. enough to cover the damages only, & it was left to the jury to say whether A., in defending the former action, had pursued the course which a prudent & reasonable man would have done in his own case. A. Right of Action.

1099. Right to sue co-surety—Judgment against surety—What amounts to judgment—Claim against deceased surety's estate.]—(1) A surety against whom judgment has been obtained by the principal creditor for the full amount of the guarantee, but who has paid nothing in respect thereof, can maintain an action against a co-surety to compel him to contribute towards the common liability; & for this purpose the allowance of a claim by the principal creditor against the estate of a deceased surety is equivalent to a judgment, & where the principal creditor is a party to the action, the surety may obtain an order upon the co-surety to pay his proportion to the principal creditor. Where the principal creditor is not a party, the surety may obtain a prospective order directing the co-surety, upon payment by the

(2) Stat. Limitations does not begin to run against a surety suing a co-surety for contribution until the liability of the surety is ascertained, i.e. until the claim of the principal creditor has been established against him; although at the time of the action for contribution the statute may have run as between the principal creditor & the co-surety.

(3) The superior cts. of common law in this country have never entertained any action for contribution by a surety against his co-surety, except the action for money paid (WRIGHT, J.).

1103. — — — — —.]—The principle established in Wolmershausen v. Gullick, No. 1099, ante, that the Stat. Limitations does not begin to run against a surety suing a co-surety for contribution until the liability of the surety is established, applies equally to the case of a trustee claiming contribution against his co-trustee in respect of a liability incurred from loss occasioned to the trust estate by their joint default. In such a case, therefore, time does not begin to run as between the co-trustees until the claim of the cestui que trust has been established against one of them.

Pltf., who was trustee of a marriage settlement, allowed the trust fund to be in the hands of deft., his co-trustee, for investment. Deft. entrusted the whole fund to an "outside" stockbroker, who applied a portion of it to his own use. In an action by pltf. & infant cestui que trust under the settlement, deft. denied his liability & claimed contribution against pltf. trustee:—Held: (1) deft., not having exercised proper care in the selection of a broker, & having improperly left the whole amount of the trust fund in the broker's hands, was liable for the loss which had occurred; (2) pltf. was in pari delicto with deft., & deft. was therefore entitled to contribution from pltf., & (3) as between the two trustees time did not begin to run under the Statutes of Limitation until the date of the judgment in the action.—ROBINSON v. In this case, & in the declaration, there is a good consideration set forth; the parties own contract here shall bind him, he had no remedy for the money paid, but when this is paid, here is a good assumpsit grounded upon a good consideration for repayment of the moiety by pltf. 1121. Discharge of principal debtor—Agreement between surety & debtor.—A., B., & C. respectively drew, accepted, & indorsed a bill for £300 for the accommodation of D. B., having paid the amount of the bill to the holder at maturity, sued A., his co-surety, for contribution. A. pleaded that, after the drawing, acceptance, & indorsement of the bill, & before it became due, D. became bkpt., & after B. had so paid the bill he agreed with the assignees of D., that, in consideration of their delivering up to him a certain building agreement then subsisting between him & D., he, B., would pay them £150, & would relinquish amongst other things all moneys advanced to & for D., to wit, the £300 so paid, in satisfaction & discharge of the bill; that this agreement was fully performed; & that thereby, & without the consent of A., D. & his estate were exonerated from the claim. To this plea, B. replied on equitable grounds, that the bill was drawn, accepted, & indorsed, & the amount paid by him, as alleged in the plea; that, before the bkptcy. of D., he had advanced him moneys to the amount of £2,661 6s. 6d. to assist him to build certain houses pursuant to the terms of the building agreement mentioned in the plea, & had sold him timber & materials for the same purpose to the amount of £1,512; that, D., being so indebted to him in the sums above mentioned, & also in the sum of £300 so paid by him in discharge of the bill, & in £136 17s. 4d. for moneys advanced to him for other purposes, it was agreed between him & the assignees of D. that the building agreement should be delivered up to him to be cancelled on his paying them £150 in discharge of all claims which they might have on the houses & property comprised in the building agreement, & that he should relinquish all claim on the estate of D. for the moneys advanced by him to D. for the purpose of the erection of the said houses, & for the materials so supplied, but that such agreement did not extend to the £300 paid in discharge of the bill, nor to the £136 17s. 4d.; that, with a view to putting that agreement into writing, the following memorandum was drawn up:—"It is hereby agreed between the assignees & B., as follows: that the building agreement for eighteen houses on land in, etc., be given up to B. to be cancelled, on payment by him to the assignees of £150 in full for all claims they may have on the property; B. hereby relinquishing all claim for moneys advanced to & for the bkpt., & his claim for goods supplied for the above mentioned houses,"—that the memorandum was signed by him, B., & the solrs. of the assignees in the belief that it was in conformity to the agreement so made; & that the same was worded by mistake & error, so as to include & relinquish his claims against D. & his estate on account of the £300 paid by him, B., in discharge of the bill, contrary to the true intention of B. & the assignee when they signed the memorandum; that B. never relinquished or gave up his said last-mentioned claim against D. and his estate, nor agreed to do so, nor was the same ever satisfied or discharged in any other manner than by the memorandum so executed in error: & that the real & true agreement so made between B. & the assignees, was in all respects performed & fulfilled by the said parties thereto:—Held: the replication disclosed a good answer "on equitable grounds" to the plea, whether the written memorandum did or did not include the claim for the £300; for, deft. by demurring to the replication, admitted, that, if it did include that claim, it did so by mistake; & the agreement having been executed, this ct. was bound to grant plff. the same relief that plff. would have been entitled to in equity, without compelling him to resort to a ct. of equity to reform it.—*VORLEY v. General rule.—The principle of contribution in cases where one surety receives security from the principal debtor rests, not upon any to a banking co. the balance owing to them by a customer on his current account, to the extent of £2,000. Afterwards the principal debtor deposited with one of the sureties a policy of insurance on his own life, to secure that surety against all liability in respect of the suretyship. The principal debtor became bkpt., owing more than £2,000 to the banking co., & on their demand the five sureties paid them £2,000 under the guarantee. The principal debtor afterwards died, & the policy money was received by the surety with whom the deposit had been made:—Held: inasmuch as that surety was bound to bring into hotchpot for the benefit of his co-sureties whatever he received out of the policy money in payment of the amount which he had paid under the guarantee, the deposit in effect ensured for the benefit of all the co-sureties to the full extent of the principal debt, & the policy money must accordingly be applied in repaying to the five co-sureties the amounts which they had respectively paid under the guarantee.—*BERRIDGE v. M. brought an action against W., claiming that W. should be treated as principal debtor on account of the advance of £125 given to him, & claiming the benefit of all securities given to him:—Held: there was no concealment between the co-sureties of any material fact, & pltf. was not entitled to the relief claimed.—*MAKRETH v. grantor for the amount of the arrears actually due, after deducting the sum advanced & received by him from such agent.—CARROLL v. GOULD (1823), 1 Bing. 190; 7 Moore, C. P. 621; 1 L. J. O. S. C. P. 46; 130 E. R. 77.

Pltfs. afterwards sued debt. on the same bond, & he pleaded payment by J. of £215 in full satisfaction:—Held: proof of the compromise with J. as above stated, did not support the plea. *FIELD v. McClure & Son, on order, the sum of £11 4s. 11d., which is to constitute a discharge in full, for a debt of £90 9s. 11d. due by J. to Messrs. McClure & Son." Signed by debt. & J. & four others, & delivered to pltf., & received by him. Upon the trial pltf. proposed to prove by parol that at the time he took this note it was expressly agreed that he was still to be at liberty to sue debt. upon his guarantee: Held: this evidence was rightly rejected. *MCCLURE v. In an action by B. against A. upon the guarantee, A. pleaded that C. had paid, & B. had received, the money, in satisfaction of the bills, which allegation was traversed by the replication:—Held: (1) the payment did not amount to a payment in satisfaction; (2) B. might prove the facts under the above replication; (3) the verdict & judgment in the action by the assignees against B., although evidence to explain the transaction, was not conclusive against A., that the money had been received by B. to the use of the assignees.—

A. & B. came to account of both debts, & stated in toto to be £84. A. after in satisfaction of his debt, made over certain goods of less value ; but there was no declaration, whether the sale or money for the goods was to be in part of one debt or other, but generally. C. the surety would have it paid on the bond, & thereby to discharge him. B. the creditor would take & make use of it as in satisfaction of the contract debt ; for A. was insolvent, & so else he might lose his debt ; & rather than so, he should apply the general payment to what debt he pleased, viz. to the satisfaction of the debt by contract, for which he had no other security ; or else A. being now grown insolvent, he must lose it, & it were hard when he had a just debt in law & equity to be expounded out of his debt by interpretation of a payment generally made.

If there had been two debts & a sum of money be generally paid, the creditor may elect & choose after to what debt to apply it when on payment the debtor made no distinction how he paid it; but this payment being pursuant on a precedent account of both debts, the payment shall be intended according to the account, viz. on both debts, & so shall be proportioned ratably on both debts (LORD NOTTINGHAM, C.).—*PERRIE v. 1145. [Creditor receiver of taxes.] - M. was surety in a bond given by G., the collector of taxes in Jamaica, for payment of the collection for the year 1812. G., at the date of the bond, was in arrear for taxes collected by him in 1811. G. appointed one S. his deputy, to collect the taxes for the year 1812, which he partly did, & G. collected the remainder. Shortly after the collection of the taxes, the Receiver-General pressed G. for the payment of the arrears of 1811. G. went to S. & obtained from him £3,000, to remit to the Receiver-General, S. taking that amount out of a chest, in which were placed the moneys collected for 1812. G. converted that sum, & also £2,000 which he had collected for taxes in 1812, into paper money, & transmitted £5,000 to the Receiver-General, who appropriated the whole amount in liquidation of the arrears for 1811. In an action brought by the Crown against M. upon the bond, the judge presumption, that, where a variety of transactions are included in one general account, the items of credit are to be appropriated to the items of debit in order of date in the absence of other appropriation, may be rebutted by circumstances of the case showing that such could not have been the intention of the parties. Pltfs., a discount co., were in the habit of discounting bills for S. In consideration that pltfs. would advance money to a certain amount to S. on the deposit of a lease of S.'s premises, debt. guaranteed any part of the money so advanced that might remain due after the realisation of the leasehold security, the guarantee to last for a period not exceeding two years. Advances were made to S. by pltfs. in accordance with the guarantee, & a great number of other transactions by way of further advance upon the discount of bills by pltfs. for S. took place in the usual course of business between them. Within two years from the date of the guarantee S. failed, owing to pltfs. an amount exceeding the sum guaranteed. A long debtor & creditor account was kept by pltfs. of their transactions with S. during such time, including the advances made under the guarantee. The aggregate of the items on both sides of the account very largely exceeded the amount of the sum guaranteed. In this account the practice was to credit S. with the amount of the bills discounted, less discount & commission, & debit him with the amount of the bills if they were dishonoured. Many of the bills discounted were renewed at maturity, & the same system of crediting & debiting applied to the renewals. The account was balanced on several occasions before S. failed, & showed balances against S. of much less amount than the sums advanced under the guarantee, but these balances were arrived at by crediting S. with the amount of outstanding bills, many of which were not paid at maturity, & were included in the ultimate balance against S. Bills were discounted with pltfs. by S. to cover advances made under the guarantee, & were from time to time renewed but never were paid. Bills, discounted by S. with pltfs. after the advances under the guarantee, had been paid to an amount exceeding the sum guaranteed, but it did not appear that in point of fact the balance really due from S. to pltfs. after the date of the guarantee was ever less than the sum guaranteed. In an action on the guarantee to recover the moneys advanced under it: :—Held: under the circumstances of the case, it could not have been the intention of pltfs. & S. by the mode in which the account between them was kept, that the advance under the guarantee should be considered as satisfied by the items of credit therein, & consequently the action was maintainable.—*CITY DISCOUNT CO. v. ## ii. Banking Guarantee.

1161. Appropriation to guaranteed debt—Intention of parties—No definite appropriation.]—A. & B. entered into a joint & several bond for securing a sum of money advanced to A. by his bankers. After the execution of the bond & before it became due A. paid money to the bankers, & he continued to draw upon them until his banking account was overdrawn. Some years afterwards an account was settled between A. & the bankers in which the whole money secured by the bond was treated as remaining due from A. The bankers then took a warrant of attorney from A. for securing payment of the balance found due upon the settlement by instalments at distant periods. Several of the instalments were paid, but A. became bkpt. before the whole debt was liquidated. It being proved that B. was privy to the settlement of accounts between A. & the bankers, & to the arrangement respecting the warrant of attorney:—Held: (1) B. was not discharged by the time given to A.; (2) the bond was not discharged by the course of payment, the money paid by A. to the bankers being applicable to the banking account & the bankers being entitled to hold the bond & warrant of attorney as distinct securities.—*TYSON v. 1164. — — — — — Terms of written agreement.]—A customer borrowed from his bankers £2,000, which was placed to the credit of his current account, & to secure the debt gave them ten promissory notes payable at intervals of a week. At the same time a friend of the borrower wrote to the bankers as follows:—"You having this day at my request placed the sum of £2,000 to the credit of Mr. C.'s" (the borrower's) "account with you, in the event of his promissory notes & interest or any of them representing that amount not being paid at the due dates, I hereby undertake, upon demand, to secure payment of the same," by a mtge. of certain specified property. On the first five due dates the sums represented by the first five notes respectively were debited by the bankers to the customer in the current account; & on each of the first two due dates enough cash was paid in to the account in the course of the day to liquidate the amount of the note. On the remaining three days the balance throughout the day was against the customer. The amounts of the last five notes were not entered by the bankers in the account at all. The payments in to the credit of C. to his current account, & to another special account after the last note became due, were sufficient to cover all debits up to & including the last note; but the accounts were during all this time overdrawn:—Held: the bankers were bound to apply all moneys paid in first to the notes secured by the surety which had fallen due; & the debt was, moreover, discharged, on the principle of Clayton's Case (1816), 1 Mer. 572. The memorandum contained an undertaking by B. to execute a legal mtge. of the house, but this undertaking was not carried out. Subsequently, in Mar. 1875, an arrangement was entered into without the knowledge of deft., between pltfs. & B. whereby it was agreed that pltfs. should not press for repayment of the loan, but that B. should pay instead a higher rate of interest than that on which the loan was originally made, & this higher rate was afterwards debited to B. in his current account. The loan & current account were always kept distinct, & for some months subsequent to this arrangement pltfs. always had a balance exceeding £1,400, to the credit of B. Pltfs. having pressed for the execution of a legal mtge. with the usual power of sale, deft.'s partner, on behalf of & in the name of his firm, prepared a legal mtge. to pltfs., another solicitor acting for B. This mtge. which was executed by B. secured the payment to pltfs. of any sum not exceeding £1,500 which might thereafter be due to pltfs. upon B.'s general account with interest at 6 per cent. & also contained a covenant for payment three months after demand, & a power of sale in case of default. In an action brought upon the promissory note against deft., after default made by B.:—Held: (1) deft. had signed & was liable upon the promissory note as principal, & as there was no evidence to show that pltfs. had agreed to accept deft. merely as surety, he was not entitled to be treated as such.

(2) Assuming deft. was & had been accepted by pltfs. as surety for B. the transaction of Mar. 1875, did not amount to such a giving of time to B. as to discharge deft. from his liability on the promissory note; (3) pltfs. were not bound to discharge the loan, which had been kept distinct from the current account, by appropriating to the payment of the promissory note the balance which they held to the credit of B.—*YORK CITY & COUNTY BANKING CO. v. By agreement of even date with the cognovit a third party undertook that, within seven days after any notice given to him for that purpose, the debtor should attend at a certain place, so that, in case of any of the instalments not being previously discharged, a ca. sa. to be issued on the judgment to be entered up on the cognovit, might be duly executed; & in default of debtor's appearing at the time & place stipulated, the surety undertook to pay the debt & costs. The first instalment being unpaid, & notice given, debtor appeared at the proper time & place but was dismissed on promising to pay the £5 in a few days, which he did: Held: the agreement of the surety was satisfied by his having once rendered the debtor to be taken in execution on the cognovit; & he was not bound to produce him again upon notice, on default as to a subsequent instalment. *TURNER v. The son assigned all his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, who were expressed to be parties to the assignment & to be named in a sched., & the deed purported to contain an absolute release of the debts without any reservation of rights against sureties. One of the trustees was a partner in the above-mentioned firm, & the deed was executed by him & the other trustees, but not by any other creditor. It was also executed by the son, with the privity & concurrence of the father. Upon its execution as an act of bkpcy., an adjudication was pronounced against the son:—Held: even assuming the father to have joined in the note as a surety merely, & the partner to have executed the deed as a creditor & not merely as a trustee, the father's liability was not discharged.

(2) It is not universally necessary, in order to reserve on a composition deed remedies against sureties, that the reservation should be expressed in the deed.

It is the duty of the surety to pay the debt, & if he declines so doing, thereby permits the creditor to prove, the signing the certificate of conformity, which is a power given by the statute to the proving creditor, cannot be considered as an act done by the creditor which altered the surety's right, without his control, & scarcely, indeed, without his consent (TINDAL, C.J.).

The solvency of the Paris house becoming doubtful, the London house duly authorised the creditor to act according to the best of his discretion in the settlement of the affairs. The creditor accordingly went to Paris & entered into a composition for the debt with the Paris house. After the departure of the creditor from England, & previous to the composition, a commission of bkpt. issued against the London house, of which fact the parties to the composition were ignorant:—Held: the bkpey. did not determine the

C. Particular Instances.

(a) Separable Contracts.

1199. Alteration in one transaction—Surety not discharged from other—Transactions entirely distinct.—When one enters into a bond as surety for the performance by another of two things which are separate & distinct, a subsequent alteration of the principal's contract as to one of them without the surety's consent does not release the surety from his contract of suretyship as to the other. By agreement between pltf. & S., pltf. agreed to purchase of S. the ship Devonport, the price being a sum of money & the transfer to S. of pltf.'s ship the Lord Dalhousie. Pltf. also agreed to lend S. £8,000 on mtge. of the Lord Dalhousie; & S. agreed to repair her, so as to class her eight years A1 at Lloyd's; & also to do anything remaining to be done to the Devonport within two weeks after that ship's arrival in London. Deft., as surety for S., gave his bond to pltf., conditioned to be void if S. forthwith repaired the Lord Dalhousie, & if S., within the two weeks mentioned did all that remained to be done to the Devonport. Pltf. & S. afterwards, without the knowledge of deft., made another agreement, whereby the time within which the Devonport was to be completed was shortened, & more was to be done to her than was included in the original agreement:—Held: the conditions in the bond as to the Lord Dalhousie & the Devonport were separate & distinct; & deft., though released by the alteration made by the second agreement in the terms of the first from his liability so far as related to the completion of the Devonport, was not released from his liability in respect of the Lord Dalhousie.—*HARRISON v. After the expiration of the first fourteen days of Aug. the co. took a promissory note from the principal for the amount due for July. Default was made by the principal in payment of the amounts due for July, for Aug., & for Sept.:—Held: time having been thus given for the payment of the amount due for July, the sureties were discharged as to that amount; but not as to the amounts due for Aug. & for Sept.; the contract being separable, & the position of the sureties as to those amounts not being affected by the giving time for payment of the amount due for July.—*CROYDON GAS CO. v. as a prolongation of time for the payment of the debt; if the surety is not precluded by such dealing, from suing the debtor for his indemnity, he will not be discharged: but if such dealing between the principal & his debtor amounts to a present, though but pro tempore payment, as the surety cannot then sue the principal debtor, he is discharged from his guarantee.

Where, therefore, a party became surety, upon an agreement for securing certain advances, by future consignments of West India produce, & after such advances, but before any consignments, the party having contracted to make the same accepted bills to the amount of the advances:—Held: inasmuch as such acceptances operated as a pro tempore payment of the sums advanced under the agreement, the surety was discharged.—*BELLINGHAM v. Advance by loan society—Variation in terms of discount.]—To an action by the payee against the maker of a promissory note, deft. pleaded that the note was made by him jointly & severally with, & as surety for A., to secure the repayment of a loan of £20, advanced by a certain loan society to A.; that the loan was advanced by the society in the ordinary way of business; that, according to the rules of the society, it was to be repaid by weekly instalments; that discount to the amount of 2s. in the pound, & no more, was to be charged by the society to A.; that the society wrongfully & fraudulently, & contrary to the rules, & without deft.'s consent, deducted from the loan a larger sum of money than at the rate of 2s. in the pound, to wit, the sum of 12s.: Held: the surety was liable.—*BROWN v. 1204. Transfer of account—To debtor & third person.]—Defts. signed a note jointly & severally with one C. B., the elder, as security for his account with plffs. as his bankers. They were aware that C. B., the elder, a maltster, paid in to his account sums received by him from his son, who was in business as a miller, & paid his son such sums as he required; but the cheques were drawn & the accounts kept in the name of the father, & it did not appear that he & his son were partners. Afterwards, a balance being due from the father, the father, in the son's presence, agreed with plffs. that in future the cheques should be drawn & the accounts kept in the name of "C. B. & Son"; & this was done, but nothing was said to the son as to the transfer to the new account of the old balance due to plffs. from C. B., the elder, & no balance was struck on plffs. books; it was simply carried on to the new accounts, with the account of the credit on the other side, & the passbook was unaltered. Afterwards, a larger amount than the amount of the old balance was paid in generally to the new account, but C. B. & Son then failed, there being then a balance against them exceeding the amount of the note. In an action against the sureties, the judge having left it to the jury whether the arrangement really was made as appeared in the books, & they having found for plffs., the ct. refused to set aside the verdict as against the weight of evidence, & held that there was no evidence for the jury that the old account was transferred to the father & son, so that deft. was not discharged.—*ALLAWAY v. This was subsequently varied by giving to the clerk fifty cents in addition to the disbursements in such suits. Periodical statements were made from time to time according to the agreement, & a cheque given for the balance thus shown. It was afterwards discovered that the statements were incorrect.

The terms of sale between pltfs. & M. at the time of the guarantee were, that the moneys received should be remitted from time to time, & an account of sales rendered at the end of each month, or when required, & an account current every three weeks. It was soon after agreed between pltf.'s & M. that the account current should be rendered every six months; & subsequently, in pursuance of an agreement between them, M. from time to time gave his promissory notes to pltfs., payable four months after date, for sums having no relation to the amount due from him, & pltfs., as the notes became due, transmitted M. the difference between the money then in his hands & the amount of the notes. on pltf.'s account; the breach alleged being that J. had received moneys for pltf. which he had not accounted for or paid over. Pleas, on equitable grounds. Second, that the original agreement between pltf. & J. was that it should be terminable by one month's notice; & that pltf. & J. afterwards, & before the defaults sued for, made it terminable by three month's notice, without pltf.'s consent. Third, that before the defaults sued for, J. had committed other defaults of the same kind; & that pltf. had, with a knowledge of those defaults, continued to employ J. in his service without notice to deft.; & that the defaults sued for were committed during such continuance of the service. On demurrer to these pleas:—Held: (1) the second plea was bad, on the ground that it did not show that the term as to the period of notice was made part of deft.'s contract, & the alteration alleged did not in fact materially add to deft.'s risk; (2) the third plea was good, on the authority of Phillips v. Foxall, No. 1680, post.

The case of Phillips v. Foxall, No. 1689, post, clearly shows that if any default or breaches of duty, whether by dishonesty or not, have been committed by the employed against the employer, under such circumstances that the employer might have dismissed the employed, the surety is entitled to call on the employer to dismiss him (KELLY, C.B.). —*SANDERSON v. 1215. Contract of letting—Milking cows—Reduction of number contracted for.]—A variance in the performance of a contract by pltf., with the assent of the principal, but without the consent of the surety, will discharge the surety, though the variance should tend to diminish his risk.

Declaration stated that pltf. agreed to let, & B. agreed to take, the milking of thirty cows, for the sum of £7 10s. per annum per cow, from Feb. 14, the rent to be paid quarterly, in advance, on Feb. 14, May 14, Aug. 14, Nov. 14, & deft. agreed to pay the rent at the times therein mentioned. Pltf. then averred performance of the agreement by him, & B. took the milking of the thirty cows, & alleged as a breach the non-payment by deft. of the rent, which became due on Nov. 14. It appeared in evidence at the trial, that in May it was agreed between pltf. & B., the latter having then thirty-two cows, that pltf. instead of taking away two at that time, should be at liberty to take four at the fall of the year, & it appeared that between Oct. 4, & 20 pltf. did take away four cows, leaving B. after that period less than thirty. It was proved, that this alteration in the mode of using the cows made no substantial difference as to profit or loss:—Held: (1) this was an entire contract for the letting of thirty cows, neither more nor less; (2) pltf. in this action against a surety, was bound to prove a literal performance of that contract, that he had not done so, inasmuch as he had shown that during part of the year he had allowed B. to have the milking of twenty-eight cows only.—*WHITCHIE v. having agreed to let to B. as yearly tenant a farm including certain hill pastures & a flock of 700 sheep, deft. gave pltf. a bond to secure the redelivery to him at the end of the tenancy of the flock in good order & condition. In Nov. pltf. gave B. a notice to quit which was ineffectual to determine the tenancy at the expiration of the then current year. B. objected to the insufficiency of the notice & on Apr. 8 entered into an agreement with pltf. that B. should surrender a field to pltf. & that B.'s rent should be reduced £10 & the notice to quit should be considered as withdrawn, B. then continued tenant of the farm, less the field, at the reduced rent. In Oct. 1876, pltf. gave B. notice to quit on Apr. 10, 1877. On giving up the farm it was ascertained that the flock was reduced in number & deteriorated in quality & value & pltf. sued deft. on his bond:

—Held: the contract of the surety was that the flock should be delivered up in good condition together with the farm as originally demised to the tenant; the surety ought to have been asked to decide whether he would assent to the variation in the terms of the letting, & not having been asked to assent he was discharged from liability. bond:—Held: the question was one which ought not to have been submitted to a jury; the surety was the sole judge whether it was reasonable that he should remain liable notwithstanding the new agreement.

The true rule in my opinion is that if there is any agreement between the principals with reference to the contract guaranteed, the surety ought to be consulted, & that if he has not consented to the alteration, although in cases where it is without inquiry evident that the alteration is unsubstantial or that it cannot be otherwise than beneficial to the surety, the surety may not be discharged; yet, that if it is not self-evident that the alteration is unsubstantial or one which cannot be prejudicial to the surety the court . . . will hold that in such a case the surety himself must be the sole judge whether or not he will consent to remain liable notwithstanding the alteration, & that if he has not so consented, he will be discharged (GOTTON, L.J.).—HOLME v. 1221. Variation by creditor's agent—Not acting as agent.]—Ptffs., a limited co. of which C. was managing director, had begun printing a periodical for D. & co. a firm consisting of deft.'s son & two others, & the periodical was being sold on commission by S. Ptffs., represented by C. refused to go on printing without a guarantee, & deft. consented to become security by drawing a bill on D. & co. & indorsing it to ptffs., upon the understanding that he was to have funds to meet it out of the debt accruing from S. to D. & co. C. was told of this arrangement. Before deft. drew this bill, C. had lent money to D. & co. on his own account, & held their acceptance to his draft. When this latter bill became due, C. obtained an order on S. from the other two partners of D. & co., without the knowledge or consent of deft. or his son, & under this order C. obtained the amount due from S. to D. & co., & appropriated it to the payment of this bill, the amount being more than sufficient to cover deft.'s bill. Ptffs. having sued deft. on his bill:—Held: deft. had no defence as against ptffs.; for ptffs. were not responsible for what C. did in getting his private debt paid, as though he was their managing director, he was not then acting for them or in pursuance of any authority from them.—McGOWAN & Co., LTD. v. there was attached thereto a handbill showing certain privileges to be received by the principal as set forth in the said plea, but which he did not receive by reason of omissions on ptffs.' part.—Held: bad, as not a defence sufficient to relieve deft. from the condition of his bond.—MIDDLESEX COUNTY v. d. Covenant by assignor for payment of mortgage—Assignment of mortgage—Discharge of part of land.]—Deft., when assigning a mtge. on lands to ptffs., covenanted that the mtgr. would pay. Ptffs. afterwards, without his consent, discharged half the lands from the mtge. on payment of half of the mtge. debt.—Held: this was such an alteration of the contract guaranteed as to release deft. from his liability whether the amount paid was the full value of the part released or them at par within twelve months from Jan. 1, 1874; & fourthly, it was agreed between him & plffs. that the book debts due to him, to the nominal amount of £8,000, should be collected & one half paid to plffs. to be applied towards redemption of the shares & when they had received a sum equal to, or a multiple of, the amount of a share, they were to deliver to him shares at par equivalent to the amount so received. Deft. guaranteed the performance of this agreement by N., so far as concerned the redemption of the shares of the value of £8,000. Subsequently an arrangement was made between plffs. & N. by which, for an equivalent in shares & cash, they released to him their interest in the book debts, that he might dispose of them to the co. Deft. having been sued on his guarantee for a deficiency of £2,250 in the amount of shares:—Held: the new arrangement was such a variation of the rights of deft. as surety as to discharge him.

became sureties for the good behaviour of [the collector] at the distance of twenty years from the time when he was first appointed? Can we say that they intended to be bound for an indefinite period? With respect to the words: "The wardens of the grand account for the time being or hereafter to be" used in the condition of the bond, it must be remembered that if the collector proceeded to collect after the death of those with whom he was to account he would undoubtedly be bound to account with the wardens of the succeeding year for the moneys collected by him in that year in which he was collected (MANSFIELD, C.J.).—ST. The bond was dated Dec. 15, 1817, & was in the penalty of £50. At the time the bond was given there was a balance of £61 3s. 11d. due from E. as such relieving officer to the guardians. Subsequently, on Feb. 12, 1818, E., the relieving officer, tendered his resignation to the board, which, on the 17th of the following month, was accepted. But upon his application, E. was again re-instated in the office of relieving officer, on the 24th of the same month; & he continued in the office until his death in 1854. There was in the hands of E. at the time of his resignation, a balance of £76, the money of his guardians, & such balance was carried over & continued in his accounts with the guardians upon his reliability. In 1863 the treasurer was re-appointed:—Held: this bond was only a continuing security until expiration of the treasurer's term of office & that the surety's liability ceased on the treasurer's re-appointment.—R. v. McLEAE (1870), 5 P. R. 398.—CAN.

appointed annually for several years:—Held: the re-appointments were not equivalent to removals & re-appointments, but were rather a retention in office of the same treasurer, & the sureties were not in consequence thereof discharged.—ADJALA CORPN. v. McELROY (1885), 9 O. R. 580.—CAN.

appointment. At the time of E.'s death there was a balance of £91 due to the guardians. An action having been brought after the death of E. against S. by the guardians on the bond of 1847:—Held: the liability of S. as surety terminated upon the acceptance of E.'s resignation in 1847, & the guardians could not, therefore, recover in respect of the balance due at his death; they could not recover in respect of the balance due at the time of his resignation, as it had been discharged by being carried over to the new accounts, & a new balance created.—HASINGSTOKE UNION GUARDIANS v. surrender of or remove from the old one. In 1843, P. was according to Poor Relief Act, 1819 (c. 12), s. 7, nominated & elected by the vestry of a certain parish, & appointed by two justices assistant overseer of that parish. The warrant of appointment defined the duties of assistant overseer, one of which was to account, when required by the overseers or vestry, for money received or expended to the persons authorised to receive the same. By above Act every person so appointed is to continue assistant overseer until he shall resign such office, or until his appointment shall be revoked by the vestry. Security was, according to the Act, taken for the faithful execution of the office by bond with securities made to the churchwardens & overseers of the parish. P. continued to act in the execution of such office until Mar. 1852, when he resigned. In the year 1847, P. was appointed one of the overseers of the same parish, & he was afterwards from year to year re-appointed & acted as such until 1852. P. having made default in accounting for moneys received by him as assistant overseer, & an action having been brought on the bond against one of the sureties:—Held: assuming the two officers to be incompatible which they were not, the acceptance of the office of overseer did not vacate that of assistant overseer, since the holder could not divest himself of the latter office by his own act simply, the word "resign" in the Act meaning a formal notification to the vestry of the act of giving up the office; & since, also, there was no implied motion from the old by appointment to the new office, for the authority appointing to that office could not remove; nor was there any implied surrender because the same authority could not accept a surrender of the old office; if the offices were incompatible, the appointment as overseer would be either void or voidable only, in which case it would be vacated on appeal; as the assistant overseer was not bound to account to the overseers, his appointment as overseer did not make such an alteration in the mode of accounting as would affect the liability of the sureties.—WORTH v. NEWTON (1854), 10 Exch. 247; 2 C. L. R. 1471; 23 L. J. Ex. 338; 24 L. T. O. S. 157; 18 J. P. 777; 156 E. R. 435.

1259. — Former office vacated—Assistant-overseer appointed collector.—In June, 1865, deft. became surety for A. in a bond to the guardians of the union which comprise W., the condition of which bond was that A. should faithfully perform all the duties of his office, & in all matters relating thereto obey the overseers, subject to the orders of the Poor Law Board, & keep books, & pay over moneys to such persons as the overseers should direct. In April, 1866, the board of guardians of the M. Union, on the recommendation of the vestry of W., appointed A. collector of the poor-rates for W. at a poundage of 6d. The Poor Law Board duly approved the appointment, & made an order fixing the remuneration of the collector at 6d. in the pound as proposed. The duties under the two appointments were substantially the same. After the last appointment A. continued to perform the same duties as he had before performed, & the appointment of Apr. 1865, was not otherwise resigned or revoked. A. having made default, after the last appointment, in keeping books & in paying over money, deft. was sued on the bond:—Held: the two appointments were inconsistent & incompatible; the appointment of Apr. 1865, ceased, by virtue of Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844 (c. 101), s. 62, on A.'s acceptance of the appointment by the guardians in 1866; & consequently the liability of the deft. as surety on the bond was at an end. Semble: there was both a revocation of the first appointment by the vestry, & a resignation by A.—MALLING UNION v. GRAHAM (1870), L. R. 5 C. P. 201; 39 L. J. C. P. 74; 22 L. T. 789; 18 W. R. 674.

1260. Appointment to additional office—Former office retained—Distinct duties—Rates collector.—Declaration on a bond conditioned for the due performance by A. of his duties as collector of the poor-rates, & of the sewers & general rates for the parish of S., the bond to continue in force if A. held either office separately. Breach, that A. received money in each capacity, & failed to pay it over. Plea, that before breach two Acts were passed increasing A.'s duties as collector of sewers & general rates, & under which he was also appointed collector of main drainage rates, by the persons under whom he held his other appointments. These Acts altered the proportion in which certain sewers rates were to be borne by different parishes, increasing the proportion payable by the parish of S., & also imposed upon the sewers rates certain fresh charges of small amount:

Held: (1) the appointment of A. to the new office of collector of main drainage rates did not avoid the bond; (2) the changes introduced by the Acts did not amount to an alteration of the office of collector of sewers rates to which A. was originally appointed; (3) the bond was divisible, & the plea was bad, as affording no answer to deft.'s liability for A.'s breaches of duty as collector of poor rates.—*SKILLET v. Defts. entered into a bond guaranteeing the faithful performance of his duties as assistant overseer. A. committed defalcations in respect of moneys received by him as clerk to the parish council. In an action to recover the amount of such defalcations under the guarantee given by defts.: Held: the defalcations of H. in relation to the parish council accounts were not covered by the terms of the bond guaranteeing the faithful performance of his duties in the office of assistant overseer.—*COSFORD UNION v. 1263. — Breach of original duties.]—The condition of a bond recited that G. had been appointed bailiff of a county ct. under the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, & stipulated for the proper execution by G. of all warrants, etc., issued out of ct. to the high bailiff, & making true returns thereof according to the rules regulating the practice of the ct., & for his due performance of the office of bailiff, & for his not taking any fees except those specified in that Act. After this bond, & before any breach occurred, statutes were passed increasing the jurisdiction of the county ct. in point of amount, giving it jurisdiction in matters of insolvency & over absconding debtors, & enabling any one of the bailiffs authorised by the judge to sell goods seized in execution without the intervention of a sworn broker:—Held: by these statutes the duties & liabilities of the office were essentially changed, & the risk of the sureties increased; & consequently they were discharged, notwithstanding that the breach of duty relied upon arose entirely out of the original duties of the office.—Pybus v. Gibb (1856), 6 E. & B. 902; Saund. & M. 100; 26 L. J. Q. B. 41; 28 L. T. O. S. 81; 3 Jur. N. S. 315; 5 W. R. 44; 119 E. R. 1100.

On June 25, 1840, a vestry meeting was held at which A. was elected assistant overseer until Mar. 25, 1841, at a salary of 8*d.* in the pound on some sums collected & 4*d.* on others. Two justices, by their warrant dated July 9, 1840, reciting the vestry resolution & that his salary had been fixed for the execution of his office until Mar. 25 then next, stated, that in pursuance of Poor Relief Act, 1819 (c. 12), they appointed him assistant overseer. On Mar. 25, 1841, he was again elected to the same office at a salary of £50 per annum & re-appointed by the justices & he continued to be so re-elected & re-appointed until Mar. 1846. On ceasing to hold office he retained moneys in his hands:—Held: the sureties were not liable on the bond.

1270. — Salary raised — Invalid appointment at lower salary—Subsequent valid appointment at higher salary.—In Mar. 1815, R. was nominated & elected assistant overseer of the poor of the parish of W., by the inhabitants in vestry assembled, at the yearly salary of £27. In May following he entered into a bond, with two sureties, as a security for the faithful execution of the office, under Poor Relief Act, 1819 (c. 12). The condition of this bond, which was in the usual form, recited that Act, & that R. had been duly nominated & elected at the annual salary of £27. R. then proceeded to perform the duties of the office. In Mar. 1816, at a vestry duly held, a resolution was come to, that the permanent overseer's salary, meaning R.'s, should be raised from £27 to £35 a year, including all other extra charges. In June, 1816, a warrant of the appointment of R. as assistant overseer was signed & sealed by two justices of the peace. This warrant recited that R. had been nominated & elected in Mar. 1816, at the yearly salary of £35. Subsequently to June, 1816, R. had acted as assistant overseer, but had become a defaulter to a considerable amount:—Held: there never had been an appointment by the justices upon the nomination & election of Mar. 1815, at an annual salary of £27, upon which the bond had been given, inasmuch as the appointment was made in pursuance of the resolution of Mar. 1816, at the increased salary of £35; & therefore R. had never been duly appointed assistant overseer, & the sureties were not liable.—*HOLLAND v. 1273. — — — — —.]—The condition of a bond recited that S. had been appointed, under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 76, treasurer to a borough; & declared that it had been agreed that the obligor should join with S. in the bond for the due performance of the office; & the condition was declared to be that, if S. should duly perform the office according to the provisions of the said statutes, & of such statutes as might be thereafter passed relating to the said office, the bond should be void, otherwise, etc. In a declaration by the obligee against the obligor, it was averred that, under the appointment in the condition mentioned, & divers subsequent annual appointments in every successive year, S. continued to be treasurer from the time of the execution of the bond till 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, passed, when S., in accordance with the last-mentioned Act, was appointed treasurer, & held office during the pleasure of the council till his death; & that the office, at S.'s last appointment, & until his death, continued, in its nature, functions & duties, to be the same office as that mentioned in the condition. A breach was then assigned, alleging a malversation by S., while he remained treasurer as aforesaid not stated to have occurred within the year from his first appointment, but, to wit, on a day named, which was subsequent to the appointment under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89: Held: declaration bad on demurrer. For under 5 & 6 W. 1, c. 76 (s. 58), the appointment mentioned in the condition was for one year only; & the liability of the obligor could not extend to the holding under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, which makes the office to be an office held during the pleasure of the council.—*CAMBRIDGE CORPN. v. 1276. — ]—By an order of the Poor Law Comrs. plffs., guardians of a Union, were directed to appoint collectors of the poor rates of such of the several parishes in the Union as plffs. might deem to require a collector; & every person appointed a collector was required to give security for the due performance of the duties of his office. In the interval between this order & the passing of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 90, which regulates the collection of poor rates assessed upon the owners of small tenements in parishes, plffs., in pursuance of the order, appointed several persons as collectors of the poor rates of P., one of the parishes in the Union. Subsequently to that Act, & to its adoption by the parish of P., plffs. determined to appoint an additional collector; & one of those originally appointed having resigned, advertised that they were about to appoint "two persons to be collectors of the poor rates of the parish of P., to one of whom" would be assigned a collection of such rates from the owners of small tenements." W., in answer to the advertisement, sent in the following written application: "There being two collectors of poor rates about to be appointed for the parish of P., may I offer myself as a candidate for one of them?" Plffs. afterwards elected W. & another person, by a resolution which declared that the latter was elected in the place of the retiring collector, & W. for the purpose of collecting the rates from the owners of small tenements. Both appointments were approved of by the Poor Law Board. Deft. then executed a bond as surety for W., which after reciting the order of the Poor Law Comrs., & that W. had been "duly appointed to be a collector under the said order," was conditioned for the faithful discharge by W. of his duties "during his continuance in the said office of collector." W. entered on his duties & for some years collected the poor rates assessed upon the owners of small tenements in P. One of the previously appointed collectors, who collected all the poor rates in L., a district of P., then resigned, & plffs., on W.'s application, transferred him to that district. No new bond was then executed. W. afterwards committed defalcations, in respect of which plffs. now sued deft., as surety, upon the bond executed by him:—Held: deft. was liable for that W. was appointed, in the first instance, as collector of the poor rates of P. generally, not of the poor rates payable by the owners of small tenements in P. exclusively; so that his transfer to the L. district was not an appointment of him to a fresh office, or such an alteration in his duties as to discharge his surety from further liability.—*PORTSEA ISLAND UNION GUARDIANS v. No communication of this new arrangement was made to A. B. allowed a customer considerably to overdraw his accounts, & thereby the bank lost a sum of money:—Held: the surety could not be called on to make good this loss, though it fell within the terms of the original agreement, as the fresh arrangement was the substitution of a new agreement for the former one, & A. was thereby discharged.—*BONAR v. The bankers gave A. credit in his pass-book for £300 on account of the note, & charged him with interest for the same yearly. Upon two of the partners retiring from the banking-house a balance was struck between the old & new firm, & the promissory note was delivered to the new firm, but not indorsed to them. A. at one time had in the hands of his bankers a balance exceeding the amount of the note. He paid interest to the banking-house annually:—Held: (1) the note being payable to the five members of the banking-house or order, & being evidently intended to be a continuing security, the makers were liable upon it, notwithstanding a change in the members of the banking house; (2) an action on the note, the same not having been indorsed, was properly brought in the name of the payees of the note; (3) the note was not discharged by reason of A. at one time having in the hands of the banker a balance exceeding in amount the sum secured by the note; (4) the payment of interest within six years by A. on the note was evidence of an acknowledgment by all the joint makers of the note, so as to take the case out of Stat. Co., or to the committee for managing the London terminus of the London & Croydon, London & Brighton, & South Eastern Railways, a true account of all receipts & payments, & should pay to the Croydon Co., or to the committee, all sums received by him on account of the co. or committee, also such sums as he should receive from the booking clerks, or on account of the co. or committee, the bond was to be held void. Breaches were assigned in the replication. Upon the assessment of damages after judgment for pltf. upon demurrer, the breach relied upon was that G. did not pay over to the co. what he had received from the booking clerks. It appeared that instead of making up his accounts in the evening of each day, G. had allowed the clerks to be in arrear, & had balanced the accounts on the following day by appropriating a portion of that day's receipts to the deficiency of the previous day, but had in fact paid over all that he had received:—Held: (1) this was a breach of the condition, for he had not paid it over duly; (2) the opening an additional line, whereby the duties of the clerks were increased, did not affect the liability of his sureties in respect of the duties as to the original lines specified in the bond & condition.—LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. CO. v. GOODWIN (1849), 3 Exch. 736; 18 L. J. Ex. 337; 13 L. T. O. S. 74; 151 E. R. 1012; previous proceedings, 3 Exch. 320.

1304. — Insurance company subsequently dissolved—Business transferred to new company—Liability to new company.—A sum of money was borrowed from an insurance co., & a bond was given to secure the repayment of the money. The borrower at the same time insured his life as a further security; & the bond extended to the payment of the premiums for keeping up the policy. The insurance co. having ceased to carry on business was dissolved, & the affairs being wound up, the co. transferred, amongst other things this bond & policy to another insurance co. No premiums were paid to the second co., & the policy was allowed to drop. The surety in the bond died, & the second insurance co. claimed to be creditors against his estates for the amount of premiums unpaid, on the ground that the policies ought to be kept on foot, until the money due upon the bond had been paid:—Held: as regarded the premiums, this was not such a contract as the assignees of the first insurance co. could enforce, although they had a good claim against the estate of the surety quoad, the amount secured by the bond.—*ATKINSON v. Before the time at which the bond was payable, C. unknown to the exors. of A. but without any intention of releasing A.'s estate, agreed with B. & D. that the payment of the bond should be suspended for three years:—Held: C. knowing that the estate of A. was liable as surety only, the original character of the estate of A. as a principal, was changed into that of surety; & such estate was, by the giving of time by C. to the new firm, Continuing partners under such a contract which, inter alia, gave the firm the power of appointing an arbitrator in case of dispute, entered into an agreement by which they waived a very doubtful point of construction on the original contract, & referred differences to arbitrators, one of whom was selected by themselves instead of by the firm as constituted at the date of the contract: Held: this was not such a variation of the original contract as to discharge the retired partner. —*OAKFORD v. Among the debts was an overdraft of £50,000 due to resps., a banking co. After the dissolution, the terms of which were made known to resps., a transaction was entered into between the new firm & resps. whereby the new firm were allowed for a limited period to increase the overdraft to £53,000:—Held: there was no agreement to give time to the new firm or to alter the relation & resps. had not released applt.

Plff. gave his bond to D., who held the claim of H., to secure the debt; he in 1852, after payment of the first instalment, took from W. his bond to secure the same debt. Upon an action brought against B., one of the original co-sureties:—Held: by the payment of the original debt plff. had put himself in the position of principal debtor, & the taking the bond operated to the prejudice of his co-sureties, inasmuch as he could not, at any moment, be put in motion against the original debtor; & therefore the co-sureties were released.—*CAMERON v. 1314. ———.]—BANK OF IRELAND v. BERESFORD, No. 1373, post.

1315. ———.]—A ct. of equity will not relieve a surety by bond, upon the ground of the creditor having given time to the principal debtor, unless there has been an express & positive contract between them for that purpose.—HEATH v. KEY (1827), 1 Y. & J. 434; 148 E. R. 741.

1316. ———.]—A., & B., as his surety, made their joint promissory note for £250 payable to the manager of a banking co., as a security for advances made by the co. to A. After the note became due it was, without the consent of the surety, agreed between the co. & A., that the latter should execute & deliver to three persons as trustees of the co. a warrant of attorney to secure the £250 for which the joint note of A. & B. had been given & a further advance, upon which the trustees were to be at liberty to enter up judgment & issue execution forthwith for the sum due & costs. In an action against the surety upon the note, the jury having negatived a plea that the warrant of attorney was accepted on behalf of the co. in full satisfaction & discharge of the principal & interest due upon the note:—Held: the taking of the warrant of attorney from the principal debtor without the consent of the surety, did not discharge the latter, there having been no binding contract to give time to the former, though in point of fact the remedy had been delayed.

A surety is discharged from his debt, if his situation is altered for the worse, by the conduct of the creditor. The general class of cases is, where time has been given to the principal debtor, without the assent of the surety. This amounts to a legal fraud; it alters for the worse the position of the surety, because in case of failure of payment on the day, by the principal, he might have exerted himself to have compelled immediate payment. A mere voluntary abstinence from suing is not such a giving of time as will discharge the surety.—BELL v. BANKS (1841), 3 Man. & G. 258; 3 Scott, N. R. 497; Drinkwater, 236; 5 Jur. 486; 133 E. 1313 i. Contract must be binding.—Between creditor & debtor.]—In order to succeed on the defence that time has CHERNENKOFF, [1923] 3 W. W. R. 59.—CAN.

———.]—In order that the giving of time by a creditor to his principal debtor without the consent of a surety for the debt may have the effect of releasing the surety, there must be a binding contract to give time capable of being enforced, & the contract must be with the principal debtor. If the contract is made with a third party, for instance with a co-surety, the surety will not be released.

By a deed made in 1872, between a coal co. of the first part, six sureties of the second part, & a bank of the third part, the co. & the sureties jointly & severally covenanted with the bank to pay to the bank on demand the balance, not exceeding £25,000, for the time being due from the co. to the bank on their current account, with interest. In Nov. 1880, the following guarantee, addressed to, but not executed by, the bank, was executed by three of the six sureties & one L.: "In consideration of your continuing or giving an account . . . to the co. for one year from the date hereof, we, the undersigned, do hereby jointly & severally guarantee to you the due payment of all moneys & liabilities which are or have been or shall from time to time be owing to or incurred by you on account of the said co., it being agreed as follows:—1. That not more than £8,000 shall be ultimately recoverable hereunder; 3. This shall be a continuing security until a notice in writing under the hand of us or any of us to determine this security as to the person or persons signing such notice shall be given to you & to the other parties to this guarantee; 9. The security hereby given is in addition to the other securities held by you for the said account"; Held: the liability of the three sureties, who were not parties, was not released or determined by this guarantee. CLARKIE v. B. What Constitutes Giving Time.*(a) In General.

1325. General rule.—(1) A letter written by the agent of a bond creditor to the principal obligor, giving him eighteen months' further time to pay the bond debt, upon condition of his paying off at once the arrear of interest, & keeping down the interest to accrue in future:—Held: a mere promise without consideration, & not binding; & therefore the co-obligor, who had joined in the bond as surety only, was not thereby discharged.

(2) It is not every alteration of his position by the act of the creditor that discharges the surety. To have this effect, the alteration must be such as interferes for a time with his remedies against the principal debtor.

(3) Where the creditor knew that the surety was negotiating a loan for the principal debtor, for the purpose of paying off therewith the debt for which the surety was liable, & thus getting rid of such liability, & the creditor promised the debtor to give him further time, & this induced the surety to desist from his attempt to raise the money:—Held: the surety's liability to the creditor was not discharged.—TUCKER v. LAING (1856), 2 K. & J. 745; 69 E. R. 982.

1328. ——[The heir of a surety, where the bond was continued without the privity of the surety, relieved.—MOILE v. ROBERTS (LORD) (1629), Toth. 182; 21 E. R. 162.

1329. ——(1) A. guaranteed the payment of any goods to be supplied by B. to C. between Apr. 2, 1814, & Apr. 2, 1815. Although no period of credit was specified, this could not be taken as a guarantee for an unlimited period, but to be restrained by the usual course of trade; & C. having accepted bills for the amount of the goods delivered, which B. permitted him to renew when payable without any communication to A. on the subject of such renewal:—Held: A. was discharged from his guarantee, by virtue of the rule that a creditor giving further time to the principal debtor, without the consent of the surety, releases the surety; & that, although it was proved that the renewal was given only in consequence of C.'s inability to pay, & that no injury could accrue to A.; the surety being himself the fit judge of what was or was not, for his own benefit.

The rule is that if a creditor without the consent of the surety gives time to the principal debtor, by so doing he discharges the surety; that is, if time is given by virtue of positive contract between the creditor & the principal, not where the creditor is merely inactive (LORD ELDON, C.).

(2) The liabilities of sureties are governed by principles which have been settled in equity & are now adopted in cts. of law (LORD ELDON, C.).—SAMUELL v. HOWARTH (1817), 3 Mer. 272; 36 E. R. 105.

1341. General rule.]—(1) If, after a right of action accrues to a creditor against two or more persons, he is informed that one of them is a surety only, & after that, he gives time to the principal debtor, without the consent & knowledge of the surety, the rule as to the discharge of the surety applies.

M. brought to G. (a discount co.) certain bills, which bore on them the acceptances of F. Co. M. was in fact the agent of A. Co. (an American co.), & he & this American co. had obtained the acceptances for their own accommodation, & on payment of a commission in respect of such acceptances. The bills were not paid, but renewed. M. gave G. Co. his own guarantee & that of the American co. that these renewed bills should be paid at maturity. These renewed bills were not paid. G. Co. gave, on Apr. 6, 1866, notice of dishonour to all the parties whose names were on the bills. On Apr. 9 the solr. of F. Co. gave full information to the G. Co. that M. was the real principal on the bills, which had been accepted by F. Co. merely for his accommodation. The manager of the G. Co. said he should see M. in the afternoon. M. afterwards gave, as collateral security, to G. Co. bills to a much larger amount, drawn on one L., & G. Co. entered into an arrangement with M. not to sue on the old bills if the bills on L. should be paid. Nothing farther was done in the matter for some months. These last bills were not paid, & G. Co. afterwards brought an action against F. Co. to recover the amount of the bills originally accepted by F. Co. F. Co. filed a bill to restrain the action:—Held: the action must be restrained, for G. Co. with a knowledge of the real character of F. Co.'s acceptances, had given time to M., whom they knew to be the real principal on the bills, & had so discharged F. Co.

(2) Mere giving of additional security, by a principal, will not discharge a surety, but if the giving of such security is really a consideration for giving time to the principal, it will do so.

(3) Seemle: to reserve a creditor's right against a surety there must be a distinct expression of intention to reserve it.

(4) A promise to pay on demand bills, upon their reaching maturity, given not upon the face of the bills themselves but by a collateral writing is binding to all intents & purposes on the giver of it.—*OVEREND, GURNEY & CO. The account was accordingly opened, & advances were made by A. It appeared to be the mode of dealing at the bank for the customers to give acceptances occasionally for the balance of their accounts. In Feb. 1827, A. ceased to make advances. In Oct. 1827, a payment into the bank was made by B. In Feb. 1828, & not before, A. took B.'s acceptance at three months for the amount of his balance. It did not appear that B. had actual knowledge of the course of business at the bank, although he was solr. to the bankers:—Held: taking the acceptance was a giving of time to the debtor, & B., the surety, was thereby discharged.—*HOWELL v. He never did so call. On Oct. 8, plff. gave notice to deft. that he held himself disengaged from the agreement, & should proceed with the action forthwith. On Oct. 20, deft. delivered to plff., & the latter received, two bills of exchange for the greater portion of the debt. He did not deliver any iron, & became bkpt. on Nov. 6:—Held: there was not a giving of time to deft., so as to discharge the bail.—*VERNON v. The promissory note, which it was agreed between plffs. & M. should be a collateral security to the mtge. deed, was made & given to plffs. on Dec. 7, 1863, when £150, part of the loan, was advanced to M.; but the mtge. deed was not executed until Dec. 22, 1863. The deed contained no reference to the note, & the sureties who signed the note were not parties to the deed:—Held: the debt secured by the note did not merge in the deed, & though the remedy on the covenant could not be enforced before June 22, 1864, time was not given to M. so as to discharge the liability of the sureties on the note.—*BOALER v. By a deed, dated Dec. 15, 1884, the above-mentioned mtge. & various other mtges., including other property, given by the mtgor. were consolidated, plff. advancing the total sum of £3,200 for payment to the various mtgees. of the amounts

One of the makers of the note, P., being a solr., was consulted by B., & advised B. to take a new chattel mtge., payable at a later date, which B. did. Plff., being aware of this arrangement, took from O'N. his separate promissory note, extending the time for payment:—Held: W. had become a surety only

Deft. was not a party to such last-mentioned deed:—Held: the covenant in that deed necessarily implied that principal debtor could not be sued for the £450 due under the covenant in the deed of 1857 before Jan. 19, 1885, & consequently there had been a giving of time to principal debtor by which deft. as surety was discharged from liability.—*BOLTON v. The father died, & the creditor commenced proceedings against his estate for the recovery of the bond debt, but subsequently took a fresh bond from the son, who was the father's heir-at-law, & from the personal representative of the father, conditioned for paying the same debt by instalments; the creditor, at the same time, retaining the original bond:—Held: the original bond was discharged, first, on the ground that the father was only surety for the son, & that the creditor, by giving time to the principal debtor, had discharged the surety; & secondly, because the second bond must be considered, under the circumstances, as having been given in satisfaction of the first.

Suppose between living parties that A. owes B. a debt & C. gives his bond for the payment of it at a particular time, without any agreement that the original contract shall be given up. It is argued that upon the bond being given, the debt is merged in that security. I do not agree with that doctrine. Before the bill arrived at maturity, C., without deft.'s knowledge, executed a deed of mtge. to the bank to secure the sum of £8,800, which was the total amount then due by him, on foot of his overdraft. The deed recited a previous equitable mtge. by deposit by C., to secure overdrafts of his current account, & contained a covenant by C. for the payment of the principal sum of £8,000, & interest, on a day three months subsequent to the date of the mtge.—Held: the taking of the mtge. by the bank constituted a giving of time to the principal debtor.—MUNSTER & LKINSTER BANK v. FRANCE (1889), 24 L. R. Ir. 82.—IR.

1374. —. —.]—R. & S., partners in trade, executed in the year 1811, four joint & several bonds to O., to secure re-payment of £10,000, advanced to them by his acceptance & payment of four bills of exchange, amounting together to that sum. Two of the bonds were made payable in 1817, & two in 1818. S. died early in 1815, & his exors. agreed with R. & with K., who was then in partnership with R., in place of S., that R. & K., in consideration of the outstanding debts & effects of the former partnership, would pay certain sums to the exors., & would also indemnify S.'s estate against certain scheduled debts, including these bonds. No notice of that agreement was given to O. He continued to receive interest on the bonds from the new firm as well after as before they became due; & the annual accounts which they furnished to him contained an account of the dividends due to him on £17,000 stock, which he lent to the new firm. From O.'s correspondence with that firm in 1820, it appeared that he had, in 1817, given them three years' further time for payment of the bonds, & that, in 1820, he gave twelve months' further time. These indulgences were granted without consent of S.'s exors. In 1823, O. took from R. & K. a collateral security for payment of the debt, expressly reserving his right against S.'s estate in respect of the bonds, but concealing that arrangement from S.'s exors. In 1829, O.'s exors., to whom he had assigned the bonds before his death, applied for payment of them to S.'s exors., who thereupon filed their bill, praying that it might be declared that their testator's estate was discharged from the bonds:—Held: the indulgence granted by O., for payment of the bonds in 1817, without consent of S.'s exors., had the effect of discharging his estate.

The principle of law is that, where a creditor gives time to the principal debtor, there being a surety to secure payment of the debt, it does so without consent of or communication with the

If a man be a surety for another for a sum payable at a given time, & the creditor, or person to whom the money is due, extends the credit beyond the term originally agreed upon, & this without the knowledge & consent of the bail or surety, the so doing is "giving time," upon this plain principle, that he became surety for the performance of a given contract, & for that only, & that he cannot be made responsible for the breach of another & a different contract: for an altered contract is another contract. (2) When the creditor gives a release to the debtor he cannot reserve any right against the surety, because the debt is gone at law.

An agreement between a bond debtor & his creditor, that the latter shall take all the debtor's property, & shall pay his other creditors 5s. in the pound, though not a discharge of the bond at law by way of accord & satisfaction, because not under seal, still operates in equity as a satisfaction of the debt; & it is not possible in equity, upon such a transaction as that, to reserve any rights against the surety; & any attempt to do so would be void as being inconsistent with the agreement.

Some time after, £332 being then due from C. to pltf. for goods supplied, C. executed a mtge. deed to pltf. as security for the then existing debt & for any future debt for goods to be supplied. The deed contained a proviso that if C. paid pltf. the £332 in six months from its date, & all sums due for future supplies in six months from their date, without prejudice to pltf.'s right not to give credit in respect of future supplies the mtgd. premises were to be reconveyed to C. There was also a covenant to pay the existing debt in six months, & future debts within six months from their accruing due, without prejudice to pltf.'s refusing to give credit for future debts. The parties in fact dealt on a two months' credit only. In the course of dealing C. paid off £332. A further debt exceeding £200 having subsequently accrued, which C. could not pay, pltf. sued deft. on the guarantee. Dft. pleaded that he was discharged by times having been given by pltf. to C.:—Held: by the mtge.-deed pltf. did not give time to C. except in respect of the £332 debt, & as that debt had long since been discharged the giving that time did not prejudice the surety as to other & future debts due from C. to pltf.: as in fact only a two months' credit was given by pltf. to C. the guarantee remained in force & deft. was liable up to £200 on C.'s failure to pay the sum due in respect of goods supplied by pltf. to C. subsequent to the mtge. deed. *BINGHAM v. After this the discount co. agreed with the agent not to press the acceptors for payment until certain other bills became due:—Held: the acceptors were thereby discharged.

This deed was not registered under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 30. B. & P. failed to pay interest upon Feb. 25, but pltfs. did not enter into possession. About a week before Aug. 5, pltfs. received notice that B. & P. were insolvent, but they allowed them to continue in possession, & on that day B. & P. filed a petition for liquidation under Bkpcy. Act, 1869 (c. 71), & were adjudged bkpts. The trustee under the bkpcy. seized & sold the goods & chattels assigned by the deed:—Held: pltfs. by their omission both to register the deed & to seize the property assigned to them on default of payment of the interest, had deprived themselves of the power to assign the security to the surety, & owing to their laches he was discharged to the amount that the goods were worth.—*WULFF v. 1444. ———.]—In an action upon a bond & a promissory note, defts. pleaded, by way of equitable defence, in substance, that the bond & note were made by defts. as sureties for P. in his lifetime, to secure the payment by P. to a loan society whereof plffs. were treasurer & secretary, of £50 by weekly instalments of 5s., & that the said bond & note were made upon the terms & conditions that defts. should only be liable thereupon to the extent of any deficiency in the amount of such payments by P., & that in the event of P. becoming more than four weeks' payments in arrear, the committee (whereof plffs. were members) should immediately inform defts. of the same. Averments of P. becoming more than four weeks in arrear, & failure of the committee or plffs. or any person, to inform defts. thereof until a long & unreasonable time after P.'s death, & after the death of a co-surety with defts., whereby defts.' risk as sureties was improperly increased, & they were precluded from enforcing payment by P., & were greatly damaged:—Held: a rule in a book of printed rules of the society, stating that "if any member who has had his share advanced becomes more than four weeks' payments in arrear, they (the committee) should immediately inform the sureties of the same & have power to institute legal proceedings against them," even if it were binding & obligatory upon members of the society as between themselves, yet was no part of the contract between the plffs. who were members, & defts. who were not members, & did not enable defts. as sureties, to set up the want of such notice as an equitable defence to plffs.' action. Semble: no mere forbearance or abstinence of the creditor from suing the principal, provided he does not give time, releases the surety.

The general rule of law in respect to matters of this sort, where there is a surety, is this: the creditor is entitled frequently to make his demand for a certain period, & to enforce it in a certain way; but provided he does not tie his own hands up so as to prevent him from acting, he is not at all bound to do so. He may abstain from using any right that he possesses, & whether that is advantageous to the surety or not is not the question. The thing to be considered is, is he bound to do it? If he is not bound to do it, the surety cannot compel him (POLLOCK, C.B.).—PRICE v. KIRKHAM (1861), 3 H. & C. 137; 5 New Rep. 59; 34 L. J. Ex. 35; 11 L. T. 314; 29 J. P. 8; 159 E. R. 601.

1. Non-enrolment of tenant's recognisance—Delay of four years.—A tenant's recognisance was executed at the same time as his lease, but was not enrolled for four years after. The tenant in the meantime became insolvent, & encumbered his property:—Held: the neglect to enrol the recognisance, when the lease was executed, did not discharge the surety. —JEPHSON v. 1448. General rule.—(1) Surety sued upon a bond given to a bank as guarantee for the due discharge of certain specified services by their manager & cashier, pleaded negligence & want of due care on the part of the bank, in not properly checking & examining the accounts of their manager: demurrer to plea, that it was bad in substance & no defence to the action, sustained; the checking & examining the accounts not being expressed as obligatory on the principals in the bond, & not to be implied in law.

(2) The mere passive inactivity of the principal to whom a guarantee is given, or his neglect to call the principal debtor to account in reasonable time, & to enforce payment against him, does not discharge the surety; there must be some positive act done to the prejudice of the surety, or such degree of negligence as to imply connivance & amount to fraud. The rule at law & in equity is the same, & is distinguishable from the principles applied to bills of exchange, which depend upon mercantile usage.

(3) The surety guarantees the honesty of the person employed, & is not entitled to be relieved from his obligation, because the employer fails to use all the means in his power to guard against the consequences of dishonesty.—BLACK v. OTTOMAN BANK (1862), 15 Moo. P. C. C. 472; 6 L. T. 763; 8 Jur. N. S. 801; 10 W. R. 871; 15 E. R. 573, P. C.

Immediately upon his death, by the examination of his books, he was found to be a defaulter to a very large amount. Actions were commenced on the bond against the sureties. One of the sureties sought to restrain the action on the ground of the negligence of the officials whose duty it was to examine the assignees' accounts, etc. There did not, however, appear to have been any want of compliance with the rules & regulations in bkpcy. by these parties, & the motion for an injunction was refused.

To discharge a surety for the due performance of duties there must be on the part of the obligee an act of connivance or gross negligence amounting to a wilful shutting of the eyes to the fraud, or something approximating to it.—DAWSON v. C. absconded, having embezzled part of the rates & allowed others to be lost by not applying for them. The guardians sued deft. for the loss. Deft. admitted his liability as to the sums embezzled, but disputed his liability as to the sums lost by C.'s negligence, on the ground that the loss would not have occurred if C. had been called upon to account as he ought to have been. It appeared that no negligence could be imputed to the guardians, but there appeared some ground to believe that if the overseers of the parish of N. had discharged their statutory duties with reasonable care the loss would not have occurred:—Held: pltf. were entitled to recover from deft. the moneys lost through failure of C. to collect them, for there had been no negligence on the part of pltf., & they were not answerable for the negligence of the overseers.—MANSFIELD UNION GUARDIANS v. The clerk sent the resolution for the approval of the Local Government Board, but, intentionally & without the knowledge of the guardians, omitted the last portion of it. The increase was sanctioned, & the clerk received the larger salary & payments in respect of elections for some years before the omission was discovered:—Held: the clerk had not duly & faithfully discharged the duties of his office, & as the resolution passed by the guardians had never been approved by the Local Government Board, the payments in excess of the old salary were ultra vires, & pltf. were entitled to recover under the policy of guarantee. BRAMLEY UNION GUARDIANS v. 1477. Sale of security—Within terms of pledge.]—A. drew five bills in favour of B. on F. & Co., who accepted the same, & got them discounted by the Bank of Bengal, & on their becoming due procured their renewal. F. & Co. subsequently drew three bills on the Bank of Bengal; & for securing as well the repayment of the principal sum due on these bills & interest, as of all & every sum or sums which the bank had already advanced or should advance on account of the drawers, deposited as collateral securities various quantities of Chili copper, of a larger amount in value than the advances then made. By a condition in these bills, the bank were authorised, in default of payment within the time stipulated, to dispose of the copper by public or private sale, & to reimburse themselves the principal & interest due thereon. Shortly afterwards, F. & Co. failed, & assignees of their estate & effects were appointed under 9 Geo. 4 (c. 73). On presentation to A. of the first of the renewed bills, he served notice on the bank not to part with the securities so deposited with them, alleging that the bills drawn & renewed by him were accommodation bills for which he had not received any consideration, & were renewed on the faith of the securities being applicable to their discharge. The assignees of F. & Co. redeemed the copper by paying to the bank the amount of the principal & interest due upon the bills drawn by F. & Co. All the bills drawn by A. were dishonoured, & the Bank of Bengal brought an action against A. for their amount. On a bill filed by A., the bank were restrained by injunction from proceeding with the action at law. On appeal: Held: discharging the injunction, the redemption of the securities was a sale within the condition contained in the deposit bills, & such sale was not a release to A. as surety for the previous bills, the condition not being that the copper or the proceeds thereof should be applied preferentially or pari passu with the other debts, but simply in reimbursement to the bank, of the principal & interest due upon the bills.—*BANK OF BENGAL v. 1478. Sale of mortgaged property—Within term of mortgage deed.]—Aplts. having become sureties on the faith of a mtge. granted by the principal debtor to his creditor, claimed to be released wholly or pro tanto from liability on the ground that creditor had without notice to them sold parts of the mtged. property in a manner unwarranted by the terms of the mtge. deed, & that inasmuch as the purchaser had failed to pay the price, they had been deprived of the benefit of a security upon which they were entitled to rely for protection:—Held: on the evidence the sale was effected by the mtgor., although with the previous consent of the mtgee., in the due course of his management & in a manner contemplated by the mtge. deed, & the liability of the sureties was not affected thereby.—TAYLOR v. BANK OF NEW SOUTH WALES (1886), 11 App. Cas. 596; 55 L. J. P. C. 47; 55 L. T. 444; 2 T. L. R. 742, P. C.

1479. Assignment of security by mortgagee—Without notice to surety.]—A brother & sister entitled in moieties to a reversionary interest in a fund in ct. mortgaged it to secure a debt of the brother, the sister joining, & being described in the security as a surety for the brother. The mtgee. obtained a stop order, & afterwards on his marriage assigned the mtge. debt to trustees, who however neither obtained a stop order nor gave notice to the sister of the settlement. On a petition of the brother stating that the tenant for life had assigned to him her life interest in his share of the fund, & that he had paid a portion of the mtge. debt, & praying for a transfer of his share of the fund, a solr. who had acted for the sister & for the mtgee. on the occasion of the mtge., took upon himself without authority to instruct counsel to appear for the sister & her husband, & also for the mtgee., who was abroad, & to consent to or not oppose the petition. Upon the hearing of this petition the fund was ordered to be, & was transferred out of ct.: Held: neither the omission of the trustees to obtain a stop order, nor any of the above circumstances, operated to discharge the liability of the surety's share, but it continued subject to the payment of the mtge. debt.

The creditor enters into no contract with the surety not to assign the debt or the securities. The law gives him the right to assign them. Subsequently Z. lent B. the title deeds to enable him to come to an arrangement with A. his surety, as to paying off the amount of the bond, on an undertaking to return them to Z. which he had done: Held: this was not such a dealing with the principal as discharged the surety from the debt & interest due on the bond.—*BUSHELL v. P. failed to pay the premiums on the policy, which in consequence lapsed. Subsequently to the expiry of the policy P. became bkpt., & plff. proved against P.'s estate for the whole amount of the debt due to her, without putting any value on the policy, which was consequently ordered by the Ct. of Bkpey. to be delivered up to the trustee. The question was whether plff., by adopting that course, had discharged deft. from his liability as surety:—Held: she had not, & for two reasons: first, that deft.'s position had not been altered by the surrender of the policy

1513. — Alleged misapprehension—As to capacity in which executed—Legal effect of deed.]—Declaration on a guarantee by deft. for payment of goods, supplied by pltf.s. to J. Plea, that after J. became indebted to pltf.s., J. being also indebted to other persons, by an indenture between J. of the first part; E. & B. (one of pltf.s.) trustees, for themselves & the rest of the creditors, of the second part; & the several other persons whose names & seals were thereunto subscribed & set, being creditors of J. of the third part; after reciting that J. was indebted to the parties thereto of the second & third parts, in the several sums set opposite to their names in the schedule thereunder written which he was unable to pay in full; it was witnessed, that J. assigned all his estate & effects to the said trustees upon trust to pay ratably & without preference to themselves & their partners & the parties thereto of the third part, the sums set opposite their names in the schedule; & in consideration of the assignment the several creditors, parties thereto of the second & third parts, released J. from all debts which they or their partners might have against J. up to the date thereof. Replication on equitable grounds: that B. executed the deed in his character of trustee, & not in his character of creditor, & that he did so merely for the purpose of declaring the trusts of the deed, & not with any intention of releasing the debt; that he did not sign or seal the schedule nor was the debt of pltf.s. contained therein; & that if the deed operated in law as a release, it was executed by mistake, & in ignorance that such would be its legal effect. On demurrer to the replication:—Held: the release being general in its terms, the execution of the deed by B. operated as an extinguishment of the debt due to pltf.s.; & the facts disclosed by the replication did not afford any answer to the plea on equitable grounds.—*TREDE v. the benefit of his creditors "in like manner" as if J. had been adjudged bkpt.; & each of the creditors released J. from his debts "in like manner as if he had obtained a discharge in bkpcy."; & that pltf. executed this deed without the consent of deft. 1515. — Winding up of company—Scheme of arrangement.]—A scheme of arrangement sanctioned by the 1870 (c. 104), is an alternative mode of liquidation which the law allows the statutory majority of creditors to substitute for the winding up, whether voluntary or under the ct., & it is by operation of law that the scheme becomes effective to relieve the co. & its contributories from further liability than that which is contemplated or imposed by the scheme; their discharge being effected by the stay of actions imposed by Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), s. 87, after a winding-up or supervision order, & by an order to stay under sect. 138 of the same Act in the case of a voluntary winding up coupled with the stay of the winding-up proceedings excepting so far as necessary for carrying out the scheme. It is, therefore, unnecessary to insert in the scheme a reservation of the rights of sureties for the co.'s debts, or to insert in the order sanctioning it, at all events in a winding-up by order or under supervision of the ct., any express words staying proceedings by creditors, or discharging contributories from further liability than that imposed by the scheme.

Where the scheme contemplates the formation of a new co. to take over the assets of the liquidating co., & shareholders in the old co. are allowed to take shares, not fully paid up, in the new co. in respect of shares as to which they are liable in the winding up, the ct. may, as a condition of sanctioning the scheme, require the insertion, in the memorandum of assocn. of the new co., of a clause preventing them from escaping liability by transferring their new shares.—Re LONDON CHARTERED BANK OF AUSTRALIA, [1893] 3 Ch. 540; 62 L. Subsequently the lessor demanded from pltf. the half-year's rent accruing after the bkpty. Pltf. paid the rent & brought an action to recover the amount from deft. under his covenant. Neither pltf. nor deft. had entered upon or taken possession of the farm :—Held : pltf. was entitled to recover, on the ground that the disclaimer operated only as a surrender so far as was necessary to relieve the bkpt., his estate, & the trustee, from liability without otherwise affecting third parties, & that pltf. as lessee remained liable for the rent & had his remedy over against deft. as the bkpt.'s surety.—*HARDING v. Act, 1861 (c. 131), s. 192, inasmuch as the covenant by deft. was not unreasonable, & notwithstanding the proviso reserving remedies against sureties the deed was pleadable in bar.

This deed has the same effect as a contract which releases the principal & not the surety. It amounts to a covenant not to sue the debtor (SHEP, J.).—KEYES v. ELKINS (1861), 5 B. & S. 210; 5 New Rep. 218; 34 L. J. Q. B. 25; 11 L. T. 471; 11 Jur. N. S. 111; 13 W. R. 180; 122 E. R. 820.

1528. ————.]—BATESON v. GOSLING, No. 1553, post.

1529. ————.]—In Mar. 1885, W., a son of testator, entered into a contract for the purchase of a business for £1,500, of which £300 was to be paid at once & the residue by instalments, to be secured by the joint & several promissory notes of W. & testator. W. had no property of his own, & testator, who was not a party to the contract, paid the £300, & he & W. gave their joint & several promissory notes to the vendor for the instalments. Testator paid the amount due on the first promissory note, but died before any of the others became due, having by his will, dated in Oct. 1885, given benefits to his sons, & declared that before any of them should participate under his will they should repay all sums of money advanced to them during his lifetime, & if unable to do so "such advances" should be taken as part of their shares under the will. Shortly after testator's death W. executed a creditors' deed, whereby he assigned all his property for the benefit of his creditors, & the creditors released him but reserved their rights as against his sureties. Nothing further having been paid in respect of the purchase-money, the vendor proved under the deed for the whole balance secured by the remaining promissory notes, & failing to obtain payment, carried in a claim against the estate of testator, & the exors. paid the amount less a discount:—Held: the contract for purchase being a contract by the son alone, the giving of the joint & several promissory notes by testator was not in the nature of an advancement by testator in favour of his son W., but merely placed testator in the position of a surety for W. the principal, & the exors. of testator having paid the amounts of the promissory notes falling due after his death, were entitled to elect whether they would recover against the principal debtor under the agreement arising out of the suretyship, in which case they would be entitled to be paid or retain out of the income of W.'s share, or whether they would stand in the place of the vendor, the principal creditor, whom they had paid; but in the latter case they must give up their right of retainer.

It is quite clear that the release contained in the deed was not an absolute release so far as the surety was concerned, but only operated as a covenant not to sue between the principal creditor & the debtor. The surety was not released by the execution of that deed (STIRLING, J.).—Re WHITEHOUSE, WHITEHOUSE v. EDWARDS (1887), 37 Ch. D. 683; 57 L. J. Ch. 101; 57 L. T. 761; 36 W. R. 181.

1534. ————.]—A simple release by a creditor given to a debtor discharges all sureties & co-debtors, & it is therefore, in general, inexpedient to insert a simple release in a composition deed. But a covenant not to sue the debtor, except in so far as may be necessary for the purpose of enforcing remedies against others, only bars the covenantor from suing for himself, but does not discharge sureties or co-contractors. 1546. When surety liable—Debtor compounding with creditors.]—Assumpsit* on a written guarantee given to plffs. for goods to be supplied by them to one G. to the extent of £100. The guarantee provided that plffs. were to have full liberty to extend the period of credit to G., & to hold over or renew bills, notes, or other securities given by him, " & to grant to G. & the persons liable upon such bills, notes, or securities, any indulgence, & to compound with him or them respectively, as plffs. might think fit, without the same discharging or in any manner affecting the liability of deft. by virtue of the guarantee." The declaration then averred the supply of goods exceeding the guarantee, of which sum £168 was unpaid by G., of which deft. had notice, & was requested to pay that sum, but had not done so. Plea, that after the debt was incurred by G., & before action brought, plffs. became parties to a composition deed between G. & his creditors, whereby he assigned all his stock-in-trade, etc., for the benefit of his creditors; & that, in consideration thereof, plffs. & the other creditors, parties thereto, granted a general release to G. of all debts & demands against him. The plea then averred, that the promise in the declaration was only made by deft. as surety, & that plffs., by the deed, released G. without the privity of deft., & without notice: Held: on demurrer, under the express terms of the guarantee, the security was not discharged by the release of the principal debtor.—*COWPER v. 1549. — — — — —]—In 1903 P. as surety executed mtges. of certain property of his own to a bank to secure the overdraft of P. Brothers, a firm in which he was not a partner. The mtge. deeds all contained a provision that the bank should be at liberty without affecting their rights under the mtges., among other things, "to vary, exchange, or release any other securities held or to be held by the bank for or on account of the moneys thereby secured or any part thereof" . . . "& to compound with, give time for payment of, & accept compositions from & make any arrangements with the debtors or any of them."

In 1908 P. Brothers, being insolvent, called their creditors together, & a scheme was arranged whereby a co. was formed who should take over certain properties of the firm for realisation & should issue debentures to the creditors at the rate of 25s. for each £1 of their debts in full discharge thereof. The bank in accordance with this scheme applied for debenture stock on a form which contained an express agreement by the appts. to accept such debenture stock in full discharge of all their claims against P. Brothers. The amount of the debt in respect of which debenture stock was to be issued was £1,000. This amount was arrived at by deducting from the total debt due to the bank £160 the value put upon securities held by them on the property of the firm; but no deduction was made on account of P.'s mtges. The interest on the debenture stock not having been paid, the bank threatened to sell the property comprised in P.'s mtges. In an action by P. for reconveyance of the mtgd. property on the footing that nothing was due on the mtge.: Held: (1) as to the £1,000 the debt was completely discharged & the surety's property was released; (2) as to the £1,630, the debt remained unpaid, although the principal debtor was released; consequently by the express terms of the mtge. deeds the surety's property continued liable.—*PERRY v. 1559. — Knowledge of all creditors—Necessity for.—[Covenant. The declaration alleged, that debt. by certain articles of agreement under seal, which recited that one R. had opened an account with pltf., a banking co., covenanted & agreed to guarantee & be accountable for the due payment of all sums of money which then were or thereafter should become due to pltf. from R. by reason of any money, etc., then advanced or owing, or thereafter to be advanced or owing on the banking account from the said R. stating that such guarantee was limited to £500, & was to be a continuing guarantee, & providing that in case of bkpey. or insolvency, not only the £500 should be paid to pltf. by debt. but that pltf. should be at liberty to apply the whole of the dividends receivable on their whole debt in discharge of the part not guaranteed; that the sum of £500 13s. 4d. became & was & still is due upon the advance of moneys by pltf. to R., yet that R. did not pay the same, & thereby debt. became liable to pay the sum of £500, the amount of his guarantee. To this debt. pleaded, secondly, that no part of the sum of £500 13s. 4d. was due or owing from the said R. to pltf. on the said banking account, modo et forma. Another plea was, that, after the accruing of the debt of R. to pltf., he was indebted to them in £1,100, of which the sum of £500 13s. 4d. was parcel, & was also indebted to other persons in large sums of money, & was in bad & insolvent circumstances & unable to pay pltf. & his other creditors their debts in full, & that thereupon he agreed with pltf. & his other creditors to pay, & pltf. & the other creditors mutually agreed with each other and with the said R. to accept from him a composition of 10s. 6d. in the pound, as a composition in full discharge of the said respective debts; & the plea then stated the payment by R. of the composition to pltf. Replication, that pltf. entered into the composition with the knowledge of debt., & upon the agreement that it should not discharge debt. from his liability upon the guarantee; which was denied by the rejoinder. At the trial, the facts stated in the replication were found by the jury, & the judge told them that under those circumstances they ought also to find the second issue for pltf., which they accordingly did: Held: the second plea amounted to a denial that there was any originally existing debt. & not of a debt being due at the commencement of the suit, & on a rule to arrest the judgment, the replication to the fourth plea was good, inasmuch as it did not appear that the reservation of pltf.' rights against debt. was unknown to the other creditors.—*DAVIDSON v. (1) A creditor whose debt is secured by a warrant of attorney, having received promissory notes from the debtor & two sureties, & afterwards entered up judgment & taken the goods of the debtor, & without the knowledge of the sureties, withdrawn the execution, has discharged the sureties; but a subsequent promise to pay the debt by one surety, knowing that the execution has been withdrawn, renews his liability.

If a creditor, having given time to the debtor primarily liable, makes a demand on one who is secondarily liable, & receives a promise from him, that is sufficient to sustain the demand, not as the creation of a new, but as the revival of an old, debt (LORD ELDON, C.).

(2) Right of contribution between co-sureties, whether by separate instruments, or by the same instrument.

The fact that the liability arises on separate instruments affords no distinction as to the rights of contribution between the sureties. That law was so settled by Deering v. Winchelsea (Earl), No. 1050, ante (LORD ELDON, C.).

(3) When one surety has been discharged the co-surety is entitled to say to the creditor asserting a claim against him. You have discharged a surety from whom I might have compelled contribution (LORD ELDON, C.).

A bank proved in the liquidation of A. for a debt of £5,600 which they claimed from him, & afterwards sued for the same debt S., who had given them a guarantee of £1,000 on behalf of A., & whom they alleged to have been a partner with A. S. denied the partnership, & ultimately a compromise was entered into between him & the bank, by which the bank were to receive £2,800 in satisfaction of their claim against him & against another person who had given another guarantee on behalf of A. The guarantee of S. was given up to him, with a receipt indorsed upon it by the bank, expressed to be for £1,000, “in payment & discharge of the within guarantee, & also of all claims against him in reference to or in connection with” A.’s firm:—Held: assuming S. to have been a partner with A., this receipt did not operate as a release of S., & the bank were entitled to maintain their proof.

The rule that a release of one joint debtor operates to release the other also is founded upon the fact that the second would, if he were sued by the creditor, have a right to enforce contribution from the first. The rule, therefore, does not apply to a release of a merely ostensible partner, between whom & the person with whom he has held himself out to be a partner, no such right of contribution exists (BACON, C.J.).—*Re ARMITAGE, Ex p. 1578. — Judgment debt.—A. & B. became liable on a "joint & several" guarantee to a bank for a sum of £6,000 owing to the bank from a co. Subsequently the bank obtained judgment for that sum against A. & B. "jointly & severally." The judgment not being satisfied, the bank presented a bkpcy. petition against B. alone for the whole judgment debt, but the petition was withdrawn upon terms arranged between B. & the bank & embodied in a receipt given to B. by the bank for £3,000 partly in cash & partly in bills paid & given by B. "in full discharge of all claims by the bank against B. in connection with the co., & all guarantees given by him to the bank in connection with that co., & in settlement of any outstanding questions as to the amount due to the bank." The bank then presented a bkpcy. petition against A. alone for £3,000, the alleged "balance" of the judgment debt of £6,000:—Held: the receipt amounted to an accord & satisfaction equivalent to a release of B. from the entire joint & several judgment debt, there being no surrounding circumstances qualifying its effect as an absolute release in terms, & consequently by reason of the release of A.'s co-debtor there was no debt to support bkpcy. proceedings against A.

The rule of law that the release of one of two joint debtors under a joint & several obligation operates as a release of the other applies as much to a judgment debt as to any other obligation.—Re E. The contract remaining entire, the surety in order to escape liability must show an existing right to contribution from his co-surety which has been taken away or injuriously affected by his release:—Held: in an action upon a guarantee, a plea to the effect that M. was the deft.'s co-surety, & had been released in consideration of a new guarantee given to pltf., constituted no defence: the plea nowhere averring or implying that the liability was joint, or that deft. became surety on the faith of M.'s co-suretyship, or that any right of contribution had arisen against M. which had been taken away or injuriously affected or that deft. had suffered any damage or injury by the substitution described.

One of the conditions indorsed was, that all guarantees, whatever might be the original term, should, from the expiration of such original term, be treated as a renewed contract of the like nature & conditions, unless either the member interested therein or the board of directors should give two calendar months' notice of an intention not to renew the same:—Held: the renewed contract was not itself to be deemed to contain this particular condition as to renewal, & therefore, even in the absence of notice, the contract did not extend beyond one renewal.

(2) The agreement was signed by three directors, on behalf of the co., & by defts., & also sealed with the co.'s seal: Held: the seal was only a statutory authentication of the contract, & the instrument declared on was therefore not a deed, & consequently the agreement might be rescinded by parol.—*SOLVENCY MUTUAL GUARANTEE CO. v. In 1913, the bank, without notice to the guarantors but with the assent of the debtor, increased the rate of interest upon the advances to 8 per cent., though by the Bank Act it was illegal for a bank to charge more than 7 per cent. Subsequently one of the signatories died & his exors. gave notice purporting to terminate the liability of the estate of deceased under the guarantee:—Held: (1) the guarantee remained in force against all the guarantors until each & all of them or their respective exors. or administrators, gave notice to determine it; (2) the increase in the rate of interest did not discharge the guarantors, but they were liable for the principal sum advanced & for such interest as the debtor was legally liable to pay.—*EGBERT v. P., as such partner as aforesaid, to W. C. & E. W. C." then the obligation to be void, etc.

By the deed, referred to in the condition, & dated Jan. 1, 1830, it appeared that the partnership was to continue up to July 1, 1841; & it was covenanted, that on Mar. 1, 1831, & so in every year "during that co-partnership," the parties to the deed should meet & state a true account in writing concerning the joint stock, debts, & effects of the co-partnership, & enter the true particulars of such yearly account, & the rest & balance thereof, in three several books, & that on the allowance & approval of such account yearly, the parties should sign their names in each of the books at the foot of the account, which account, so stated, settled, & subscribed, should be final & conclusive, unless afterwards found in error to the amount of £20 & upwards.

The deed also contained a stipulation, enabling any of the parties thereto, their exors. & administrators, if they should be minded, to quit that co-partnership at the end of the seventh year of the co-partnership, upon giving to the other partners twelve calendar months' notice in writing of his intention, & then that that indenture of co-partnership & every covenant should determine as to the party giving the notice, except as regarded a valuation of his share, etc.

The deed subsequently contained a stipulation that any of the partners in the joint trade or business should be at liberty to transfer, in his lifetime, his share to any son, & to dispose of his share by will, & that the son, or person to whom the disposition should be made, or in the case of the death of a partner without such transfer or disposition, then the exor. or administrator of such partner should be deemed & considered a partner in the joint concern during the then residue thereof, subject to the stipulations & provisions of the partnership deed:—Held: upon the construction of the condition of the bond, & having reference in its construction to the language & covenants of the deed, that the obligation of the surety did not extend to any time beyond the carrying on of the said trade by "the co-partnership," viz. W. C., E. W. C., & W. P., & therefore, the surety was not liable for any false accounts rendered by W. P. after the death of W. C., although the business had been carried on after his death without the addition of a new partner.—CHAPMAN v. BECKINTON

1618. — Annuity bond—Valuation of annuity on debtor's bankruptcy—Valuation unpaid in full at decease.—A. executed an annuity deed, with sureties for payment of an annuity to B. during A.'s life. A. became bkpt. & the annuity was valued. The sureties continued to pay the annuity regularly until A. died. At that time the amount which the sureties had paid was less than the amount of the valuation. The sureties were discharged from further payment, & B. had no further claim.

The words of [6 Geo. 4, c. 16] s. 55, render the sureties liable to be sued for the accruing payments of the annuity, but if the principal be dead, there are no accruing payments (ERLE, J.).

It would be strange if the annuitant should be entitled to receive more because his debtor becomes bkpt. The effect of the sect. is to give the sureties an option either to pay the valuation of the annuity at once, or to continue to pay the annuity until that valuation & 4 per cent. interest on the money is made up (PATTERSON, J.).—*DALTON v. (2) After the death of A. the bank continued as before its dealings with the partnership, then constituted by B. & C.; & at a certain period, payments made to the bank entirely balanced the debt due to it at the time of A.'s death:—Held: the separate liability of A.'s estates was thereby discharged.

(3) B., the son & heir of A., within one year after his father's death, gave to the bank a heritable bond over his father's estates, for securing payment of advances to be made by the bank:—Held: this was a bond for his own & not for his father's debts, & was consequently void under Scottish Act of 1661, as a bond granted by the heir within one year of the ancestor's death.—*ROYAL BANK OF SCOTLAND v. W. & W. J. Hall, shipbuilders, I hereby guarantee the payment to you of the moneys that at any time may become due not exceeding $5,000":—Held: the guarantee ceased on the death of one of the partners, as a contrary intention did not appear by express stipulation, or by necessary implication from the nature of the firm or otherwise.—*BACKHOUSE v. ### SECT. 2. - DUTY OF CREDITOR.

1657. Duty to inquire—Where suspicion of fraud.—(1) Though a creditor may not, in every case, be bound to inquire into the circumstances under which a third person becomes surety to him, he is so when the dealings between the parties are such as to lead to a suspicion of fraud.

(2) It is a general rule that a creditor may give time to a principal debtor without prejudicing his right against the surety, provided he expressly reserves such right. Circumstances may, however, prevent that rule from having effect.—OWEN & GUTCH v. HOMAN (1853), 4 H. L. Cas. 997; 1

1658. Debtor & surety engaged to marry—Independent advice for surety.—When a man obtains, without consideration, a security from a lady to whom he is engaged to be married, the ct. requires him to show the bona fides of the transaction.

A debtor induced a lady, to whom he was engaged, to become security for a debt. After the marriage, she insisted that she had been imposed upon:—Held: the only duty of the creditor, who was aware of the relation between the parties, towards the lady was to see that she had proper professional assistance, & any fraud or misrepresentation of the debtor in the transaction, of which the creditor had no notice, did not affect his security.—COBBETT v. BROCK (1855), 20 Beav. 524; 52 E. R. 706; affd., 20 Beav. 531, n., L. J.J.

1659. As to covenant by surety—Mortgage to secure debt.—(1) The principle on which the ct. acts in cases where a fraud is practised on a person borrowing money, & the lender has notice of that fraud, cannot be extended to cases where there is either an absence of fraud or an absence of all notice of fraud. When a solr. who already owes money proposes a mtgc. & a personal covenant for payment by a client who is known by the creditor to be a trustee for him, & there is no reason to suspect fraud by the solr., it is no part of the creditor's duty to interpose between the solr. & client, & ascertain from the latter that all the facts are known to him, & that he understands what he is about to do. Nor is it equivalent to notice of fraud that the instrument recites that the antecedent debt of the solr. is a loan made to the trustee at the date of the mtgc.

(2) A surety can only be relieved against his contract where misrepresentations have been made or facts concealed by the creditor which it was incumbent on him truly to disclose.—GREENFIELD v. EDWARDS (1865), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 582; 12 L. T. 411; 11 Jur. N. S. 419; 13 W. R. 668; 46 E. R. 501, L. J.J.

Deft. was aware of F.'s financial position & of his indebtedness to B. B., B.'s solr., F., & deft. were the only persons present when the guarantee was signed, & deft. had no independent advice. The guarantee, a very complicated document, was twice read over by the solr., who suggested to B. that deft. should be separately represented:—Held: (1) deft. did not sufficiently understand the nature of the guarantee; (2) the relationship of husband & wife was one where in the case of a large voluntary benefit influence was presumed to exist; (3) the transaction being challenged, the burden was on the donee to prove that the giving of the guarantee was free from the influence of the husband, & in the absence of independent advice, this had not been discharged; (4) B. was sufficiently put on inquiry to be affected with the equitable flaws in the transaction.—*BISCHOFF'S TRUSTEE v. If the person taking the indemnity does either by the frame of the instrument or by any representations made to the surety or in any other manner mislead the surety as to the effect of it or occasion his misapprehending it . . . or if he knows or has reason to believe that the surety misapprehends the nature or effect of the instrument & allows him to execute it without removing such apprehension in any such cases a ct. of equity would interfere to prevent any advantage being taken (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).

having fallen in value, the time was extended to a further period on the deposit of additional shares & the acceptance of A.'s brother B. to the amount of £2,000. Before the loan became due in pursuance of the terms of this second arrangement B. applied to pltf.s. to be released from his acceptance on procuring the guarantee of deft. & three others for £500 each. Pltf.s. assented to this arrangement. A. then informed deft. of the loan & of its terms, & told him that, unless he could procure security, his shares would be sold at a great loss; but the arrangement as to the withdrawal of B.'s acceptance was not communicated to deft., & he was wholly ignorant of it. Dft. executed a guarantee, which did not refer to B.'s acceptance for £2,000, but recited the consideration for the guarantee to be the original loan, of pltf.'s agreeing not to require any further security in the event of the depreciation of the shares as provided for by the original agreement. & H. as his surety, gave pltf. a bond for £300, & C. gave his separate bond for £125. To an action on the bond, H. pleaded that it was obtained by the fraud of pltf.:—Held: to support this plea, H. was bound to show that R. who prepared the bond, knew & agreed that H. should be kept in ignorance of C.'s further liability for the £125.—SPENCER v. It turned out that the property was charged with another incumbrance, of which C. had no actual knowledge, A. having forgotten that it existed:—Held: C. was discharged from his liability as surety.—WILLIS v. 1673. Dangerous nature of cargo—Sale of ship—Guarantee for purchase-money.—Deft. R. agreed to sell two steamships to the A. D. Steam Navigation Co., of which pltf.s. were two of the directors, & it was agreed that the purchase-money should be paid partly in shares & partly in bills of exchange accepted by the co., & the vessels should be mortgaged to R. to secure the remainder of the purchase-money. Pltf.s. then agreed to indorse certain of the bills, & in consideration of that guarantee, R. agreed that they should be owners of two-thirds of the property mortgaged. The vessels were never formally transferred to the co., & no mtge. was ever executed, but soon after the agreement R., acting as agent of his own firm, & assuming to act as agent of the co., dispatched the vessels to Constantinople, & thence dispatched one of them to Trebizond, laden with munitions of war for the Circassians, who were then at war with Russia:—Held: as the dangerous nature of the cargo, which exposed the vessel to extraordinary risk, was concealed from the company by R., he could not have enforced the agreement against the co., & pltf.s. were entitled to be relieved from their liability.—BURKE v. ROGERSON (1866), 14 L. T. 780; 12 Jur. N. S. 635; 2 Mar. L. C. 375, L. J. J.

1674. Circumstances affecting principal debtor—Surety for a surety—Rate of interest on original loan.—On the application of applt., respnt. an underwriter at Lloyd's, underwrote an instrument in the form of a policy whereby he guaranteed the solvency of a person who was surety for the repayment by the borrower of money lent by applt. Resp. made no inquiry as to the rate of interest payable by the borrower or as to the circumstances of the loan, & no information was given to him on those points. In fact the interest was over 30 per cent. & the borrower was unable to repay the loan. In an action on the policy the jury found that the transaction was not one of exceptional risk:—Held: the non-disclosure of the rate of interest & the circumstances of the loan did not constitute a defence, there being no evidence that those facts were material to the only risk undertaken by respnt., namely, the solvency of the surety.—SEATON v. It further appeared that the agent of the maker had represented to pltf. before he signed the agreement that deft. would continue liable for the residue of the debt secured by the note, & that the agreement would be void unless all the creditors signed:—Held: the execution of this agreement had the effect of discharging the surety; any private bargain the effect of which is to give the creditor an advantage over the others is void (LITTLEDALE, J.). Creditor & third party—Performance of work—If debtor defaults.]—II. contracted with defts. to execute certain sewage works, for which he was to be paid upon the certificate of the surveyor of defts. On the same date II. as principal, & pltf., & another as sureties, entered into a bond to defts. for the due performance of the contract on or before a day fixed. II. failed to perform his contract, & became bkpt., & defts. then began an action against pltf. to enforce the penalty under the bond.

Before the contract with II. defts. had entered into an agreement with a large owner of property in the neighbourhood, that the works should be executed at their joint expense, under the joint superintendence & control of his & their surveyor; but this agreement was never communicated either to II. or to pltf. On the failure of II. the works were placed in the hands of the landowner. Pltf. filed his bill against the above-named defts. only, to restrain prosecution of the action, & the judge awarded an injunction on the ground that the concealment of the last-mentioned contract was a circumstance which exonerated pltf. from all liability:—Held: as the landowner, who was virtually pltf. in the action was not a party to the suit, & as the fact of the concealment could be raised by the pltf. for his defence at law, the injunction must be dissolved.—STIFF v. 1886. — Commission agent—Concealment undue but not wilful.—More non-communication of circumstances affecting the situation of the parties, material for the surety to be acquainted with, & within the knowledge of the person obtaining a surety bond, is undue concealment, though not wilful or intentional, or with a view to any advantage to himself.

A party became surety in a bond for the fidelity of a commission agent to his employers. After some time the employers discovered irregularities in the agent's accounts, & put the bond in suit. The surety then instituted a suit to avoid the bond, on the ground of concealment by the employers of material circumstances affecting the agent's credit prior to the date of the bond, & which, if communicated to the surety, would have prevented him from undertaking the obligation. On the trial of an issue whether the surety was induced to sign the bond by undue concealment or deception on the part of the employers, the presiding judge directed the jury, that the concealment, to be undue, must be wilful & intentional with a view to the advantages the employers were thereby to gain:—Held: the direction was wrong in point of law.—RAITTON v. (2) Distinction between suretyship of the fidelity of a servant & a guarantee in respect of a banking account discussed.

There is a wide distinction between a case like the present & the cases which have been cited of guarantees for overdrafts given to bankers. Dishonesty may occur & the guarantee is given to ensure against the chance, but the guarantees for overdrafts are required for the purpose & not on the chance of being used . . . the surety may well complain "I did not know that your servant was a thief," but he cannot be heard to complain "I did not know that your customer had been overdrawn his account" (FARWELL, L.J.).—LONDON GENERAL OMNIBUS CO., LTD. v. 1693. Existing debt—Relieving officer—No necessary imputation of misconduct.]—In an action against the surety on a bond conditioned for the faithful discharges of the duties of a relieving officer, deft. pleaded & proved that at the time of the execution of the bond there was a balance of £206 due from the principal, in respect of money which had been received by him as relieving officer, & that that fact was not communicated to him:—Held: as the existence of that balance did not necessarily involve any imputation of misconduct against the relieving officer, it was not a material fact which the guardians were bound to communicate to the surety before he executed the bond.—*STOKESLEY UNION GUARDIANS v. P. having fallen in arrear to the extent of £1,272, plffs. required him to find security to the amount of £300, & at his request deft. consented to guarantee £100. The agreement of guarantee recited the terms of dealing between plffs. & P.; but the fact that P. was already indebted to plffs. in the large sum above mentioned was concealed from the sureties. In an action against deft. upon the agreement, he pleaded that he was induced to make it by the fraudulent concealment by plffs. of a material fact:—Held: the non-communication by plffs. to deft. of the fact that P. was at the time indebted to them, was evidence for the jury in support of the plea.—*LEE v. #### D. Banking Guarantees.

1696. Previous debt—Due to bank—No inquiry by surety.]—A surety is not of necessity entitled to receive, without inquiry, from the party to whom he is about to bind himself, a full disclosure of all the circumstances of the dealings between the principal & that party. If he requires to know any particular matter, of which the party about to receive the security is informed, he must make it the subject of a distinct inquiry.

An obligation to a banker by a third party to be responsible for a cash credit to be given to one of the banker's customers, is not avoided by the fact, that, immediately after the execution of the obligation, the cash credit is employed to pay off an old debt due to the banker.

If the surety intends to rely upon such a fact for his defence, as showing that there was a previous agreement between the banker & the customer to deal with the credit in a particular manner, to which he, if he had known it, should not have consented, he must bring such a defence before the ct. by putting it on the record.—*HAMILTON v. M. & S. being trustees of a fund, sold it, with consent of B., the cestui que trust, & thereby raised the loan for M., who informed W. that B. was the lender, but did not inform her how the loan was raised:—Held: B. not being in fact the lender, his personal representatives had no privity of contract with, nor equities against, W., & in consequence of the concealment from her of the real nature of the transaction, she was, in equity, altogether released from the bond.—*SQUIRE v. 1713. As to nature of transaction—Discharged guarantee bond—Fraudulently offered as security—For debt unknown to surety.—A., together with B. & C. as his sureties, executed a bond to D. for securing £300 & interest; the debt is paid by C. with the proper money of A.; but C. neglects delivering up the bond to A. to be cancelled. C. afterwards procures this bond to be assigned as a collateral security for a debt of his own:—Held: this assignment was a gross fraud in C. & a perpetual injunction was granted to restrain all further proceedings upon the bond.—*MAY v. 1715. — Bond held out as temporary security only.—In an action on a bond on the plea of fraud, & an equitable plea to the effect that the bond was executed on an advance of money to one of the obligors, on the faith of an agreement that there should be a mtge. by way of security, & that the bond should be only a temporary security until the mtge. was executed; the evidence of two out of three obligors, that there was such agreement, & their positive statement that the bond was never read over to them, notwithstanding that the mtge. recited an agreement in writing, which was produced, though not put in, & which they admitted having signed at the time the bond was executed:—Held: evidence to go to the jury in support of the pleas, & upon the whole of the evidence, the question was, whether deft. executed the bond on the faith of a false representation as to nature & effect of the bond. But pltf. having been called, & having put in the written agreement, which was for a bond as well as mtge., the verdict for deft. was set aside as against evidence.—SMITH v. WINDER (1858), 1 F. & F. 95, N. P.

1716. — Signature to character reference.—Deft. was induced to sign a guarantee by the fraudulent representation that he was signing a reference. In an action against him on the guarantee the jury were directed that pltf. were entitled to a verdict unless they were satisfied that deft. was cheated out of his signature by misrepresentation, & that he in signing it was not guilty of negligence. The co. intended to prosecute, but pending negotiations for the contract counsel advised them that no crime had been committed:—Held: the agreement was void on three grounds—first, that the co. had not disclosed the fact that they had abandoned their intention; secondly, that it was against public policy as being an agreement to stifle a public prosecution; thirdly, that it was made under pressure.—*DAVIES v. 1722. — Promissory note.—Pltf., whose whole income was derived from a life estate in property producing about £195 per annum, in 1857, when she was twenty years old, under pressure put upon her by her stepfather, who was one of her guardians, & with whom she resided, joined him in signing a joint & several promissory note for £150, being £100 already due from him to deft., & a further advance of £50, with interest thereon. In 1859, also under pressure exercised by her stepfather, she signed a bond, for the payment in Sept. 1865, of £600, the amount then due to deft. in respect of the former loan, together with interest thereon in the meantime. In 1866 deft. recovered judgment against pltf.'s stepfather, but agreed not to issue execution against him if he would get pltf. to execute another bond. Accordingly pltf., who was then twenty-nine years of age, under pressure as before, signed a bond for securing payment to deft. of £705, the amount then due to him in respect of the original loan, together with interest thereon. Pltf. received no consideration for signing the note or the bonds.

1745. Distinguished from maintenance of action.]—Pltfs. & debts. were rival manufacturers of an apparatus for conveying cash from one part of business promises to another. Debts. obtained contracts for the hire of their apparatus from three of pltfs.' customers, who were under contracts to use pltfs.' apparatus at the time, & they agreed to indemnify the customers against any claims by pltfs. against them for breach of contract. Two of these customers were originally customers of debts., & the third gave a contract to pltfs. in the belief that he was dealing with debts. The pltfs. in each case sued the customer for breach of contract & in two instances recovered damages & costs, which debts. paid under their contract of indemnity. Pltf. claimed relief against debts. on the ground of maintenance:—Held: debts. in giving these contracts of indemnity were acting in the legitimate defence of their commercial interests & were not liable for maintenance.

Such contracts [of indemnity] are well known to the law & are in no way offensive to it. They are of the most varied kinds. Sometimes, as in the case of fire insurance or the ordinary forms of marine insurance, the indemnity is against the accidents of life. But frequently the insurance is against claims which may be made by third parties. The whole of the contracts of insurance of employers against claims by employees under Employers' Liability Act & Workmen's Compensation Act are of this kind. . . . Marine insurances against claims arising out of collisions furnish another example. Contracts of re-insurance afford another example. Nothing is more common than

SECT. 2.—HOW RIGHT ARISES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1747. From contract express or implied.—Or from relationship of parties.]—The claim to indemnity mentioned in R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 48, is a claim to indemnity as such, to be enforced either at law or in equity arising from contract express or implied, or possibly by reason of some statutory provision. An implied contract to indemnify may be based either upon an inference of fact to be deduced from the circumstances of any particular case, or upon the obligations caused by the relation subsisting between two parties, e.g. the obligation of a cestui que trust to indemnify his trustee against liability incurred by the trustee as such. A right to damages is not a right to indemnity as such within the rule.

A co. contracted to purchase from B. certain property, subject as they alleged, to three building agreements only, & to the tenants' rights thereunder, & acting in accordance with the provisions of those agreements treated them as determined. That purchase was not completed. In an action brought by the tenants against the co. alleging a further agreement whereby B.'s rights were modified, & that the co. had bought with notice of such agreement, & claiming a declaration that the agreements were still subsisting & consequential relief:—Held: the claim of deft. co. against B., if substantiated, was one for damages only, & an application of the co. to serve B. with a third party notice was refused.

If A. requests B. to do a thing for him, & B. in consequence of his doing that act is subject to some liability or loss. Then in consequence of the request to do the act the law implies a contract by A. to indemnify B. from the consequence of his doing it (COTTON, L.J.).—BIRMINGHAM & DISTRICT LAND CO. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1886), 34 Ch. D. 261; 56 L. J. Ch. 956; 55 L. T. 699; 35 W. R. 173; 3 T. L. R. 179, C. A.

1748. ———.]—Deft. & A. were joint trustees of a settled fund, A. being a member of the firm of solrs. acting in the management of the trust. A. received the proceeds of sale of part of the trust funds as solr. & misapplied them, & the moneys were lost. After the death of A. an action was commenced against deft. as the surviving trustee claiming a declaration that he was liable to pay pltf. the sum so misapplied. Deft. obtained an order under R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 48, for leave to serve a third party notice on the surviving partners of the firm of solrs. claiming to be indemnified against liability in the action:—Held: this was not a claim to indemnify deft. against pltf.'s claim in the action within above rule, the right of deft. to recover from the surviving partners a sum equal to the lost trust fund being an independent right & not one depending on the liability of deft. in the action.*

A right to indemnity may arise under an express or implied contract, or by reason of an obligation resulting from the relation of the parties (CHITTY, J.).—WYNNE v. TEMPEST, [1897] 1 Ch. 110; 66 L. J. Ch. 81; 75 L. T. 624; 45 W. R. 183, 13 T. L. R. 128; 41 Sol. Jo. 127.

1749. ———.]—Though a right of indemnity generally arises by contract, express or implied, it exists whenever the relation between parties is such that either in law or in equity there is an obligation upon one party to indemnify the other.

The owners of a wharf granted applt. co. the right to berth their ships at it subject to payment & liability for any damage caused. Resp., who was managing director of applt. co., gave instructions, without the co.'s authority, that a ship which he himself had chartered for his own benefit should berth at the wharf. Owing to the unskilful way in which the ship was unloaded the wharf collapsed. In an action by the owners of the wharf against applt. co. for damages, they served a third party notice upon resp., & claimed that he should indemnify them against any damages for which they should be held liable. By the rules of ct. applicable, as by R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 48, third party procedure is available "where deft. claims to be entitled to contribution or indemnity over against a person".—Held: applt. co. had a right of indemnity against resp., & were entitled to join him as a third party & obtain relief against him.—EASTERN SHIPPING CO. v. Some of the goods being privileged from distress & claimed by the owner, pltf. required an indemnity which deft. gave on the part of O. & afterwards said he would give a further guarantee. The owners of the privileged goods having sued & recovered against *pltf.*s:—Held: deft. was liable to make good the loss they had sustained. - TOPLIS v. GRANE (1839), 5 Bing. N. 1751. —. —.]—*Pltf.*s. were in possession of certain trucks, which were claimed by deft., & also by the proprietors of the K. colliery. A correspondence took place between *pltf.*s. & deft., in which *pltf.*s. asked for an indemnity if they should deliver up the trucks to deft.. Deft., without giving any answer as to the indemnity, wrote requiring *pltf.*s. to send the trucks back to him, which they thereupon did. The K. colliery proprietors then brought an action against *pltf.*s. for conversion of the trucks, & their claim proving well founded, *pltf.*s. were obliged to pay a sum of money, in settlement of the action, which they sought to recover from deft. upon a contract of indemnity:—Held: there was evidence of an implied promise to indemnify.

The principle upon which in such cases a contract of indemnity is implied is not confined to cases of principal & agent, or employer & employed.—DUGDALE v. LOVERING (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 196; 44 L. J. C. P. 197; 32 L. T. 155; 23 W. R. 391.

The trustees were empowered by the deed to realise or to continue to "hold any or all of such shares or stocks" as might belong to testatrix at her decease "should they consider it advisable or expedient to do so, without any personal responsibility for loss, if any, thereby sustained"; with power also "to lend or place out on such securities heritable or movable as they shall consider advantageous the foresaid legacies of £2,000 & £2,000 respectively the securities to be conceived in favour of my trustees & that for the purposes of this trust & no otherwise." Testatrix at her death held £850 stock of an unlimited bank. The trustees at the desire of A. & without consulting B., set £200 of this stock aside as part of the fund appropriated to Mrs. A. & realised the remainder. They afterwards on the narrative of the purposes of the trust deed & of the sums invested for the two specific legacies of £2,000 & that they had paid the residue, received their discharge from A. & B. Statements & separate accounts of interest on the investments allocated to each were sent half-yearly to A. & B. All the investments stood in the names of testatrix's trustees. The bank became insolvent & calls were made upon the trustees in respect of the £200 stock. They sought to indemnify themselves for payment of the calls out of the whole trust estate. B. objected to any portion of her legacy being taken:—Held: (1) the trustees had the power to sever & had severed the two legacies & had placed them in separate investments for behoof of the respective beneficiaries & therefore the trustees had no right to relief from the investments allotted to B. & her family for liabilities incurred on those allotted to A. & her family.

(2) No doubt any one who requests another to incur a liability which would otherwise have fallen upon himself is, in general, bound at law as well as in equity, to indemnify him; this principle applies to many cases, & where a trust is for the benefit of the maker of the trust it may apply to a trustee (LORD BLACKBURN). - *FRASER v. The architect selected deft. to do the carving work, & the contractor sent him a written order to execute the whole of the carving, the order concluding as follows: "You agree in accepting this order to sign & send per return of post the enclosed accident indemnity." Owing to the negligent navigation of the master, there was a total loss of the cargo, & the holders of the bills of lading recovered damages against the shipowner:—Held: since the contract between the shipowner & the charterers was that the shipowner was not to be liable for the master's negligence, the charterers were bound to indemnify the shipowner against the claims of the holders of the bills of lading.—*KRUGER & CO., LTD. v. During the excavations defts. found that pltf.'s wall required underpinning, & they did the necessary work under the orders of the Comrs.' architect without having first obtained pltf.'s consent. Pltf. brought an action for trespass against defts., & defts. claimed indemnity from the Comrs. as third parties in the event of their being held liable to pltf.:—Held: defts. were liable in damages to pltf., but that as the Comrs.' architect had given defts. an unconditioned order to do the work of underpinning because it was urgent, & which order they were bound to obey, defts. were entitled to indemnity.—*KIRBY v. On special demurrer:—Held: a good declaration; for consideration sufficiently appeared; & it was no objection that pltf.'s disregard of the claim was not shown with sufficient certainty to have been otherwise than an illegal act; or that pltf., consistently with the allegations, might have sold in the mere performance of his duty; or that it was not sufficiently shown that G. recovered solely by being entitled to the goods seized, & not by any irregularity in pltf.'s acts, or how much damage accrued from the selling, how much from the seizing; or that the action in the county ct. was against the sheriff together with pltf.—*ELLISTON v. 1766. General rule.—A. being the owner of a steamship mortgaged it to B., & subsequently, under circumstances held to show acquiescence by B., entered into an agreement in contemplation of a partnership with C., by the terms of which C. was to work the ship for A. till further notice, paying all the expenses & receiving all the profits, A. agreeing to indemnify him against loss, if any, upon a periodical statement of accounts. Subsequently to this agreement B. gave notice to C. of the mtg., & required possession of the ship. The ship was being employed in voyages at a distance from England, between S. & T., & was at that time at S., under engagements which had been entered into by C. with third parties, with respect to its next voyage to T. The ship was given up to B.'s agent at T. at the termination of its next voyage thither. At the time of such delivery C. owed to the crew of the ship a large sum for wages, which entitled them to proceed against the ship in the Admiralty. C. & shortly after the delivery of the ship the crew took such proceedings, & the ship was seized by the officers of the ct. B., after suffering much delay & loss, paid the wages & obtained possession of the ship. In an action of trover for the ship, & for money paid, brought by B. against C.:—Held: B. was entitled to recover the wages from C. under the count for money paid.

Of course there is, upon the surface, the proposition that, by the law of this country, differing, it is said, in that respect from the civil law, nobody can make himself the creditor of another person by paying that person's debts against his will or without his consent: a proposition which is expressed by the common formula of the count for money paid for deft.'s use, at his request. That is the general rule, unquestionably; but it is subject to this modification, that money paid to discharge the debt of another cannot be recovered, unless it was paid at his request, or under compulsion in respect of a liability imposed upon that other (WILLES, J.).—*JOHNSON v. 1768. Payment of debt to redeem goods seized by sheriff.—As a general rule, where one person's goods are lawfully seized for another's debt, the owner of the goods is entitled to redeem them, & to be reimbursed by the debtor against the money paid to redeem them, & in the event of the goods being sold to satisfy the debt the owner is entitled to recover the value of them from the debtor; & the right to indemnity exists although there may be no agreement to indemnify, & although there may be in that sense no privity between the owner of the goods & the debtor.

Deft. bought the business of an ironmonger in his own name for his two sons; he paid the greater part of the purchase-money. The banking account of the business was kept by him, & he drew the cheques on that account. A society having obtained judgment in an action against deft., certain goods of his sons were seized by the sheriff: the sons claimed the goods; but upon an interpleader summons taken out by the sheriff, the claim of the sons was barred, & the goods were sold. They realised £1,300, & this sum was paid into ct. in the action by the society against deft. as a security for what might be found due to the society from deft. upon taking certain accounts. Deft.'s sons were afterwards adjudicated bkpts., & pltf. was appointed their trustee. Deft. agreed with pltf. that, in consideration of his sons' goods having been seized & sold on behalf of the society in respect of an alleged claim against him, he would pay £300 per annum to pltf. until he should have paid a sufficient sum to pay the trade creditors of his sons in full. Pltf. having brought the present action to recover £1,200 due by virtue of the above mentioned agreement, or in the alternative £1,300, the value of the goods seized:—Held: even if deft.'s express promise to pay £1,200 was not legally binding upon him, nevertheless the action was maintainable; for although the decision upon the interpleader summons did not estop deft. from showing that the seizure by the sheriff was unlawful, nevertheless he had by his conduct led to the seizure, & the goods of his sons had been legally taken for his debt; deft., therefore, was bound to indemnify his sons, & pltf., as their trustee in bkpy., was entitled to have judgment entered for him for the sum of £1,200, which he was willing to accept instead of £1,300, the value of the goods seized.—*EDMUNDS v. 1785. ——— Under the statutes authorising the issue of India stock, transfers of that stock are invalid unless they are entered & registered in a book kept at the Bank of England, & are signed therein by the transferor or his attorney. For the purpose of enabling the Bank to be satisfied that the party claiming to transfer India stock is the person entitled to it, it is the custom of the Bank to keep a list of stockbrokers, whose identification of intending transferors will be accepted by them. The Bank will also accept identifications made by some of their own officials, or by the representatives of private banks. In the case of transfers of amounts exceeding £2,000 the Bank usually makes an independent inquiry as to the identity of the transferor, but in the case of smaller amounts it is practically impossible to do so. Deft. was on the above-mentioned list of stockbrokers. A woman fraudulently personated another who was a registered holder of India stock, & having procured herself to be introduced to deft. as the holder of that stock, instructed him to prepare a transfer. Deft. accordingly sent to the Bank a "ticket," that is, a statement of the names of the transferor & transferee, the nature of the stock, & the amount to be transferred, from which ticket the Bank prepared a transfer in the transfer book, & the personator attended & forged the holder's signature in the book, deft. identifying her as being the holder. The transfer being for a nominal consideration, deft., according to the usual practice in such cases, received a fee of one guinea for his services & attendance at the Bank from the transferor. The stock was subsequently transferred to G., who purchased it bona fide & for value. On discovery of the forgery the original stockholder claimed to be reinstated on the register as the holder of the stock, & the Bank, in satisfaction of that claim, purchased stock of a like amount & transferred it into her name. The Bank then sued deft. for indemnity in respect of their loss as upon a breach of warranty of the identity of the transferor:—Held: there was evidence on which the ct. could find, & the proper inference of fact was, that deft. requested plfts. to permit the entry & registration of the forged transfer, which involved the legal consequence that deft. contracted to indemnify plfts. against any liability resulting therefrom; & plfts. were entitled to recover as damages the loss to which they had been put by having to purchase stock as aforesaid.—*BANK OF ENGLAND v. 1786. ——— Transfer of stock under order of court.—The Bank of England have an implied indemnity for acting upon a transfer of government stock by a stockholder in the form prescribed by National Debt Act, 1870 (c. 71), & since an instrument executed by the person appointed to execute it by an order under sect. 14 of Jud. Act, 1884 (c. 61), has the same effect as if it had been executed by the person originally directed to execute it, the Bank are indemnified for acting upon a transfer of stock executed by a person appointed to execute it, on the neglect or refusal of the stockholder, by an order under that sect. The ct. will not throw doubt on its order by directing any person to indemnify the Bank in the event of the order having been wrongly made.—SAVAGE v. NORTON, [1908] 1 Ch. 290; 77 L. J. Ch. 198; 98 L. T. 382.

1787. By person under disability—Supply of necessaries—Lunatic.—Whenever necessaries are supplied to a person who by reason of disability cannot himself contract, the law implies an obligation on the part of such person to pay for such necessaries out of his own property. Accordingly an obligation may be implied on the part of a lunatic, whether so found or not, to repay a person who has supplied necessaries for him, when the necessaries supplied are suitable to the position in life of the lunatic. But the provision of money or necessaries must be made under circumstances which would justify the ct. in implying the obligation, i.e. with the intention on the part of the person making the provision to be repaid for so doing, & to constitute a debt against the lunatic's estate.

A lady of unsound mind who was never found a lunatic, & whose income was under £96 a year, was confined from 1855 down to her death in 1881 in a private lunatic asylum at a cost of £140 a year. Her brother received the income of her property, & applied it in part payment of the £140, paying the deficiency out of his own pocket until his death in 1875. After his death his son, who was his exor., continued to receive & apply the lady's income in the same manner, & the deficiency was made good partly by him & partly by his brother & sisters. No claim was ever made by any of these persons against the lady's estate during her life, nor did any of them appear to have kept any account against her. After her death:—Held: the deficiency was provided under circumstances from which no implied obligation could arise.—Re RHODES, RHODES v. RHODES (1890), 41 Ch. D. 94; 59 L. J. Ch. 298; 62 L. 1789. ——— Infant pauper.—The rule that, where necessaries are supplied to a person who from any disability cannot himself contract, the law implies an obligation to pay for them out of his property extends to the case of an infant pauper supported by guardians in discharge of their statutory duty. This liability is not cut down by Poor Law Amendment Act, 1849 (c. 103), s. 16, which gives special means of recovering one year's maintenance; & the guardians can therefore recover six years' arrears of moneys expended for the maintenance of an infant pauper.—Re CLABDON, [1904] 2 Ch. 465; 73 L. 1790. ——— Pauper.—A pauper who has been maintained in the workhouse by the guardians in discharge of their statutory duty can be sued by the guardians under their common law right for the expenses of his maintenance in the workhouse, & the guardians can recover up to the amount of six years' arrears of such maintenance.

The liability of the pauper to repay the guardians depends, not upon any supposed or implied contract, but upon the obligation imposed upon the pauper at common law to refund to the guardians the amount expended by them in his maintenance if he has sufficient funds to enable him to do so, & this common law right of the guardians to recover six years' arrears of maintenance is not taken away or in any way affected by Poor Law Amendment Act, 1849 (c. 103), s. 16, which gives special means of recovering one year's maintenance from the pauper.—*BIRKENHEAD UNION GUARDIANS v. 1791. Indemnity to employer for injury caused to servant by third party—Contributory negligence of servant—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), s. 4 (2), 6–8.]—Where an accident, in respect of which an employer has been compelled under the above Act to pay compensation, was caused by the combined negligence of another person & of his own servants, the employer cannot maintain an action for indemnity against that other person under sect. 6 of the Act.

A steamer belonging to plffs. was approaching a staith, which was being used by & under the control of defts., for the purpose of taking a cargo of coal there from defts. Two workmen employed by plffs., were in attendance on the steamer in a boat for the purpose of taking a rope from the steamer to the staith. In consequence of plffs.' servants in charge of the steamer complying with a direction given by the staith master employed by defts., the propeller was set in motion, with the result that the boat was upset, one of the workmen being drowned & the other injured. Plffs., having been compelled to pay compensation in respect of the accident under the above Act, brought an action against defts. for indemnity under sect. 6 of the Act. A comr. of assize, by whom the action was tried, found that both the staith master & those in charge of the ship had been negligent, the former in giving the direction that he did, & the latter in complying with it, without ascertaining whether it was safe to do so, & that their combined negligence had caused the accident; & upon these findings he held that plffs., through their servants, having been guilty of negligence which contributed to the accident, could not maintain the action:—Held: the judgment of the learned comr. was correct.—CORY & SON, LTD. v. Pursuant to the order, the sureties paid £100 each into ct., & debtor's release was accordingly ordered. Bkpt. duly attended for examination under sect. 25 of the Act, & consequently the £200 had not been estreated. Act, 1883 (c. 52), & assignable by the trustee ; & damages in an action by the trustee against the exors. would not be confined to the dividend payable to the lessee in respect of his proof against the estate of assignee No. 1, but would extend to the whole amount of the obligation under the covenants to pay & indemnify entered into by such assignee. —*Re PERKINS, POYSEY v. 1802. — (1) Pltf. co. recovered judgment against a married woman in respect of unpaid calls on shares against which deft. had indemnified her. Not having any separate property, she assigned the benefit of her right of indemnity to pltf. co., who, after written notice of the assignment, sued deft. for the full amount of their judgment :—Held : although the married woman had paid nothing, nevertheless she was entitled to have the amount of the calls paid by deft. either to pltf. co. or to herself ; this right was capable of assignment ; & pltf. co. assignees were entitled to have it enforced by order directing payment to themselves.

(2) Inasmuch as the measure of the liability of the indemnifier is the liability, not the capacity, of the indemnified to pay, the fact that the married woman had no immediate separate property afforded no defence to the action, because the liability under the judgment remained & could be enforced against any future separate property she might acquire. Semble : in the case of an insolvent debtor, the result of the decisions is to give to a contract to indemnify him the same effect as if it were a guarantee to the principal creditor of payment of the debt. *BRITISH UNION & NATIONAL INSURANCE CO. v. 1803. Necessity for writing—Indemnity to indorser if promissory note enforced.—A promise by the indorser of an unpaid note, to indemnify the holder if he will proceed to enforce payment against the other parties on the note, must be in writing, or it is void under Stat. 1804. — Indemnity to defend action.—(1) Pltf., an occupier of land, at the request of deft., & upon a promise of indemnity, resisted a suit of the vicar for tithes:—Held: this was not a promise required by Stat. 1813. Past consideration—Money paid to promissor—Subsequent indemnity as to claim by person claiming part.—A. having paid to B. the whole of a demand claimed by B., but part of which is due to C. B. afterwards engages to indemnify A. against any claim by C., this promise is supported by a sufficient consideration, although it was made after the payment of the money.—SUFFIELD (LORD) v. BRUCE (1817), 2 Stark. 175, N. P.

1814. Promissory note & cognovit.—Pltf. having given deft. promissory notes & a cognovit for £500 as a composition for certain claims, deft., in consideration of the money so secured to be paid engaged to indemnify him against certain liabilities:—Held: the security, not the actual payment, was the consideration, & pltf. might sue on the guarantee, though he had not paid the £500.—*IKIN v. 1816. Execution of separation deed.—A deed of separation between pltf. & his wife having been drawn up, but not executed by pltf.:—Held: his executing such deed was a legal consideration for a promise by deft. to pay certain debts & expenses, for which pltf. was solely liable.—*JONES v. 1817. Agreement to prosecute action.—An agreement by pltf. (an attorney), deft., & B. set forth that, "in consideration" of B. having agreed to pay to deft. his claim against B., & certain costs, out of the proceeds to arise from the recovery by B. in an action of B. against J., deft. undertook to pay pltf. all costs incurred by him in prosecuting the action of B. against J., pltf. thereby agreeing for the promise, & it was unnecessary to allege such promise to be in writing.—MARIN v. ARTHUR (1858), 16 U. C. R. 483.—CAN.

p. Agreement to indemnify purchaser of goods from assignee in insolvency—Against creditors.—Pltf. purchased goods from F. as assignee in insolvency of W. & K.; creditors of W. & K., disputing F.'s right to sell, took the goods from pltf., who sued these creditors & their bailiff for such a. Agreement that purchaser should indemnify vendor against mortgage on land sold.—Declaration, that in consideration that pltf. would sell & convey to deft. certain lands, which were then subject to a mtge., deft. promised to pay off said mtge. & save pltf. harmless therefrom; that in pursuance of said agreement pltf. so sold & conveyed; that deft. not having saved harmless pltf. from said mtge., & the sum of £123 being due thereon, pltf. was obliged to pay it, of which deft. had notice, but hath not repaid the same to pltf., or indemnified him for such payment:—Held: good for that it showed a sufficient consideration with debt. to bring the same :—Held : in assumpsit on this agreement, the consideration was rightly described to be that pltf., at the request of deft., would, with B.'s assent, prosecute the action of B. against J.—DALLY v. POOLLY (1844), 6 Q. B. 115 E. R. 185.

1818. Creation of charge on estate.—A charge created by C. S. upon his estates to secure the payment of a sum of money borrowed for H. S. is a good consideration, not only for a collateral charge upon the estates of H. S. to indemnify C. S. & his estate from the payment of the money borrowed, but also for a settlement of the S. estates upon his family.

A., being a trustee for the younger children of H. S., advanced a sum of £5,185 3s. 4d. upon the security of certain estates in B., which C. S. on Jan. 20, 1832, demised to A. for three hundred years, to secure the repayment. The money was borrowed for H. S., who was tenant in tail of the S. estates in remainder expectant on the death of his mother, the tenant for life, & on Jan. 21, 1832, H. S. demised the S. estates to C. S. for two thousand years, to indemnify him & the B. estates from the £5,185 3s. 4d. & interest, secured to A.; & by deeds dated Jan. 23 & 21, 1832, in further compliance with an agreement recited in this deed, he settled the S. estates upon various uses, for the benefit of his family. On the death of the tenant for life, H. S., being greatly indebted to F., executed a disentailing deed, & conveyed the S. estates to F. giving him a power of sale over the estates as a security for the money due; this was subsequently confirmed by another deed, & in a suit instituted by F., insisting that the settlement of Jan. 23 & 21, 1832, was voluntary & void against the subsequent alienation for value made to F. who had notice of the settlement :—Held : the agreement made by H. S. with C. S. to indemnify him against the £5,185 3s. 4d. & to settle the S. estates, was such as this ct. would specifically perform, & it was a consideration sufficient to support the settlement. — FORD v. STUART (1852), 15 Beav. 193; 21 L. J. Ch. 511; 51 E. R. 629.

SUB-SECT. 3. — STAMP DUTIES.

Stamp Duties generally, see REVENUE.

1819. Necessity for agreement stamp—Agreement to indemnify bail.—An agreement to indemnify A. from all costs, charges, damages, or other expenses which he may incur as bail for B. requires an agreement stamp, under Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), the arrest of B., & consequently the liability of A., being for more than £20, though the costs, etc., incurred, do not amount to that sum. — WRIGLEY v. SMITH (1834), 5 B. & Ad. 1117; 3 Nev. & M. K. B. 181; 3 L. J. K. B. 116; 110 E. R. 1106.

SECT. 6. — EXTENT OF LIABILITY.

SUB-SECT. 1. — AS REGARDS SUBJECT-MATTER.

A. In General.

1821. Not limited by schedule.—A. engages to indemnify B. against a debt due from A. to C.

taking, & debts, in such action having obtained a verdict, a new trial was granted to pltf.; deft. requested pltf. to proceed with the action, & promised, if he would do so, to indemnify him against the costs then incurred or to be incurred, & to pay him the value of said goods in case he should fail to

C. of £50; A. & B., in fact, owe to C. £74, & C. refuses to accept £50 from A. without payment of the remainder of his debt; & C. arrests B. for the whole debt. A. is liable to B. on his engagement to indemnify him.

The obligation is to discharge all debts due & owing, the particulars of which are set forth in the schedule, the debts are erroneously stated there, & the £50 specified there cannot be separated from the remainder, & as long as it subsisted as a ground for arresting pltf. he was entitled to insist on the indemnity (LORD ELLENBOROUGH). — HANCOCK v. CLAY (1817), 2 Stark. 100, N. P.

1822. Not limited by recitals.—There is no doctrine in equity any more than at law that the mere non-suing in respect of a specialty debt for any period short of the twenty years, constitutes such laches on the part of the specialty creditor as to deprive him of his right of suing in respect of such debt.

B. was liable under a covenant to pay six months after his death £500 to the trustees of his settlement; & was also entitled to the benefit of a covenant on the part of S., contained in a deed dated 1800, to pay a similar sum forthwith in exoneration of the £500 covenanted to be paid by him; & B. had not during the life of S., who died in 1809, or during the remainder of his own life, required payment of the sum. On his death in 1878, his exors. were sued by the trustees of his settlement for payment of the £500 :—Held : (1) B.'s exors. being bound under the covenant of B. to pay, were not prevented by any equitable doctrine of laches on the part of B. from suing the exors. & trustees of S. on her covenant; & the exor. of S. having been guilty of deavastatit by non-conversion of the estate of S. whereby it had been lost, B.'s exors. were held entitled to recover from the estate of her exors.; (2) a covenant of indemnity unlike a release, is not to be restricted by its recitals. — Re BAKER, COLLINS v. RHODES, Re SEAMAN, RHODES v. WISH (1881), 20 Ch. D. 230; 51 L. J. Ch. 315; 45 L. T. 658; 30 W. R. 858, C. A.

1823. Measure of liability—Necessary & reasonable charges.—B. & P. being the owners of an unexpired term of seventy-two years in a certain house & premises, let them to J. G. for twenty-one years, under the usual covenants, to pay rent & to keep the house in repair; & afterwards they assigned the reversion to G. B. J. G. had previously assigned the residue of his term of twenty-one years to pltf., with the usual covenants. Pltf. afterwards assigned the term to deft., with similar covenants, to pay the rent & to keep the premises in repair, & with a covenant that deft. would observe & fulfil all the covenants of the former lease; & that he would, from time to time & at all times, save harmless & indemnify pltf. from all costs, damages, & expenses, which might be incurred by reason of any delay, breach, or default in payment or performance thereof. On the rent becoming due & unpaid, & the premises falling out of repair, G. B. brought an action against J. G. who suffered judgment by default. J. G. afterwards brought an action to recover the amount so paid by him, & his costs. Pltf. defended the action unsuccessfully, & he became liable to pay to J. G. the amount of the judgment in said action :—Held : no sufficient consideration appeared for the alleged promise. — MACKLIN v. KEIR (1877), 28 C. P. 90.—CAN.

Sect. 6.—Extent of liability: Sub-sect. 1, A., B. & C. (a).]

by default, & also of the costs of that action. Pltf. then sued deft., not having paid that amount to J. G. & judgment not having been signed in the action against him:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover from deft. the amount of the rent & repairs, & the costs of the action in which J. G. had suffered judgment by default, but he was not entitled to the costs of the action brought against him by J. G.

There is no doubt that at one time, very wild notions were entertained with respect to the contract of indemnity; but these notions are now exploded, & it is now considered, that, by a contract of indemnity, is meant that the party indemnified may recover all such charges as necessarily & reasonably arise out of the circumstances under which the party charged became responsible (POLLOCK, (J.B.)—SMITH v. HOWELL (1851), 6 Exch. 730; 20 L. J. Ex. 377; 17 L. T. O. S. 188; 155 E. R. 730).

1824. — Legal obligation to pay.]—Pltf. accepted a bill for the accommodation of R. R. afterwards compounded with his creditors, who executed a release in which the holder of the bill concurred, under a secret understanding between him, pltf. & R., that his rights against pltf. should not be prejudiced. It died, appointing pltf. his exor. Pltf., at the request of R.'s widow, renounced probate, & allowed the widow to take out administration, in consideration of which Mrs. R. & her brother gave him a memorandum undertaking to indemnify him against all his liabilities as surety for R. on several instruments & under the accommodation bill, but not beyond the amount of the assets. The holder of the bill pressed pltf. for payment, pltf. paid him, & filed his bill against Mrs. R. & her brother for indemnity out of the assets:—Held: however the case might have stood apart from the memorandum, Mrs. R. had thereby estopped herself from treating pltf.'s payment to the bill holder as voluntary, & not made in satisfaction of a legal liability, & that she had therefore no defence to the suit; & although the demand against her brother might be of a legal & not of an equitable nature, yet as he was surety in respect of a demand which as against his principal was the proper subject of a suit in equity, he was properly made a party to the suit. — ATKINS v. REVELL (1860), 1 De G. F. & J. 360; 45 E. R. 398, L. J.

1825. — Must be certain.]—A composition deed under Bkpcy. Act, 1861 (c. 131), s. 192, & fulfilling its requirements, made between debtor of the one part, & the creditors whose names were subscribed of the other part, by which each of the said creditors, covenanting for his own acts only, covenanted with debtor at all times to indemnify him from & against every bill of exchange, promissory note & other negotiable instrument on which the debtor may have incurred any liability, or which may have been indorsed or put into circulation by any or either of the said creditors, is not binding on a creditor who has not assented to or executed the deed, since such a covenant is wholly unreasonable, & the deed containing it is not such a deed as is contemplated by the statute.

1825 I. Measure of liability—Must be certain.]—McDUGALL v. GARRICK* (1922), 63 D. L. J. 214; 17 Alta. L. R. 209; [1922] 1 W. W. L. 422.—CAN.

g. Conveyance of land—As indemnity to indorser of promissory note.]

—Where land is conveyed as security to indemnify an indorser of a promissory note, the conveyance enures to indemnify the indorser against liability in respect of indorsements of all subsequent notes given as renewals of the originals or as security for the original debt.—WESTFALL v. STEWART

A covenant by which creditors engage to indemnify debtor from liabilities upon an outstanding paper to which his name is attached & render themselves responsible to any unknown amount, seems to us entirely unreasonable. On this ground, without entering into any other question, we think that the deed cannot be supported (WIGHTMAN, J.)—WOODS v. FOOTE (1863), 1 H. & C. 841; 32 L. J. Ex. 199; 7 L. T. 836; 11 W. 1827. Receiver appointed by court—Indemnity confined to assets in control of court.]—In an action for dissolution of partnership a receiver & manager was, by a consent order, appointed to carry on the partnership business with a view to its sale as a going concern. In carrying on the business the receiver & manager made payments which the assets were insufficient to satisfy in full, & claimed to be indemnified by the partners personally in respect of the balance due to him:—Held: the receiver was an officer of the ct., & could only look to the assets under the control of the ct. for his indemnity.—BOEHM v. GOODALL, [1911] 1 Ch. 155; 80 L. J. Ch. 86; 103 L. T. 717; 27 T. L. R. 106; 55 Sol. Jo. 108.

B. Interest.

1828. Interest on amount paid.]—A. & B., by deed jointly & severally covenanted with C. to pay her an annuity during her life, & by another deed of the same date A. & B. covenanted with each other that each should pay one half of the annuity, & indemnify the other against all actions, "damages, demands, sums of money & expenses, which might be incurred by reason of the non-payment thereof":—Held: B., having in consequence of A.'s insolvency made several payments of A.'s moiety of the annuity, was not entitled to interest on the sums he had so paid.—*BELL v. 1830. Interest paid by party indemnified.]—Deft. conveyed part of a building estate in fee simple as beneficial owner to plffs. Plffs. had notice both on the face of & outside the conveyance that previous purchasers of parts of the estate had rights of way over a road. As between plffs. & deft., however, the former were to take the land discharged from those rights. The conveyance contained no express covenants for title nor any qualification of the implied covenants. Plffs. entered on the land & blocked up the road; & a previous purchaser claimed £500 damages from them for doing so. Plffs. gave notice to deft. & under protest, went to arbitration. An award was made giving the previous purchaser £510. Plffs. still disputed his right, & he brought an action in which, on a special case, plffs. were held liable to pay him the £510 & interest, & the costs of the arbitration proceedings & of the action. They paid these sums, & brought this action claiming from deft. repayment of the money thus paid & of their own costs of the arbitration & action:—Held: (1) plffs. were entitled to bring an action for damages under deft.'s implied covenants for title; & their knowledge of the previous purchaser's rights did not prevent them from making this claim; (2) deft. was liable to indemnify them, & must repay the £510 & interest & the costs which they had paid to the previous purchaser; & (3) deft. must also pay to them subsequent interest on the £510 & their costs of the arbitration proceedings as between solr. & client but need not pay their costs of the special case.—GREAT WESTERN RY. MANTELL (1842), 9 M. & W. 323; 11 L. J. Ex. 99; 152 E. R. 137.

1834. ——— Indemnity for levying distress.]—A landlord signed a warrant of distress in the following form: "I hereby authorise R., or his agent, as my agent, to seize & distrain the goods on the premises, now in the possession of G., for £9, being the amount of rent due to me; & for your so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant, authority & indemnification against all costs & charges in respect to any law expenses, action or actions that may arise, as well as any other & all charges or expenses which you or your agent may be at or brought against you or your agent on this account." H. the servant of R. having distrained, an action of trover was brought against him by the tenant for the conversion of certain goods, some of which were alleged not to have been in the inventory, in which action plff. was non-suited:—Held: assuming that H. had done nothing wrong, the indemnity extended to the costs of defending the action brought against him. IBBERT v. DE LA SALLE (1860), 6 H. & N. 233; 30 L. J. Ex. 41; 158 E. R. 96.

1835. ——— Defence reasonable Indemnity against breach of covenant.]—Under a covenant to indemnify against all actions & claims in respect of the covenants of a lease, costs properly incurred in reasonably defending an action brought for a breach of one of the covenants, are recoverable as damages.—MURRELL v. Fysh (1883), 1 Cab. & El. 80.

1836. ——— —.]—The owners of a certain sulphate of ammonia instructed a firm of lightermen to convey it in a barge to a ship & engage a tug for the purpose. While the tug was towing the barge with the cargo on board the barge collided with another barge, & the cargo was damaged. The owners of the cargo brought an action against the owners of the barge & the owners of the tug, in which the owners of the tug served a third-party notice on the owners of the barge, claiming to be entitled to be indemnified by them, upon the ground that the towage was upon their usual terms that they would not be answerable for any loss or damage which might happen to any barge or its cargo while in tow, & that their customers undertook to indemnify them from any such loss or damages. At the trial of the action, the President found that the owners of the barge were free from blame & ordered the owners of the cargo to pay their costs, & further found that the damage was due to the negligence of the tug, & holding that there was no privity of contract between the owners of the cargo & the owners of the tug, gave judgment for the owners of the cargo against the owners of the tug for the damage, together with their costs & the costs payable by them to the owners of the barge. The judge further held, that, under the terms of the contract between the owners of the barge & the owners of the tug, the owners of the tug were entitled to be indemnified by the owners of the barge not only in respect of the damage & the costs of the owners of the cargo, & the costs payable by the owners of the cargo to the owners of the barge, but also in respect of their own costs in defending the action:—Held: on appeal by the owners of the barge, there being no privity of contract between the owners of the tug & the owners of the cargo, the owners of the tug were liable to the owners of the cargo, but were entitled to be indemnified by the owners of the barge & as they had given the owners of the barge full notice of the claim & full opportunity of intervening & paying or resisting it, & had acted reasonably in defending the action, they were entitled to recover not only the actual damage, but also the costs payable by them to the owners of the cargo & their own costs in the action. THE MILLWALL,

& to indemnify him against them. The lessor sued plff. for breach of the covenants to repair, etc., & recovered, deft. having notice of the action, & having sanctioned the defence:—Held:

under deft.'s covenant plff. was entitled to recover the damages & costs in that suit, but not interest.—SPENCE v. HECTOR (1865), 24 U. C. R. 277.—CAN.

1837. — Several defences pleaded.—Certain lands were subject to a building scheme, the provisions of which were contained in a deed of 1851. The purchaser of a plot was informed by the vendor in good faith that the original deed was lost or destroyed, & what purported to be a true copy was produced. This copy subsequently proved to be defective. An action was brought by an adjoining owner to restrain the purchaser from erecting or allowing to remain upon his land certain buildings which contravened the provision as to a building line in the deed of 1854. The property in respect of which he was entitled to sue had certain erections upon it contravening another building stipulation, which provided that no erection should be built within 4 ft. of a boundary fence. At the trial of the action it was held that deft. was affected with notice of the building stipulations, & that pltf. had only committed a trivial breach of a trivial covenant, & that such a breach did not disentitle pltf. from having the building stipulations strictly enforced, & judgment was given for pltf. with costs, deft. being directed to remove certain buildings erected by him on the land.

The third party to the action had sold the property to deft., & upon such sale had written a letter agreeing to indemnify deft., as purchaser, against all "costs, damages, & expenses" which deft. might suffer or incur "by reason of the building stipulations & conditions being other than those set out in the copy":—Held: (1) the third party was liable to pay deft. the difference in the value of the plot in consequence of the amount of land available for building under the provisions of the deed of 1851 being less than under the supposed copy; & also the costs of the defence that pltf. was disentitled to sue in consequence of his having broken one of the covenants; (2) deft., having had actual notice of the provisions of the deed of 1851 before he commenced to build, the third party was not liable for the cost of building or removing the buildings; (3) deft. was not entitled to recover from the third party the costs of pltf. incurred in the action & paid by deft., or deft.'s own costs so far as they related to the following defences set up by deft.: viz. a denial that the provisions of the deed of 1851 applied to the plot purchased by him or that he had notice of such provisions; that the liquidator of the co. formerly owning the land to which the deed of 1851 applied, had, under a power given by that deed to the "vendors, their heirs or assigns," by an agreement in writing, approved of by the ct., released or waived the covenant which it was alleged had been broken; that no building scheme was contained in the deed of 1854, & if there was it had come to an end by mutual consent of the various purchasers of the land comprised in it.—HOOPER v. BROMET (1904), 90 L. T. 234, C. A.

1838. — To costs of action brought after formation—Indemnity to pay costs incurred in formation of company.—In consideration of A.'s having consented & agreed with B. to allow his, A.'s, name to be placed on the list of the provisional committee of a projected railway co., & to take certain shares therein, & to pay deposits thereon, B. undertook & promised "to indemnify A. from all personal responsibility, & to hold him harmless against all costs, charges, & expenses which then had been, or might thereafter be, incurred in & about the formation of the co., their meetings, advertisements, surveys, & other expenses of carrying out the co., applying for an Act of Parliament, or anything relating thereto." C., an advertising agent, afterwards unsuccessfully sued A. for moneys paid for the insertion of advertisements in divers newspapers at the request of the secretary of the co.:—Held: the extra costs incurred by A. in the defence of that action were not costs, charges, & expenses incurred in & about the formation of the co., within the indemnity.—LEWIS v. SMITH (1850), 9 C. B. 610; 19 L. J. C. P. 278; 137 E. R. 1030.

1839. — To costs of winding up proceedings—Indemnity confined to debts in schedule.—Pltf. & defts., being members of the committee of a projected railway co., by an agreement under seal, which recited that divers debts & liabilities had been incurred, & that it was probable that further disputes would arise respecting the liability of the members & the committee of management; & that pltf., being desirous of being relieved from all such questions & disputes, had proposed to contribute & pay a certain sum to defts. towards the payment of these claims, upon their agreeing to indemnify him in the manner therein mentioned, & to guarantee him that the sums mentioned in the first schedule to the agreement had been paid; defts. guaranteed that the sums mentioned in the first schedule had been paid; & also, "that they would indemnify & save harmless pltf. from all claims expressly mentioned & referred to in the second schedule, & from all costs, damages, & expenses which he might sustain or be put to by reason thereof, & at their own costs & charges defend him against all actions & suits which should be commenced or prosecuted against him for the recovery thereof or any part or parts thereof." After the making of this agreement an order was obtained in the Ct. of Ch. for winding up the affairs of the co. Pltf. was adjudged to be a contributory; & a certain sum was directed to be collected, such sum being composed of one of the sums mentioned in the second schedule to the agreement, & the rest of it consisting of costs & expenses occasioned by & incidental to the proceedings in the winding-up. Pltf., having been ordered to pay a certain proportion of the sum directed to be collected, & having paid the same, brought an action against defts. under the agreement:—Held: the agreement merely protected pltf. against the claims mentioned in the schedules, & against the costs & expenses to which pltf. might be put by reason of the enforcement of those claims; & consequently pltf. was not entitled to recover beyond the amount of the sum mentioned in the second schedule, & which was included in the amount directed to be collected; & the costs & expenses which he had been compelled to pay were not of the character contemplated by the agreement, & could not be recovered by him from defts.—*TANNER v. Defts. appealed but the third parties, who received notice of the appeal, did not give any sanction or co-operation to the appeal, which was dismissed with costs:—Held: the third parties were not compelled by the indemnity to pay to defts. the costs of the appeal.

At the date of the agreement an action was pending by the said owner of the adjoining property against pltff. for damages in respect of such injury:—Held: the agreement to repay such damages was not an indemnity against the costs of such action, & defts. were not liable to pltff. for such costs.—POTTER v. The roads had not been adapted to such traffic, though they were fit for the traffic that might have been expected on them. The visiting committee were elected partly by the county council, & partly by the county borough council, & had purchased the site for the asylum from the latter council. Their contract with the contractor contained provisions by which he undertook to indemnify them against claims in respect of damage caused by excessive weight or extraordinary traffic over any highway in carrying out the works & against all costs & expenses in respect thereof:—Held: the traffic was extraordinary & deft. was entitled to be indemnified by the third party for damages recovered by pltffs. & for all costs that he had been put to in defending the action, & for such costs as deft. had to pay to pltffs.; & the costs of the proceedings between pltffs. & the third party, to which deft. was not in fact a party, should be included in the bill by pltffs. against deft., in order that the latter might recover them from the third party; but that deft. should not pay these costs to pltffs. unless he got them from the third party.—COLCHESTER CORPN. v. At the trial of the action over by B. against C. the jury included in their verdict the costs incurred by B. in the former action, no objection being then taken by C. to the right of B. to recover such costs. The Ct. refused to disturb the verdict, being of opinion that there was evidence to go to the jury that C. had sanctioned the incurring of these costs.—BLYTH v. At the end of the seven years, deft. having determined the lease in the exercise of his option, pltf. claimed from deft., & deft. claimed from H., the amount at which the dilapidations had been assessed by pltf.'s surveyor. H. declined to pay or give the deft. an indemnity, or to take any responsibility in the matter. Pltf. sued deft., who brought in H. as third party. The issues, as between pltf. & deft., & deft. & H., were referred separately to an official referee, who reported that the sum claimed by pltf. was due from deft. to pltf., & that a similar sum was due from H. to deft. 1848. — — —.]—Pltf. sued deft. for breach of a covenant to repair contained in a lease of a dwelling-house for a term of twenty-one years from Michaelmas, 1801. Deft. obtained leave to serve & served a third party notice claiming contribution or indemnity from a sub-lessee to whom he had let the premises from Midsummer, 1869, for the remainder of the original term less ten days. The underlease contained a covenant to repair, which was in terms precisely similar to those of the covenant in the original lease, & for breach of which deft. claimed relief against the sub-lessee:—Held: (1) inasmuch as the terms of the covenant to repair must in each case be construed with reference to the age & character of the premises at the time of the demise, the covenant in the underlease could not be construed as a covenant to indemnify deft. against or to perform the covenant in the original lease; (2) deft.'s claim was not one for contribution or indemnity from the third party, within Ord. 16, r. 52, & no directions as to trial could be given under that rule.—PONTIFEX v. FOORD (1884), 12 Q. B. D. 152; 53 L. J. Q. B. 321; 49 L. T. 808; 32 W. R. 310, D. C.

1849. — — —.]—An underlease made in 1887 contained covenants by the underlessee to repair in general terms & to repair within three months after notice in writing, & a proviso for re-entry on breach of the underlessee's covenants. The underlease showed on its face that the reversion was a leasehold reversion. The head lease made in 1855 contained covenants to repair & a proviso for re-entry in substantially the same terms as those of the covenants & proviso in the underlease of 1887. The head landlord served on his lessee a notice in writing to repair; that lessee served a similar notice on his underlessee, who failed to do the repairs within three months. The head landlord thereupon brought an action for the recovery of the demised premises. The repairs were subsequently executed & the lessee applied for & obtained relief against forfeiture.

In an action by the lessee against the underlessee for breach of covenant to repair in the underlease:—Held: pltf. could not recover the costs of the proceedings for relief.—CLARE v. DOBSON, [1911] 1 K. B. 35; 80 L. J. K. B. 158; 103 L. T. 506; 27 T. L. R. 22.

1850. Costs of counter-claim defended with knowledge of third party.—Pltfs. having undertaken the repairs of a steamship for the owners, employed defts., an engineering co., to construct a new crank shaft. Defts. agreed to do so, upon the terms of their not being responsible for failure of material or workmanship beyond the replacement of faulty work supplied by them.

In an action by pltfs. against the shipowners to recover the price of the shaft which had been supplied by defts., the shipowners counter-claimed for damages for breach of contract in consequence of the shaft having broken down on a voyage.

Pltfs., after communicating with defts., who thereupon repudiated all responsibility, defended the counter-claim.

The shipowners succeeded on their counter-claim, the shaft being found to have been of faulty workmanship.

In an action by pltfs. to recover from defts. the costs of the shipowners' counter-claim, as damages resulting from defts.' breach of contract:—Held: the terms on which defts. had supplied the shaft did not relieve them from paying these costs; & pltfs. were entitled to recover the costs of the counter-claim except so far as they were increased by any issue other than the faultiness of the material or workmanship of the shaft.—*PRINCE OF WALES DRY DOCK CO. 1851. Action properly instituted by next friend of infant.—Where an action, properly instituted under the advice of counsel, & conducted with diligence & propriety by a next friend in the interest of an infant, has been dismissed with costs & damages to be paid by the next friend, the infant will be held bound to indemnify the next friend against such costs & damages, & the costs, charges, & expenses properly incurred by him on the infant's behalf in relation to such action; but no declaration of charge in respect of such costs will be made upon the infant's property where such property in not being administered by the ct.—STEEDEN v. WALDEN, [1910] 2 Ch. 393; 79 L. J. Ch. 613; 103 L. T. 135; 26 T. L. R. 590; 54 Sol. Jo. 681.

1852. Agreement to be bound by result of arbitration between others.—Indemnity to pay costs of arbitration.—A. sold goods to B. who resold them to pltfs., who resold them to defts., who resold them to the ultimate purchasers. All the contracts were in similar terms & contained similar arbn. clauses. The ultimate purchasers claimed the right to reject the goods as not being in accordance with their contract, & each purchaser in turn claimed the right to throw back the goods on his immediate vendor. Defts. agreed with pltfs. that, as between themselves & pltfs., they would be bound by the result of an arbn. between A. &

B.:—Held: they had not thereby impliedly agreed to pay to plffs. any costs plffs. might be liable to pay to B.—JACKSON (THOMAS) & Co., LTD. v. HENDERSON, CRAIG & Co., LTD. (1916), 115 L. T. 36, C. A.

1853. Judgment against two defendants—Appeal by one successful—Right of indemnity against non-appealing defendant.]—Plff. sued to recover damages against two defts. jointly & severally. His case was, that a motor-van belonging to second deft. ran into an omnibus belonging to first defts., knocking the steering-wheel out of the driver's hand, in consequence of which the omnibus damaged his shop widow. At the trial the jury found for plff. against both defts., & judgment was entered accordingly. First defts. appealed; second defts. did not, nor were they made parties to the appeal. Plff., however, gave second defts. notice that should the appeal be allowed he would apply for an order of indemnity against any costs he should be ordered to pay first defts. The appeal was allowed, & judgment entered for applts., with costs, against plffs. in the ct. below & of the appeal. In respect of those costs plffs. asked for an order against second defts.:—Held: as the second defts., although no parties to the appeal, had nevertheless appeared on notice to oppose the order being made as to costs against them, they were liable to indemnify plff. so far as he had been ordered to pay first defts.' costs at the trial, but with regard to the costs of the appeal no order would be made against second defts.—*RICHER v. 1855. —.] In an action by a lessee against the assignee of the lease for breach of a contract by the assignee to indemnify the lessee against a failure to perform the covenants contained in the lease, plff. sought to recover, among other heads of damage, the whole costs, as well those paid by him on taxation as extra costs paid by him to his own attorney, incurred in unsuccessfully defending an action brought against him by the lessor for breach of one of the covenants in the lease committed after the assignment:—Held: the lessee was entitled to recover both the extra costs paid by him to his attorney & the taxed costs.—*HOWARD v. to pay off a bill of sale given by the debtor, & to take an assignment of it to themselves. The trustee chosen by the creditors sued the auctioneers in order to test the validity of the bill of sale, & the auctioneers brought in the official receiver as third party. The action was dismissed with costs:—Held: under the implied indemnity given by the official receiver, the auctioneers were entitled to receive from him the difference between the costs incurred by them as between solr. & client, & the costs as between party & party which they received from the trustee, & the official receiver was entitled to be paid out of the estate his own costs & the amount he had paid under his indemnity to the auctioneers.—*Re WELLS & CROFT, Ex p. 1858. —.]—In an action in which defts. claimed an indemnity from a third party & which was settled by a payment from the third party to plffs., judgment being given for plffs. for party & party costs against defts., the ct. gave judgment for defts. against the third party (1) for solr. & client costs as between plffs. & defts., since otherwise defts. would not receive a complete indemnity; & (2) for the costs of the proceedings of defts. against the third party, the latter costs to be taxed as between party & party, since there was no difference in principle between the scale applicable in a claim to an indemnity & the scale applicable in any other form of action.—SIMPSON & MILLER v. BRITISH INDUSTRIES TRUST, LTD. (1923), 39 T. L. R. 286.

1859. As between party & party—Statutory indemnity.]—“Full compensation” for damage sustained by reason of the exercise of any of the powers of the Act under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 308, does not include extra costs of legal proceedings which have been incurred, over & above the taxed party & party costs, by a person against whom the local authority has unsuccessfully proceeded under the Act. Proceedings having been taken under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 91-96, by resps., a local authority, against applt. in respect of a nuisance, an order to abate the nuisance was made against applt. by the justices. He appealed against the order to quarter sessions, who dismissed the appeal, subject to a case. On the hearing of the case a div. ct. ordered that the order of quarter sessions should be quashed with costs, & that resps. should pay to applt. his costs of the appeal to the High Ct. to be taxed. The costs of the two appeals were taxed & paid to applt. In prosecuting the appeals applt. reasonably incurred costs to a greater amount than the taxed costs which he received, & he claimed from resps. the difference between the taxed costs & the amount so expended by him, as compensation under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 308:—Held: he was not entitled to recover the amount so claimed by him.—*BARNETT v. 1873. On performance of consideration.]—A declaration, in assumpsit, stated that pltf. had commenced an action against A. to recover a sum due to them from A., & another action against B., as a party liable in respect of same debt; that, in consideration that pltf. would consent to stay the proceedings in the action against A. until a given day, & would proceed to trial with the action against B. at a certain sitting, or as soon after as the practice of the ct. would admit of, deft. promised that he would indemnify pltf. against all costs & expenses connected with the action against B., whether same should be decided in favour of pltf. or of B., & that he, deft., would pay same costs & expenses when requested by pltf. The declaration then averred that pltf., confiding in the promise of deft., did consent to stay, & did stay, the proceedings in the action against A., & that they duly proceeded to trial with the action against B., & obtained a verdict therein; that the verdict was afterwards set aside, & a new trial ordered, upon payment of costs by B.; that pltf. again set down the cause for trial; that, by the direction & at the request of the deft., the record was withdrawn; & that pltf. had incurred, & paid, certain costs & expenses in connection with the action: & assigned for breach, deft.'s refusal to reimburse them.—Held: the declaration disclosed a good cause of action, the final determination of the action against B. not being a condition precedent to pltf.'s right to sue for the costs, & the consideration being satisfied by pltf.'s staying proceedings against A., & going to trial against B.—*WILSON v. 1874. On actual loss to indemnified party.]—A person who enters into an agreement to indemnify another against the consequences of his doing a certain act, is not thereby necessarily made liable to pay a sum of money to him, as he may possibly fulfil his agreement in another way, & such an agreement is not broken until the person who is to be indemnified is compelled to make some payment from which he was to be saved harmless.

1860 I. As between party & party.]—W. sold land to H., & covenanted to indemnify him against a mortgage thereon:—Held: H. was not entitled to solr.

1875. —[J.—]J., at the request of deft. W., his co-trustee, advanced several sums, part of the trust estate, to A. upon security not warranted by the trust. At the time of the advances J. knew that the land proposed to be mortgaged was deft. W.'s, that he had contracted to sell it to A., the intended mtgor., & that part of the loan would be paid to deft. in payment of the purchase-money. He did not know that there were other moneys due from A. to the deft. B., & which were also to be paid out of the loans. Upon a bill filed by J. against his co-trustee W. asking to have the securities realised, & the deficiency made good by the defendant W.:—Held: (1) he was not entitled to the relief asked; (2) assuming there was an understanding on the part of deft. to indemnify pltf., as against damages or loss, he would not be entitled to relief until a loss had arisen. To allow persons entitled to indemnity to bring actions quia timet before the right to indemnify exists would be a most mischievous extension of the jurisdiction of the ct.—*BUTLER v. H. proceeded to Miramichi accordingly, & there purchased some timber from one L. for £154 11s. & drew a bill upon S. & co. for the amount, at sixty days' sight, in favour of the seller or his order. The bill was dated Sept. 4, 1826, & on Nov. 21, it was duly presented for acceptance & protested for non-acceptance. Pltf. was in Liverpool, & the ship under his command, from Oct. 1826, until Apr. 1827. It was not proved that pltf. received any notice of the dishonour of the bill, either from the then holder or from defts. who had got the cargo. In 1832, pltf. was arrested upon this bill at Miramichi, & paid it, in order to release himself from the arrest. bill:—Held: (1) under these circumstances defts. could not insist on the want of proof of notice to pltf. of the dishonour of the bill, as a defence to the action; (2) a promise to indemnify was the promise which the law would, in this case, imply, & as there was no damnification till 1832, Stat. These promissory notes had been barred by Stat. Limitations, no interest having been demanded in respect of them nor any acknowledgment taken. A creditor's suit had been instituted to administer the estate of G., & a claim to be indemnified against any claim in that suit had been carried into chambers in respect of the £400 so formerly advanced to the sons. 1889. — Stranger to contract.—In position of cestui que trust.]—(1) To entitle a third person, not named as a party to a contract, to sue either of the contracting parties, that third person must possess an actual beneficial right which places him in the position of cestui que trust under the contract.

By a deed of separation between husband & wife, the husband covenanted with the trustees to pay to them an annuity for the use of the wife & two eldest daughters, & also to pay to the trustees all the expenses of the maintenance & education of the two youngest daughters, provided that the trustees permitted them to go to such school as the husband should direct, & provided also that the covenants by the trustees were duly observed & performed : provided, also, that the two youngest daughters should live at such place, being reasonable & proper for the purpose, as the husband should direct, & should be maintained & educated at his expense, the husband & wife to have all reasonable access to them; & the trustees covenanted with the husband that they would, during the continuance of the separation, keep him indemnified against all liability for the maintenance of the wife & two eldest daughters, & against all molestation by them, & that the wife would not take any proceedings against the husband for alimony, except as aforesaid; & that they, the trustees, would, on the husband defraying all the expenses connected therewith, carry out his desires as to the school at which the two youngest daughters should be educated, & the place at which they should live, & would permit them, if they so desired, & without any interference on the part of the wife, to accept any invitation of the husband to reside with him.

longer to maintain her, whereupon she brought an action, by her next friend, against the husband & the trustees of the separation deed to enforce the husband's covenant, the trustees having refused to allow their names to be used as plffs. :—Held : upon the construction of the deed, pltf. was not in the position of cestui que trust under the covenant so as to entitle her to maintain the action, but liberty was given her, under R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 16, r. 2, to amend the writ, by adding the trustees, the wife, & the other daughters, or any of them, as plffs.

(2) The trustees refusing to be joined as co-plffs., the statement of claim was amended by making the wife a co-pltf. :—Held : she had such an interest as entitled her to sue, the deed being an arrangement between the husband & wife, & the trustees being introduced on her behalf in order to get over the difficulty that the husband & wife could not at law sue each other, so that the trustees were to be considered trustees for the wife, & if they refused to sue she could sue in equity.—*GANDY v. 1890. Several covenantors.—May be joined as co-defendants.]—By their covenant contained in a deed of inspectorship, the creditors executing the deed made themselves separately liable to indemnify the inspectors against any loss they might sustain as such inspectors, the amount of the liability of each creditor to be proportionate to his scheduled debt. An inspector finding that the assets of the business were insufficient to meet the liabilities filed a bill against all the creditors who executed the inspectorship deed, praying contribution & accounts :—Held : (1) the inspectors were trustees for the creditors, & neither the separate liability, nor the separate nature of the defence of each creditor, some creditors having, as appeared from the bill, legal, & others equitable defences, precluded pltf. from commencing one suit against all the covenanting creditors, to obtain accounts & contribution; (2) the amount of pltf.'s liability need not be ascertained before he could file such a bill; (3) the circumstance that pltf. was a party to an existing suit in the same subject-matter instituted & conducted by a creditor, did not necessarily deprive pltf. of his right to institute the present suit.—*SINGLETON v. 1897. ———.]—A co. entered into a contract with a firm carrying on business in the Argentine Republic to indemnify them against a particular claimant, the co. being at liberty to use the name of the firm in defending any action brought by claimant. At the time when this contract was entered into an action in this country had been commenced by claimant. It was defended by the co. in the name of the firm, & in their pleadings the co. stated that E., who was a married woman, had become the surviving partner of the firm. Judgment was given against the firm, but no execution had been issued thereunder, & it appeared that E., who resided in the Argentine Republic, had no property in this country. E. brought an action against the co. to enforce the contract of indemnity.

It was objected by the co. that it had not been shown that E. had any separate estate, & that she would therefore not be liable to claimant:—Held: as it appeared that E. had no property in this country, & as no steps had been taken to enforce the judgment in the Argentine Republic, she was not damnified by the judgment against the firm, & she was not therefore entitled to relief under the contract of indemnity.—EDDOWES v. ARGENTINE LOAN & MERCANTILE AGENCY CO., LTD. (1890), 63 L. T. 364, C. A.

Plea: set-off of an amount averred to be equal to pltf.'s claim; but the plea did not show what amount was due on the bond. Demurrer:—Held: set-off could not be pleaded to a bond conditioned for indemnity; & a plea of set-off to a bond, under 8 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 5, is not good, unless it shows what amount is justly due on the bond: & for both reasons the plea was bad.—*ATTWOOLL v. expense, costs & charges, & I hereby undertake to pay all calls & instalments for & in respect of such shares." Pltf. having afterwards sued deft. for a debt:—Held: deft. might set off the expenses incurred by him as a director as money paid for pltf.'s use.—HUTCHINSON v. SYDNEY (1854), 10 Exch. 438; 3 C. A., by will, devised the mtgd estate to B., & gave the residue of his estate to trustees, on trust to pay his funeral & testamentary expenses & all his debts, & in particular all sums which might be charged upon the property devised to B.:—Held: testator took the debt on himself, & the £2,500 was payable out of his estate so as to exonerate the principal debtors.—*MUSKET v. 1907. — — — — —.]—Fraud—Secret agreement with creditors.—Pltf. becoming insolvent compounded with his creditors, & entered into a deed by which it was agreed that bills should be given to the creditors for 5s. in the pound, which were guaranteed by T. M. The creditors covenanted not to sue while these bills were running, & agreed to discharge pltf. from all claim when the bills for 5s. in the pound were paid. There was also a covenant whereby the creditors covenanted to indemnify pltf. in respect of outstanding bills in their hands at the execution of the deed. H. P. & P. M. were, at the time of the execution of the composition-deed, holders of acceptances of pltf. these bills pltf. was afterwards sued upon, & compelled to pay, with costs. H. P. was sued on the covenant to indemnify pltf., & he pleaded that before the execution of the deed it had been agreed between pltf. & deft. & his partner, P. M. that in addition to the composition of 5s. in the pound pltf. should pay in full a portion of his debt to them, & should pay the composition of 5s. in the pound in cash instead of by bill, & that this agreement was unknown to the other creditors, & that J. P. & P. M. had executed the deed to induce the other creditors to believe that they had received a similar composition with the rest.—Held: the transaction was fraudulent, & pltf. could not recover upon the covenant to indemnify.—*HIGGINS v. 1908. — — — — —.]—Adverse order suffered by consent—No effective defence available.—In an action for the breach of a covenant of indemnity contained in an indenture of Nov. 1842, the declarations set forth an indenture of Jan. 1809, being a settlement made on the marriage of A. with B., by which provision was made for effecting a policy of assurance on the life of B., the proceeds of which were to be subject to the appointment of A. & B., or of the survivor, in favour of a child or children of the marriage; it then set out a settlement of Mar. 1840, made upon the marriage of C., a daughter of A. & B., with D., reciting the death of A. without having exercised the power of appointment, by which deed C., with the consent of D., her then intended husband, assigned all her interest in any fortune to which she might become entitled under the will of her mother to trustees, for the separate use of C., with a power of appointment by C. in favour of children of that marriage. Of these deeds no profit was made. The declaration then set out, with profert, the indenture of Nov. 1842, reciting the death of B., that she had made a will, dated in July, 1840, whereby she appointed the sum of £2,000 to be settled "upon the trusts declared in the indenture of settlement of Mar. 1840, so far as the rules of law & equity would permit, & she had power so to direct & appoint, but if she had not such power, then she willed & appointed that the £2,000 should be paid to C., or as C. should by writing direct & appoint, for her separate use," & further reciting that by another indenture the pltf. became trustees under the indenture of Mar. 1840, that they had received the £2,000 which was property of a personal nature to which C. was beneficially entitled under the will of B., & that the same was in their hands subject to, & charged in equity with, the trusts of the indenture of Mar. 1840, that D. was desirous to obtain from pltf. a loan of the £2,000, & that it was considered that B. had not power to appoint the £2,000 to be settled upon the trusts of the indenture of Mar. 1810, & therefore that, under the alternative appointment made by her, C. had become entitled thereto absolutely for her separate use, but that a question had been made whether it was not subject to the assignment made by the indenture of Mar. 1810, wherefore the said C., with the approbation of D., her husband, had proposed & consented that the £2,000 should be paid to pltf. as trustees, to be held by them upon the trusts therein declared, they being indemnified by C. & D.

The declaration then averred that the £2,000 had been accordingly lent by pltf. to D.; that that sum remained unpaid; that, by an indenture of Sept. 1845, T. S. & others were appointed trustees of the indenture of Mar. 1840, in place of pltf.; that T. S., as such trustee, had commenced a suit in Chancery against pltf. & others to compel them to invest the £2,000 so lent to D.; that D. had notice of the proceedings, & was required to take upon himself the defence thereto, & to indemnify pltf.; that D. declining to take upon himself the defence, pltf. consented to an order whereby they became liable to transfer to the accountant-general a certain amount of stock, & were put to expense:—Held: pltf. were not precluded from recovering upon deft.'s contract of indemnity, by their having consented to a decree before hearing—it not being shown that the decision could be in any degree affected by the stage of the cause in which it was pronounced, or that pltf., by incurring the expense of prosecuting the suit to the hearing, could have made any effectual defence, or have diminished the damage consequent upon an adverse decision.—*NEWBOROUGH (LORD) v. 1909. — — — — —.]—Party giving indemnity—Revocation in course of legal proceedings.—Deft. to an action for the infringement of a patent, not being willing to defend the action, agreed to allow the maker of the machine which was the subject of the action, to do so in his name on being indemnified against the costs. The indemnity as to the costs of the action was given, & deft. signed a retainer to the solr. of the maker of the machine to act as solr. in the action, & in any appeals. An appeal to the House of Lords having been presented by the maker, deft., on the ground that he had refused to give him a further indemnity, purported to withdraw his retainer to his solr., & instructed another solr. to take steps to withdraw the appeal. The costs of the proceedings up to the time of the appeal to the House of Lords had been paid & security lodged for the costs of that appeal:—Held: deft. being fully indemnified against the costs, had no 1910. Mistake—By party giving indemnity—Mistake of law.]—B., under the mistaken notion that he was, as heir-at-law of his father, entitled to shares in a joint-stock co. as realty, executed a deed by which he joined in indemnifying the directors in respect of certain advances made by them. It turned out upon inquiry that the shares were personal estate, & B. filed his bill to be relieved from the deed, & the ct. made a decree in his favour, which decree was upon appeal affirmed.—BROUGHTON v. HUTT (1858), 3 De G. & J. 501; 28 L. J. Ch. 167; 32 L. T. O. S. 306; 5 Jur. N. S. 231; 7 W. R. 106; 44 E. R. 1361, L. JJ.

1911. Renewal of bill of exchange—Without knowledge of indemnifying party.]—A., at the request of B., & on his promise that he would share any loss or liability he might thereby incur, accepted a bill at three months for the accommodation of C. At the maturity of the bill, C. being unable to meet it, it was agreed between the holders & A. & C. without the knowledge of B. that another bill should be drawn for the amount, in substitution of the former acceptance. A. having been obliged to pay the second bill, sued B. on his indemnity :—Held : B.'s liability on his undertaking was not discharged by the renewal of the bill, the parties not standing in the position of creditor & principal & surety.—*WAY v.
